For nothing, not even the danger of great internal disturbances, is more hateful to the Old Guard of Destruction than the idea that they might have to give up a part of their special privileges. Not so long ago, when a brillant man, known for his broadminded liberalism and opposition to the vested interests, was appointed to co-ordinate one of our most important industries, an elderly financier of my acquaintance roared out in complete disgust:

"Anything would have been better than to be obliged to take orders from that fellow."

"Anything?" I asked him in puzzlement.

"Yes, anything," he repeated, "anything, even bankruptcy."

The Sabotagers

Old Guard of Destruction, we must be prepared to see them stop at nothing. Whispering campaign. Banking sabotage. Boring from within. To hear them blaspheme the New Deal at their dinner tables in New York and Newport and then to meet them, hat in hand, waiting for this or that government official and paying lip service to the NRA—is a veritable lesson in the psychology of treachery and an experience not to be forgotten easily.

What the leaders of Greed and Stand Pat-ism are doing now is known to us as "sabotage." Modern as this name sounds, it is no stranger on the pages of our history. We have encountered it more than once in our national life. We have heard its cat calls each time a clarion note was sounded by the White House. Washington heard them. And so did Jackson. And so did Lincoln. And so did Theodore Roosevelt.

In the days of Washington they were known as "Tories." They feasted the English in Philadelphia. They fraternized with the English in New York. They danced while Washington's soldier's were starving and freezing at Valley Forge.

In the days of Lincoln they were known as "Copperheads." Too cowardly to come out in the open and say for whom they were, they were doing exactly what their descendants are doing today. Whispering. Standing on the side-lines with their arms crossed. Grinning, sneering at both Lee and Grant.

"The Slicker-and-Slacker Brigade"

Theodore Roosevelt called them the "Slicker and Slacker Brigade." He knew them all. They were the ones who made it a point to put an end to his career just when the country needed him. They were the ones who snapped at his Square Deal just as they are snapping today at the New Deal. Why? Simply because both the Square Deal and the New Deal stand for an honest deal. And Greed and Stand Pat-ism cannot march to the measure of honesty.

It is fortunate for us, indeed, to be able to look back over the gulf of years and see that neither the Tories nor the Copperheads nor the Slicker-and-Slacker brigade were ever able to stop a Great Leader. Washington defeated them and so did Lincoln. And if Theodore Roosevelt did not live to see the day of their complete defeat it was simply because he happened to live twenty years ahead of his time. The important point is that for each Tory, for each Copperhead, for each Slicker-and-Slacker there were always hundreds of thousands of men and women who followed the Great Leader, who understood him, who supported him.

Democracy is as Democracy does. Where there is no willingness to sacrifice selfish interests for the sake of the State there is no Democracy. Where there is no national discipline there is no hope for even the possibility of a real Democracy. Never in all the one hundred and fifty-seven years of our national life did the American people display such discipline and such willingness to sacrifice their all as they did in the last seven months. Aside from a small group of disgruntled money-changers and defeated politicians, every one was willing to rally around our Leader; the man in the steel plant and the man in the shop, the man in the wheat fields and the man in the breadline. We have begun, begun in the right direction. And we are certain to reach our destination but we must watch the money-changers. We are in the midst of a merciless war, a war on depresion, a war on Greed and Stand Pat-ism, and it is of the utmost importance for us not to be fooled by the various disguises of our enemies. It is amusing for those who know them to hear a crowd of stock-manipulators demand "more respect" for the Constitution. It is amusing for those who know them to see a bunch of gold harders shed large tears over the alleged loss of "American liberties." But it is amusing only for those who know them. There is always a chance that there might be someone, unaware of the real personality of those brand new apostles of Freedom, who would mistake the yells of a disgruntled wolf of Wall Street for the sermon of a Patrick Henry.

"A Modern Miracle"

All of this may sound like harsh talk but the fact is that the Miracle of 1933 needs not the services of glorifiers. Here we are, scarcely seven and a half months after the day when our Leader assumed the responsibility. Two million men have been re-employed in these seven and a half months meaning that two million families will be able to spend this winter, not where they spent the last winter—in a bread-line—but assured of their daily bread. This is not all, however. The most important thing is that we have regained our courage. It was sapped in the years 1920-1928. It was destroyed in the years 1929-1932. And it is nothing short of a miracle that we have been able to regain in seven and a half months what we were losing steadily in the preceding twelve years.

Fine and admirable as it is to sign our pledge in the post office and resolve that we will do our part in bringing about a complete recovery, there is something else which we must promise all of us, something else which we owe to our Leader. To be as courageous as he is. To maintain as great a faith in America as he does. To distinguish between constructive criticism and malicious rumors. To turn a deaf ear to the counsel of Greed and Stand Pat-ism, posing as Defenders of Freedom. And above all, never to forget how perilously near we came to falling over the precipice, by what close shave we escaped from being driven into a revolution by men and the system responsible for the twelve fatal years in American history.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

KNOWN BY ITS FRUITS

By Dr. A. Z. Conrad, Boston, Mass.
(Reprint form The National Voice of July 10, 1930.)

Down and out with the soulless, criminal, conscienceless; hydra-headed monster— the liquor Traffic. It is doomed. There is no disuharge in this war. Let the boozing, hootlegging Conspirators against God and Home and Native Land take notice! We are in this war to win it! We are on the side of Justice, Sanity, Sohriety, Honor, Economic, Progress Home Happiness, Health and Heroism. We know it. Mr. "Wet," you are lined up with a lawhreaking crowd of disreputahles, whether you like it or not. You have the approbation of Thugs, Gangsters, Brewers, Traffickers in Human Life, Wreckers of True Liberty, Economic Slavery, Harlots, Gamblers and Morons, and all the disreputahle elements of the modern world. Do you like your company?

Mr. "Wet," are you proud of such associations? By their fruits ye shall know them—Poverty, Disease, Woe, Disappointment, Withered Wreaths, Defeat, Enslavement — This is what the tree of "Federal Control," "State Option" and any other method than Prohihition always has prodaced. Prohihition has given a Savings Bank Account to hundreds of thousands, given proper vitalizing food to the children who would have been victimized hy that debaunching robher, the Liquor Traffic. Prohihition has made communities that were formerly breeding places of vice and crime, respectable and progressive. It is saving 200,000 lives a year. It is helping to make the highways safe for everyhody. It has abolished Drunken Sundays and Workless Mondays. It has reduced accidents from machinery fifty per cent. It has made public drinkiag contemptihle. It bas written a hundred hillion insurance; it has douhled milk consumption.

"Try education." We did for a hundred years. Prohihition is the result. Why does not the "Wet Press," now vociferously cheering education, practice what it preaches aad educate through its own columns? No, it is all camouflage and bunk. The only people really educating the public on the evils of the nefarious, God-hating, liquor traffic are the Prohibitionists. Education without law is utterly iaeffective in a world where wanton selfishness and unbridied passion are so rife.

Of course education. Tell the world the truth about the capacious maw and the insatiable appetite of the liquor traffic and traffickers in childbood, youth and violated womanhood.

Astronomers' Work Must Be Essence of Accuracy

Modera astronomical work involve a great amount of detail in observation, measurement, and computation. For exnmple in ohtaining the velocity in the line of sight of 523 of the hottest and most massive stars in the sky 2,679 spectra were made with the 72 inch telescope nt the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory of the Department of the Interior at Victoria, B. C., requiriag the time of an observer at night for over 2,000 hours. In the mensuremeat of these spectra by means of a measuring microscope the spectral lines were hrought into coincideace with the spider thread in the microscope—an operation requiring great care and accuracy—at least 250,000 times. After the spectra were measnred these measurements had to be transformed into velocities requiring about half as much time agnin and finally all the velocities discussed, an operation still ia process. Consequently it does aot seem surprising to learn that this one piece of work occupied practically the entire time of two astronomers for over six yeara. However, this lavestigation was very profitahle as it resulted in advances of considerable importaace in our knowledge of the constitution and motions of the galaxy.

Only President Impeached

The only President ever impeached hy the house of represeatatives aad tried by the senate was Andrew Johason. To uaderstaad why this was done (oa a strictly partisan vote ia the house) it is necessary to study his quarrels with the Republican majority in congress over his reconstruction policy, his veto of the Civil Rights bill, his suspeasion of the secretary of war etc.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

(By H. G. Teigan)

Tha Lahor Party (arbeiderpartiet) won a aweeping victory in the elections in Norway on Tuesday of last week. Oat of a total membership of 150 in parliament (Storting) the lahor party elected 70 members to 29 for the conservatives, 25 for the liberals and 23 for the agrarians.

The laborites have gained 20 seats over their previous representation, the aame being won at the expense of the other parties as follows: 15 from the conservatives, 9 from the liberals and 2 from the agrarians.

Minnesota folks have an interest in the election on the other side of the Atlantic. The population of Minnesota is largely made up of those who have either immigrated from the conntries of Europe or are descendents of such immigrant. The political manifestations of the working people of Scandinavia and Germany are of special interest, aince these nationalities are more atrongly represented in Minnesota than are any others.

Norwegian Lahor Radical

It may seem like somthing of a shock to consevative. Norwegians in Minnesota to learn that the labor party of old Norway is the most radical of all kindred parties in Europe with the exception, of course, of tha Communist party of Russia. Douhtless there are those persons of Norwegian origin in this aad other states of the Northwest who will he surprised when they learn that progressiveism has reached a much more advanced stage in the land of their reached here.
forehears then they themselves have

As evidence of the redicalism of ths Norwegian laborites, it is only necessary to call to mind that six years ago King Haakon asked the leader of the party to organize a mincatry to condoct Norway's governmental affairs. In the elections that year approximately 60 memhers of the lahor party were elected to parliament. This made the laborites the strongcat group in the chamber. It was with much reluctance the the King proffered responsihility for organizing the govarnment to the leader of lshor forces.

Branting, Stauning Conservative

This saemes stranga to many folks not familiar with tha Norwegian laor party's program and record. They knew that both Denmark and Sweden had premiers and cabinets of the socialist variety. Branting and Stauning, veternn socialists, had risen from the role of soapboxers to that of premiers in Sweden and Denmark, respectively. And neither of the two countries had gone to the dogs nor had the Socialist governments proceeded to ruthlessly aholish the captalist ordar.

But the situation was different in Norway. The laborites hluntly stated even stated even after election, that if they were to assume charge of administration in the government it must be with the distinct understanding that they would proceed as best they could to set up a socialist state, similar to tbat in Soviet Russia.

Lasted Two Weeks

Thus, the lahor government of Norway, establishment in January, 1928, lasting just two weeks. The refusal of the labor partie's leaders to ask the colaboration of tbe old political parties in the governmental set-up, as had heen done in England, Sweden, Deamark and Germany, caused the capitist parties to unite in over-throwing the lahor government.

What will happen how is debatahle. Prime Minister Johan Mowinckel, the present head of the Norwegian government stated following the election last week that he would not resign ualess defeated on a vote of confidence. In view of the fact that all of the old political parties have only a small majority when comhining their parliamentary forces, it will hecome difficult for Mr. Mowinckel to carry on after parliament assemhles next January.

Norsemen Here Conservatives

To the Norwegians of Minnesota who may as yet ha of the opinion that Governor Floyd B. Olson's advocacy of "socialization of the key industries" is a radical step, I would merely suggest that they contemplate the program of the Norwegian labor party which in actual fact provides for the complete socialization of industry, including agriculture.

The Farmer-Lahorites of Minnesota are decidely conservativa in comparison with the Norwegian labor party. Under the F-L plan when realized, husiness will continne to be carried on hy private interests mnch as it now is except that private monopoly will have to give way to tha puhlic monopoly.

Judge J. Olson Hears Diesel Affair Aired

gested by Mr. Legvold and an electrical engineer, Mr. Ostrander. Testimony revealed the fact that the specifications were wide open so that any manufacturor could bid without being penalized regardless of what type of engine they might be manufacturing. The manner in which Mr. Pederson was able to answer questions of earnings, disbursements and other matters of accountancy was a revelation to a great many listeners who had been led to believe that the books of the city has been slovenly attended by many false rumors and allegations long-drawn verbal arguments that that have been rampant during the have raged among the citizens. Pederson testified to an increase in the use of current in the city in the last two years as also did Mr. Legvold. The latter also stated it as his belief that another unit such as proposed should be added to the plant at this time. "It is impossible to take care of the Mac engine properly when it must be in continual use," he said.

Both Mr. Berve and President of the council, Chris Porter testified to having gone thru the specifications thoroughly to make sure that they would be fair to all bidders. H. M. Anderson on the stand testified to the effect that Mayor Tungseth had collahorated with him in fixing tentative annusl payment nmounts in such sums as would leave the city free to meet other obligations from the earnings of the plant as well as payments on the proposed unit.

The court was very lenient with both sides of the controversy, allowing any testimony that might have a bearing on the case to be admitted. In closing the hearing he requested the attorneys for both sides to file findings of facts in conjunction with their briefs in order that by laying aside those facts on which both sides agree he could the sooner render his verdict. The attorneys bave 20 days in which to file their briefs after which the court will take the case nnder consideration. It is expected that at least 30 days will elapse before a decision is handed down.

W. P. A. Hears Political Issues Discussed Monday

we have only half a plant, he said.

Harry Lnnd, candidate for alderman from the fourth ward stated that his firm has worked under wage scale for several years and that it is only proper way in which to handle public work. Haakon Grendahl, also candidate for alderman from the fourth ward, speaking briefly stated as his opinion that men should be paid as mnch as possible, continuing he declared himself opposed to the purchace of another diesel engine at tbie time.

Mr. Aalbn spoke on the need for bnying another diesel unit for the local power plant and showed facts and figures prepared on large charts and graphs to substantiate his contention. The argument that the city has ample power at this time is fallacious he contended and ehowed a chart of nine average American cities and the horsepower per capita availabla in those cities. According to his figures the city of Thief River Falls has only .18 H. P. per person while other municipal plants have from .3 to 1.3 H. P. per person. Twa of Mr. Aalbu's charts with ex. Two of Mr. Aalbu's charts with explanitory notes and a letter disproving that the Mayor's engineer, Mr. Viebahn hailed from Hibbing Minnesota as he contended is reprodnced on page six.

Turkey Market Opens

Turkey growers in the county who find thin and run down birds in their flocks at this tims, with a few dying from time to time ehould be certain tbey are not infected with worms, county agent, R. M. Donglase said yesterday .

Mr. Donglass says that he has gone over a number of flocks in the county where they have been losing a considerable nnmber of birds and that he has found in all cases that turkeys have been heavily infested with tapeworms. In most cases Mr. Douglass says the birds have not been confined on clean ground cansing them to become infested and eickly.

Anyone baving birds that are thin and run down nnd are not gaining should open them up and look for worms, says Mr. Douglass. This can be done, he states, by opening the bird, straightening ont tbe intestines and cuting it lengthwise with a knife or scissors the complete length of the intestinee. If there are worms they can be seen with the naked eye and in many cases that will be found to be the trouble with them, Mr. Douglasa said.

Thief River Falls' Prowlers were invicible last Friday when thsy smashed out a 6 to 0 victory over a powerful Bemidji eleven on the rough and icy local field. Chommie scored the only touchdown as the Prowlers constantly threatened the Lumberjsck goal, twice being in the very edge of the Bemidji line only to try for field goals and fail.

This game completed the Prowler football season and was a fine display of co-operation and football. "It is the best football I have seen since I came up here," Coach Dooley said.

Coach Dooley is this week picking his squsd for the coming basketball season. By watching the various classes work-out he is choosing men who appear to be good prospects to round out the materisl left from last years team.

Glancing over the prospective players for this year we would not be surprised if some of the lettermen from last year will have to work plenty hard to hold permenant berths on the Prowlers squad this year.

Five men, Nickelson, Dahl, W. Kielty, Battelson and Swanson remain from last years team-squad. These men all showed up well last year and if the material coming up is as strong as we believe, the Prowlers wil cause trouble for not only the district teams, but in regional competition as well.

Seven teams have signed up for a bowling league this season, that will be composed of eight or ten teams and play a regular schedule. The Jung's Bakery, Montgomery Ward, Red Crown, Thief River Grocery and Bratrud's Clinic have signed np and bowlers are getting in shape for the pin-busting .

COUNTY BOARD EXTENDS LIENS

Farmers Pay Only Interest For Five years On Ditch Taxes

Ditch liens principal payments on judicaial ditches 30 and 44 and county ditches 68 and 70 were extended five years by the County Board at the meeting Tuesday. The heavy premiums on these ditches running over a period of years constituted a heavy burden for many farmers and the Board believed that an extention would greatly aid those farmers in trouble. Interest will be the only payment required of farmers for five years, although if a farmer can afford to and wants to pay his ditch tax, he can do so through the county auditors office. This extention will mean a decrease of from $40 to $100 per quarter on these ditches, County Auditor H. L. Fowler stated.

Paul Roy, H. W. Kinghorn were appointed a committee to check up and find out whether or not Pennington can come under the federal relief program for poor. Previous attempts have been made to obtain this aid but the county has allways been informed that it is too well fixed financially to receive aid, Fowler stated.

Goupten Is Sentenced 1 to 5 Yrs. In Stillwater

George Goupten, who was confined to a local hospital suffering from gunshot wounds sustained in a store robbery at Convik September 20 and who was later turned over to authorities at Bagley, last week was sentenced to a term of from one to five years in Stillwater by Judge Graham Torrance of Bemidji.

Goupten was shot by James Clemeson, night watchman at Convik, and escaped with his companion to this city where he entered the hospital in serious condition, saying that he had been held up and shot in a box car here on the C. N. tracks. However later information led to his arrest in connection with the Convik robbery and his conviction last week.

Although Coupten is still convalescencing from wounds in the abdomen it is expected he will be in condition to be taken to Stillwater this week.

H. G. Creel, Editor Of The Farmer-Labor Leader, Spoke At S. Of N. Hall Thursday

H. C. Creel, Editor of the Farmer-Labor Leader spoke at the Sons of Norway hall here last Thursday evening under the auspices of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Associaclub

Speaking on lobbies and lobbying, Mr. Creel said there are two kinds of lobbying. The first is the political lobbying practiced by politicians and various groups who go and buttonhole the members of the legislature and talk their particular theories or desires to them trying to induce them to vote as they wish. The other method is the economic lobbying and is the most vicious, said Mr. Creel, it consists of putting pressure on a member by foul means if necessary to force him to vote as the lobbyist desires. Mr. Creel told various instances of this kind of lobbying and how it is worked.

Speaking on the aims and purposes of the Farmer-Labor association he said, "We aim to establish a system of public ownership and operation of monopolized industries."

"We would so revamp the economic system that it will bring the greatest good to the greatest number."

"There is only two sides to every issue," Mr. Creel continued, "that is the right and the wrong side. There is no such a thing as being half right and half wrong. It is either for the greatest good of the greatest number and therefore right or it benefits a small number at the expense of the many and then its wrong."

Mrs. J. H. McClellan returned Monday from Minneapolis and Detroit Lakes where she has been visiting with redatives.

Marcus Evenson spent the woek end in this city visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Evenson.

Box Cars Being Prepared to House Relief Families

Five box cars will be moved this week to locations where they can be reconditioned to accomodate destitute families this winter, and ten more are waiting in the Soo Line yards to be stripped of the iron before being moved, county overseer of the poor, Ray Pope announced last night.

Three of these cars are being located near the county Poorhouse, Mr. Pope said, and the rest have not been definitly placed as yet. These cars will be rebuilt and doors and windows will be installed to make them livable, he said.

The cars are being moved by county equipment and with the help of the unemployed receiving relief from the city and county.

Mr. Douglass expects to have all contracts mailed to Washington by November 5, or soon thereafter. It is necessary that 95 per cent of the contracts be signed by the owners of the land besides the applicant for the plan before any contracts from a county can be sent to Washington.

NO FREE DRIVERS LICENCES ISSUED

Highway Depaltment Adopts Policy of Issuing Only Paid Licences

No free driver's licenses will be issued by the Highway department at least until January 1, according to an announcement sent Adolph Ecklund, clerk of district court.

The driver's license law, which goes into effect March 1, 1934, provides that when the head of a family obtains a license, and pays the regular fee, members of his household "may be issued" licenses without additional fees. However, owing to a shortage of working funds, the Highway department has adopted a policy of issuing only paid licenses at least during November and December.

During the past week the driver's license division of the Highway department began sending out application blanks to clerks of court in all counties, says a department bulletin. Blanks should be in the hands of every district court clerk by November 10, the bulletin announced. Residents of each county are expected to obtain their application blanks from their local court clerk. The cost will be 35 cents, of which 25 cents goes to pay for the administration of the law, and 10cents pays the clerk's expenses.

Home Loan Appraisers Inspect Property Here

Reviewing appraisers, M. J. Waldron and R. Faricy of St. Paul, were in this city yesterday apprsising ten properties where applications had been made for loans under the Home Loan Corporation. Local appraiser C. Eshelby accompanied them during the inspections.

Appraisement of properties with approved applications will now be made by Mr. Eshelby before they are forwarded to the St. Paul office for final action. A number of local residents have made applications for loans from the Corporation but have not yet received definite information on the status of their application.

Information has been given Mr. Eshelby that only "distress loans" are being made now. Only home owners who ars in immediate danger of loosing their homes and where the mortgagee is willing to accept home loan bonds will receive loans at this time, the appraisers said. No cash loans are made except for the payment of taxes.

University Of Minnesota Will School Its Own Jobless Youth, Says President L. Coffman

President Coffman recently outlined the University's part in the program for educational relief of state youth "if and when" Governor Olson's application for federal funds is approved in Washington.

Stressing that the project would not be handled through the University, Coffman explained that only former students and those now in residence would fall under the jurisdiction of the University.

Can't Help All

"It is impossible for us to accommodate all the unemployed youths in the state," Dr. Coffman pointed out. "What we will do if federal aid is forthcoming, is to confine help to those students now in collega but unable to return next quarter because of financial trouble. A second group, composed of students in residence during the past two years who are now out of school because of reduced finances, will also fall under this heading."

Under the agreement approved by the Board of Regents, each student will receive $15 a month for housing and food.

The University will have no part in selecting applicants. This duty will rest with Dr. Harold Benjamin, assistant dean of the college of Education and executive director of the Minnesota Relief for Unemployed youth. Dr. Benjamin will be assisted by the state board of control.

Asks for Applications

Dr. Benjamin requested that all applications for aid be forwarded to his office.

Exemption from tutition will be granted only with the understanding that students pay the fee sometime in the future, Dr. Coffman asserted in explaining the project. Credits will be withheld until the complete tuition is paid.

"A faculty committee has assured the administration that funds will be available for the purchase of books and supplies." he continued. "To complete the set-up, we have several committees making an intensive survey of cooperative living."

Staff to Stay Unchanged

No increase in the University teaching staff is contemplated because of the possible increase in University enrollment. It is expected that the influx of students will be absorbed by the present faculty without difficulty.

The University and state colleges are cooperating in the project.

The University is in receipt of a lettre from Dr. Harold Benjamin, Director, Education of unemployed youth, requesting it to secure certain information from students enrolled within University within the last two years who are not now in the college for lack of funds. This information should be sent directly to Dr. Benjamin, State Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota. It is Dr. Benjamin's hope that he may also provide opportunity for college training for some such students, but this letter should not be interpeted as meaning that he is in a position at the present time to make such a provision. This information is desired for residents of Minnesota only.

Those intrested in the matter, should send the following information to Dr. Benjamin.

1,—Name

2,— present location.

3,— Condition of employment or unemployment. This statement should be made very definite. It should show with great clarity just why the student is not in collage; how much money, if any, he has or is able to get; and what he is doing at the present time.

4,— Number of years that the student has been at the University.

5,— Classification when last at college (freshman, sophomore, etc.)

6,— Scholastic record.

Mayor Tungseth Reelected With Overwhelming Vote

Record High Vote is cast After Two Weeks of Hectic Campaigning

ENTIRE PROGRESSIVE COUNCIL IS DEFEATED

Independent Candidates Make Small Showing in Total Vote

What was doped to be a nip and tuck battle between the Citizens' League and the Progressive Voters League turned out to be a landslide in favor of the Citizens' League candidates in the city election Tuesday. Every Progressive endorsed candidatt with the exception of Mrs. Thora Nelson running for City Treasurer unopposed, was defeated. Mayor Tungseth, the "stormy petrel" of the campaign, elected two years ago by the Progressives and now repudiated by them, was reelected with a four to one vote over the veteran Lars Backe, endorsed by the Progressives to oppose him. O. C. Paulson, candidate for alderman-at-large and W. H. Mulry, candidate for alderman from the third ward, were the only progressive candidates to even come close.

The results of the election now insures a complete new set-up in the city council at the first of the year. Of those elected Tuesday Carl Christofferson is the only man who has been a member of the city's law making body before.

The campaign closed with a whirlwind finish on Monday evening with the circulation by the Citizens' League of an eleventh hour questionaire late in the afternoon, which was answered by the Progressives with an extra edition of the Forum, that came off the press at about nine o'clock and was distributed to every home in the city. At the same time the Mayor, E. L. Tungseth, and several other candidates of the Citizens' League and Paul A. Harris, candidate for alderman from the brst ward, endorsed by the Progressives and Chas Hellquist a member of the Progressive group, tangled in verbal combat at a meeting of the Workmens' Protective Association in the county court rooms. Mr. Harris asked the mayor what was meant by the last paragraph of the Citizens' League platform wherein they state, "Assisting business institutions to retain home trade, and attract, rather than drive dollars out of the city." Mr. Harris desired to know whether that meant that they stand for wide-open town. And asked if there is any other money than booze money being driven out of town. The mayor who had just previously admitted that he stood on the Citizens' League platform disclaimed any knowledge of that particular paragraph, saying he had not written it.

TOUHY FACES HIS HARDEST FIGHT

U. S. Proposes to Send Gangster Away for Life in St. Paul Kidnaping.

St. Paul—Roger Touhy, Chicago gang leader, faces a fight as dangerous as any of the bloody battles of the underworld. He has come face to face with the leader of the federal drive on kidnapers who will attempt to send him away for life for the kidnaping of William Hamm, Jr. In his closely guarded cell in the Ramsey county jail, the dark-haired gang leader is confident, just as he was when he aspired to control of Al Capone's district in Chicago. With alibis he hopes to prove to the satisfaction of a federal jury of 12 that he never heard of Hamm, and was far away when the multimillionaire St. Paul brewer was snatched within a short distance of his business office. On alibis, Touhy's three henchmen, "Gloomy Gus" Schaefer, Willie Sharkey and Edward (Father) McFadden, are also placing hopes of winning their freedom. They may begin to realize that federal authorities were not making idle statements last July when they declared that they "had plenty of identification" to convict the gang members. For through witnesses, whose names are being kept secret, the government will attempt to prove that Touhy was actually in St. Paul on Thursday, June 15, when Hamm was kidnaped and held for $100,000 ransom. His trial is attracting national attention. Joseph Keenan, who played a major part in the conviction of George Kelly and Harvey Bailey in the Urschel abduction in Oklahoma, is the prosecutor.

Britain to Pay Small Amount on Debt

Washington—A small payment by Great Britain as a token that she owes the United States around $4,000,000,000 in war debts and acceptance in the same spirit by the Roosevelt administration seemed likely to be the only results of negotiations just concluded. The terms of the payment on account probably will be the same as Great Britain made on June 15, when she paid around $10,000,000.

Spelling lists have already been forwarded to the county superintendents in thirteen northwestern Minnesota counties as follows:-Becker, Clay, Clearwater, Kittson, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Otter Tail, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, Roseau and Wilkin. It is expected that delegates will be sent from each of these counties to participate in the final contest.

Pupils who have already won first place in any Winter Shows spelling contest or who have participated in a state spelling contest are not eligible.

Suitable cash prizes will be awarder winners. A silver trophy together with a championship banner will be presented to the county scoring the highest in the entire contest. The banner becomes the permanent possession of the school from which the winner came, while the trophy will remain in the office of the county superintendent during the year.

HIGHWAY PATROL TO ENFORCE FLARE LAW

Rigid enforcement of the so-called "flare law" will begin December 4, as a means of assuring greater safety on state highways, according to an announcement by John P. Arnoldy, chief the the State Highway Patrol. The law means that all trucks operated on state highways must carry flares and red flags for use in case of stalling or accident, much as railpectedly delayed. roads set signals behind trains unex-

The law, originally enacted in 1925 and revised in 1933, requires, under Order No. 1 of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, that each truck operator "shall secure and carry as part of his equipment at all times three approved and usable flares and three red flags, the latter to be approximately 24 by 24 inches, the flares to be capable of burning not less than eight hours and to be used in case of accident at night, one to be placed not less than 75 feet in each direction from the accident, and one to be placed on the highway at the scene of the accident between the vehicles involved and the center line of the highway. The flags are to be used for the same purpose in daylight hours."

Mr. Arnoldy said these precautions will prevent cars and trucks from crashing into wrecks or trucks delayed and standing on the highways. He places so much importance on the use of flares that all vehicles of the highway patrol will carry them, to be used when patrolmen lend services to accident victims at night.

Starkey Named On Ind. Com'n

Frank Starkey, veteran Farmer-Labor legislator of St. Paul and Secretary of the State Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor association, was apointed to the State Industrial Commission by Governor Olson last week. Mr. Starkey will fill the unexpired term of C. R. Carlgren, who has been appointed to the State Board of Control.

Mr. Starkey was elected to the House of Representatives from the 38th Legislative District, St. Paul, in 1922 and was reelected each time until last fall when he was nosed out by a narow margin by M. F. Ettel Jr. He served as chief clerk of the House during the 1933 session.

Mr. Starkey is the author of a great many of the liberal labor laws now on the statute books of the state and was always alligned with the progressive forces in the legislature. He assisted in the organization of the Milk Wagon Driver's Union of St. Paul in 1916 and has been the business agent of that organization ever since. He has been secretary of the Farmer-Labor association since 1925. He is also past president of the St. Paul Trades and Labor asembly.

Mr. Starkey tendered his resignation as Secretary of the Farmer-Labor association to the Executive Council on Monday to take up his new duties on the Industrial Commission.

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE PLEADS FOR MILITANT AMERICAN FARM ORGANIZATIONS AT MT. HOREB

"It is my firm conviction that unless the farmers of America join some militant farm organization they cannot hope for economic justice in this country," declared Senator Robert LaFollette before an audience of 5,000 people at the Mt. Horeb fall frolic Friday evening.

Citing the world war as the great factor in bringing about the present economic dislocation, Sen. LaFollette also declared that the present depression was brought on largely by governmental action and having brought it on it is the duty of government to do everything possible to remedy it.

"When the federal reserve board met Aug. 26, 1920, and decided upon a policy of deflation and that it would begin with the farmer, it sent word to all federal reserve banks to deflate all farm credits 50 per cent.

Deflates Farmers

"The farmers having borrowed to the limit in response to the government's appeal for increased production and the purchase of power machinery were thus compelled to dump their produce on a falling market in order to meet their obligations. This produced a panic which has lasted to the present time. Secretary Wallace of the Harding cabinet, father of the present Secretary Wallace, declared that this action of the federal reserve board cost the farmers 15 billion dollars.

"On top of this came the Esch-Cummins law which increased freight rates 35 per cent, which my father fought so hard when he should have been in the hospital for an operation. This law hit the farmer hardest of all, for the farmer is the only producer who cannot add the freight to what he sells."

Outlines Program

Sen. LaFollette outlined his own relief program and the measures for which the Progressives in congress had fought to no avail. He declared he had no apologies to make for supporting Pres. Roosevelt as against Herbert Hoover, for he held the welfare of the people above any party or individual triumph.

He declared that the NRA program had already reached the danger point; that the purchasing power of the people was not keeping pace with rising prices.

He warned that many of the big industries of the country are passively opposing the program and continuing the policy of deflation. There will be a limit to human patience in this, he declared, for he believed the American people are united as never before to save their farms and homes and if the big interests do not cooperate in this program it will be followed by one so drastic that the present one will appear like a pious legislative enactment.

TELLS FARMERS ABOUT BETTER HORSE HITCHES

Farmers who would like to put in next spring's crop in shorter time and with less wear and tear on the horses, may obtain right now, a copy of the new Minnesota special bulletin 162, "Hitching Horses for Better Implement Operation." This fall and winter would be a good time for the farmer to study this bulletin and then prepare some of the eveners and hitches he will need next spring.

J. B. Torrence, agricultural engineering division, and A. L. Harvey, animal husbandry division, University Farm have written this bulletin in "plain English" and put in drawings of the various hitches recommended for teams of from two to eight horses on different types of farm machinery.

Better use of farm power is important says the bulletin, because 60 per cent of the cost of producing agricultural products goes for power and labor. Using more horses per man reduces labor costs while correct hitching increases the work each horse can do. It also allows the implement to operate more satisfactorily and with less strain and wear.

Special bulletin 162 may be obtained from a county agent or high school agriculture teacher, or by writing the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul.

NO PRODUCERS CORN OR HOG TAX TO BE LEVIED UNDER AAA

Producers of corn and hogs will not have to pay any special taxes on account of the corn-hog reduction plan which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is about to offer farmers, says Dr. Andrew Boss, University Farm in charge of the production control campaign in Minnesota.

The money to be paid to cooperating farmers will be raised from processing taxes levied on meat packers and others who make manufactured products from corn or hogs. Eventually, it is anticipated, the money will come from consumers, as the processors will add the amount of the taxes to the selling price of their products. Reports circulating in some sections of the state that the new plan will impose additional taxes on producers are groundless, Dr. Boss emphasizes.

For the acreage of corn taken out of production under their agreements, farmers will receive rental payments amounting to 30 cents for each bushel of corn the land would produce at average yields. The government expects each farmer to cut his corn acreage 20 per cent, and will offer a special arrangement by which farmers may reduce their acreage even further and receive payments. The Internal Revenue Bureau will collect from commercial processors of corn a tax of 28 cents a bushel to meet ajustment payments to farmers.

A 25 per cent reduction will be asked in number of litters farrowed and number of hogs sold. In return, each producer will be paid a bonus of $5 a head on 75 per cent of the average number of hogs he raised during the base period. These payments will be made in installments as follows: $2 per head on acceptance of contract; $1 on Sept. 1, 1934, and the remaining $2 on Feb. 1, 1935. the last two payments will be made only if the producer lives up to his contract. Moreover, if he does not, he obliged to return the initial payment.

The hog benefit fund will come from a processing tax levied on packing plants. This tax will begin at 50 cents a head, Nov. 5th and gradually increase to a maximum of $2 a head by Feb. 1st.

The expectation is, says Dr. Boss, that the processors will add the cost of the taxes to the prices of corn and hog products which means that, in the long run, consumers will pay for the adjustment program. It will not entail any tax upon producers, as such.

TULERAMIA GAINS IN RABBITS, NO INCREASE IN GAME BIRDS

Intensive study of the tuleramia situation in wild life in the state by Dr. R. G. Green of the state university department of bacteriology indicates that the dread disease is definitely on the increase in cottontail rabbits and to date shows little or no indication of being prevalent with ruffed grouse, commonly known as native partridge. During the past month a wild life disease investigation has been carried on by the university department in conjunction with the Minnesota Department of Conservation and the United States Bureau of Biological Survey.

The rabbit situation is so serious that Dr. Green warns against the shooting of these mammals until later in the season. At the present time the study shows that there is considerable danger of infection from rabbits.

In regards to native partridge there is no definite abnormal occurrence of disease although several reports came in of sick and dead birds being seen.

"The only disease known in grouse which might infect humans is tuleromia," Dr. Green states. "Our investigations have not yet demonstrated that tuleramia is more prevalent in grouse this year than in previous years," he continued. Dr. Green warns of the taking of lazy appearing birds who may be sick and should not be used for food.

W. D. Stewart, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, urges hunters to coperate in the study of wild life disease with its perodic destruction to game by delivering to local game wardens or sending into the division all birds which appear to be sick or in poor condition.

Corn Processing Tax Reduced to 5c.

Washington—Secretary Wallace cut the processing tax on field corn which became effective to 5 cents a bushel until December 1, when it would be put at 20 cents a bushel. This tax originally had been set at 28 cents. Wallace explained that the initial tax rate was reduced as a result of evidence produced at a public hearing here recently.

RATE REDUCTION INCREASED BUSINESS GREAT NOR. FINDS

The family fliver got a bad jolt when the Northwestern railways cut their coach and tourists sleeper fare to 2 cents a mile. Mr. and Mrs. John Public are beginning to ride the trains again. Many of the depots at train time look something more like old times.

This, at least, is the report of W. E. Baker, Great Nothern agent here. The rate slash is nearly one-half from 3.6 cents per mile to 2, went into effect August first. The Great Northern took the lead in adopting the lowest coach and sleeper car fare ever put into effect on a system-wide basis. It did it with the expectation of getting some of its passenger business back, and Mr. Baker said that officials in St. Paul are more than pleased with the immediate response to this "New Deal" policy.

"It simply narrows down to this," said Mr. Baker, "When mama and papa start out to visit the in-laws, they sit down and figure up how much the oil and gas and tires are going to cost, and then compare it with tho railway fares at 2-cents a mile per person. The Iron Horse gets an even break on this basis.'

The Great Northern also had its eye on the long-haul bus competition when it made the 2-cent fare apply to tourist sleeping cars. The traveler can sleep while he rides for only the extra charge for the berth.

VOX POPULI SPOKE— AND HOW!

We shall not try to explain the defeat of the Progressive ticket in the city elections Tuesday. Neither have we any apologies nor alibis to offer for it Vox Populi has spoken and we will ride along with him now as in the past. And strange as it may seem to those who took a political licking two years ago and now returned us the compliment so handsomely, we have lost none of our faith in democratic government and American institutions either. We weathered Harding, Coolidge and the "Forgotten Man" and we know that the incoming council isn't by any stretch of the imagination as bad as that.

We all make mistakes, individually as well as collectively. The human propensity for error is a frailty to which we must become reconciled. Probably the biggest mistake that the council has made is an overestimation of public grasp of technical affairs. While we are disappointed with the results of the election,(Who ever relished defeat?) we nevertheless hope that the new council and the mayor will be able to work together for the best interests of the city. After all, that is the end that we are all striving for, much as we may disagree over the methods to be employed to attain that goal.

We do not envy the new council their task of the next two years. It is a thankless job at the best, and in the heat of the campaign, it seems to us that they have made promises which they will find difficult to fulfill even if they had not by their bitter criticism of the present council led the voters to believe that the council should be the all-wise, all-knowing, all desire fulfilling power.

They do not lack ability, they do not lack intelligence. We think they may lack the proper economic perspective. But, even possessing that, their best efforts will probably receive scant approbation. For Vox Populi is fickle.

Well, anyway, we won in the New York election.

And then on the other hand, probably we would all be better off if we could pursuade "King 'Leer' of Kratka" to come in to Thief River Falls and run the city for us.

LOCAL NEWS ITEM

One of our prominent citizens has entered the taxi business. He started Tuesday with one car and one driver, but expects to expand if elections come often enough to warrant it.

From Minneapolis comes the report that the stricking Holiday farmers brought in truck loads of butter, cream, chickens, turnips, potatoes, carrots and other farm produce to the upholstering workers on strike there and pledged them enough food to keep them until they win their strike. Wazzamatter with those farmers anyway, don't they know that the farmers and the workers have nothing in common?

THE NRA AND THE TARIFF

News dispatches from Wachington tell of consultations being held for the purpose of working out higher tariff schedules in order to protect the higher wages and shorter hours invoked under the NRA program. Which is just something more for the administration to worry about.

Complaint is being lodged by the big industries, that goods imported from foreign countries is making a competition which we can not stand up against with the additional manufacturing costs and the processing tax which are being levied under the Agricultural Adjustment Acts, added to cost of production. This is evidently something that the administration had not taken into consideration when the relief acts were passed, and knocks the hopes of tariff adjustments that will regain us our foreign markets into the proverbial cocked hat.

It will be interesting as well as instructive to see just dilemma the old "Vicious Circle" will put us in next. It is only a pity that so many inocent people must suffer while we "live and learn."

TAXLESS CITY PAYS EXPENSES WITH PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

—o—

Chanute Kan., Pays All Costs of Local Government with Profits Of Water and Light Plant

—o—

The story of Chanute, Kan., the taxless city of 10,000, is told again, this time by Ben James, writing in The Country Home.

Public ownership is the key to the city's fame—a fame which has spread to other continents. The city of Chanute owns its own water, gas and electric plants.

This is the way James tells the story:

Like Arabian Nights

"Suppose a turbaned story-teller strayed from Bagdad to squat on your lawn this evening and gave you, in return for a cup of tea and a puff at your pipe, rare tales of fantastic places.

"And suppose he said: 'Once upon a time there was a bustling, thriving town with 10,000 men and women and boys and girls working and playing within its limits. It looked like the best town of that size look. There were miles of pavement beneath tree-canopied streets, clusters of white lights along its business thoroughfare, rows of well-kept shops and factories blowing smoke from tall chimneys into clear, blue sky.

"But there was something very strange about this little city. No other city of its size or larger in the whole country was like it. For this town had no municipal taxes. it was a tax-free town."

"You'd certainly give him his cup of tea and puff of smoke and perhaps a few coins. 'Such a Utopian tale is worth the pay.'

"But you would not be paying him for a fairy tale. There is such a town. You can find it in southeastern Kansas. Its name is Chanute.

Pays All City Expenses.

"In Chanute the revenue derived from city-owned utilities, water, gas and electricity, pays all the costs of operating the municipality of the town. This does not include the county and state taxes with which the schools are supported. But it covers all aspects of city government services.

'Our whole set-up has its roots right in the waterworks" Mayor H. W. Loy explained.

"Starting here we have built up a system that has made it possible for Chanute citizens to be exempt from paying any municipal taxes for the last three years—1931, 1932, and 1933.

"This set-up wasn't built in a day. Nor was it contrived as a depression measure. We have been able to have three tax-free years just at a time when such a relief is most welcome, because of the normal growth of municipally owned public utilities started soundly many years ago.

Tells of Origin

"Municipal ownership began in 1894, when the city, after much haggling and indecision, erected a water plant at the cost of $44,000. Today the water plant and distributing system represents an investment of $558,423, with a bonded debt outstanding of $139,861. This is being retired at the rate of $16,000 a year from the earnings of the plant.

"By 1899 five years of municipal ownership of the water plant had convinced the town that it could handle its own utilities to the advantage of its citizens.

"So you see, the municipal gas and electrical plants have paid for themselves, are debt-free, and have a working reserve more than adequate, while only 30 per cent of the elaborate water distributing system debt is outstanding and the earnings adequate to retire this at the prescribed rate.

"That is why we are able to meet the depression with relief for the tax payers."

W. C. T. U. NOTES

3.2 PER CENT BEER

Many years ago the brewers proved that one-half of one per cent of alcohol was intoxicating. They employed a famous brewery chemist to prove this.

Why? Because Uncle Sam was taxing intoxicating liquors. Beer, with 3% or 4% alcohol was taxed a dollar a barrel; but along came some smart brewers who made 2% beer, gave it fancy names, and declared it non-intoxicating and therefore non-taxable.

These untaxed 2% beers made competition for the other beers; the brewers decided they would have to induce Uncle Sam to tax everything that looked like beer. So they proved by one of their experiments that 2% beer was intoxicating; that anything out of a brewery with as much as one-half of one per cent alcohol is intoxicating and therefore taxable.

It seems to us that the expert's name was Henius—at any rate it sounded so much like that we were surprised when we read in the pro-beer Chicago Tribune a long interview by one of the Tribune's pet reporters with a certain Dr. Max Henius, a brewery expert who says that even 3.2% beer is non-intoxicating.

Why? It was intoxicating when the brewers wanted it to be.

The Carnegie Institute says that 2.75% beer is intoxicating. They tried experiments with 2.75% alcoholic beverages for six months and declared at the end of the time: "There is no longer room for doubt that beverages as low as 2.75% are intoxicating."

There has been much newspaper talk about 3.2% beer being non-intoxicating. If so, why keep reporting it all the time? The fact is the pro-beer press has something on its conscience. It knows well that 3.2% is intoxicating; knows that congress has not declared 3.2% beer non-intoxicating; yet it permits this mis-statement to appear daily in its columns.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

(By H. G. Teigan)

"There can be no solution of the farm problem until the farmers control the marketing machinery of their own products."

The above is the view of governor Floyd B. Olson as expressed at the recent conference of veterans, farmers, and labor organizations assembled in the House Chamber at St. Paul on Monday, Nov. 6. The Governor made it plain that he did not believe that the program of the Federal Administration provides for an immediate relief for the farmers.

Federal Plan Ineffectual

"To me the present plans of the Department of Agriculture represents an ineffectual tinkering with a system that has never given the farmer a fair deal and never will," he said. "At the best it can only hope to help him as to future prices. No hope lies in it for the securing of fair prices, whether they be based on parity or cost of production, for the commodities now in the possession of the farmer. If and when, if ever, the plan affects future prices, most of the farmers will probably have lost their farms or their opportunity to ever clear themselves of debt.

"While the federal farm credit organizations are making a very creditable effort to refinance the farmer, the mere changing of the name of his creditors will in no sense solve his problem. The only way his problem can be solved is by giving him a price for his commodities which represent such a decent profit as will give him buying power. And unless his buying power is restored we might as well give up our efforts for industrial recovery."

The Governor doubts the practicability of the idea of attempting to solve any problem by depending entirely upon the voluntary action of the people. In saying this, he had reference to the allotment plan, which is in the main the program of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Compulsory action is what will be required to get results the Governor contended. This, he said, is the program of the several governors who last week presented their plan to President Roosevelt and to the Department of Agriculture.

The Governor's View

Speaking on this point Governor Olson said: "This war against poverty, as has been often said, is a greater war than any military conflict in which we have ever engaged. It absolutely requires compulsory action. This the Governors sought thru price fixing and restriction of the amount that any producer could sell upon the open market. Under our plan if the farmer was only able to sell three-fourths of his crop, he would get much more for the three-fourths he would be permitted to sell than for his entire crop which he is now permitted, and attempting, to dispose of on a market already depressed.

"Under our plan marketing is limited, and not production; but if marketing is limited, the control is inevitable. The surplus would remain on on the farm instead of being thrown on the market. Most of the surplus could be consumed by the farmer himself on the farm. That which could not be consumed by him could be purchased by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for feeding those who are now on, or entitled to public relief.

"I know that the farm leaders in the middle west approve our plan. I believe that the great majority of farmers approve it. If the same effort was used to put it over as is being used to put over the voluntary schemes of the Department of Agriculture it could be explained satisfactorily to the farmer."

Strike Action Defended

The Governor defended the farmers right to strike and also maintained that fair advance in prices to the farmer will not injure the consumer. His argument on this point is that there is very litle direct connection in the price of raw products and the price of finished farm products. "For example, there have been periods when wheat was higher in price than it is today, and at the same time bread was lower in price than it is today."

In conclusion, the Governor said that there could be no genuine solution of the farm problem until the farmers have become the owners of their own marketing machinery which today is in the hands of a "bunch of speculators and pirates."

There can be little doubt that Governor Olson's view in respect to these matters is that of the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota, of farm organizations of this and other states of the northwest, as well as of other progressives in this and other states of the union.

Farming in Ancient China

Farming in ancient China was a highly respected occupation. Once a year the emperor not only worshiped in the temple of agriculture, but he also put his hand to the plow to honor the tillers of the soil. During this elaborate ceremony he laid aside his royal robes and wore the yellow dress of a peasant. He took hold of a yellow plow and made nine furrows from east to west. During the ceremony the royal chorus sang hymns of praise to the farmers. The grounds on which these ceremonies were held covered 300 acres and thousands of people witnessed the spectacle.

SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST

In northern climes, the polar bear
Protects himself with fat and hair,
Where snow is deep and ice is stark,
And half the year is cold and dark;
He still survives a clime like that
By growing fur, by growing fat.
These traits, O bear, which thou transmittest
Prove the Survival of the Fittest.

To polar regions waste and wan,
Comes the encroaching race of man,
A puny, feeble, little bubber,
He has no fur, he has no blubber.
The scornful bear sat down at ease
To see the stranger starve and freeze;
But, lo! the stranger slew the bear,
And ate his fat and wore his hair;
These deeds, O Man, which thou committest
Prove the Survival of the Fittest.

In modern times the millionaire
Protects himself as did the bear:
Where Poverty and Hunger are
He counts his bullion by the car;
Where thousands perish still he thrives—
The wealth, O Croesus, thou transmittest
Proves the Survival of the Fittest.

But, lo, some people odd and funny,
Some men without a cent of money—
The simple common human race
Chose to improve their dwelling place:
They had no use for millionaires,
They calmly said the world was theirs,
They were so wise, so strong, so many,
The Millionaires?— there wasn't any.
These deeds, O Man, which thou committest
Prove the Survival of the Fittest.

Mrs. Charlotte Stetson.

AUTHUR J. McGUIRE, PIONEER COOPERATOR

Minneapolis Labor Review

Death of Authur J. McGuire deals a heavy blow at the cause of cooperation. For here was a real cooperator. Here was a man who viewed cooperation not as a way to save and bolster capitalism put as a way out of capitalism to the end of the profit system and the commencing of true happiness and plenty for all who produce.

In those early times years ago when cooperation was considered almost the shadow of a myth, Arthur J. McGuire was preaching its benefits to the farmers and receiving an appreciative hearing.

There was about Authur J. McGuire the fire of the agitator as well as the determination of the pioneer.

To the labor halls of Minneapolis there have come many to discuss the subject of cooperation but never came anyone who left his audience feeling as did McGuire that cooperation was not a cold blooded dollars and cents business, but a cause.

Arthur J. McGuire had greater acquaintance among the farmers of Minnesota than perhaps any other individual in the state, and he had the friendship and confidence of the city workers.

This latter was all the more remarkable because shifting events and conniving had taken from McGuire the real power that was rightfully his in the cooperative with which he spent his last years as general manager. He built it and others horned in on it and not the least of those horning in was the branch banks.

Of course when they got in unionism had to go out the window together with some of the most fundamental principles of cooperation. While organized labor has no time for the concern with which Mr. McGuire was connected, because of its anti-union policies, it has the utmost respect for Arthur J. McGuire.

That is because organized labor knew him long. Knew his ideals. Knew the policies he was forced to bow to were not the policies of his heart or brain.

He staved on with the concern in the hope that it might become in every way a cooperative. But death overtook him before this was accomplished.

Arthur J. McGuire was a great leader, a great educator. He gave a life time of service to humanity.

If those who were closly associated with him wish to pay Arthur J. McGuire the tribute to which he is entitled, the one which he would most appreciate, they will act to make the concern which he built, and power in which the branch bankers robbed him of, the true cooperative he would have made it had he had the power. To commence to do this they must drive the dirty money changers from the temple of cooperation.

The cooperative movement of Minnesota, the labor movement of Minnesota, all those who love the cause of humanity, stand in reverent tribute to Minnesota's greatest pioneer cooperator, Arthur J. McGuire.

ORGANIZED EFFORT

Land O' Lakes News

If all farmers who are producers of butterfat could have attended the conferences of the National Co-operative Milk Producers' Federation at Chicago and the meeting with Secretary Wallace in Washington and have watched the entire proceeding in connection with the Agriculture Adjustment Administration's program for the dairy industry, there could have been no question in their minds as to the value of the existence of farmer- owned and controlled co-operative organizations, because it takes organized action to carry out any program even with the assistance of the government and any assistance agriculture is going to get regardless of how sympathetic the administration may be will have to come through organized effort.

Farmers who are members of the Land O' Lakes organization can be happy that their organization was so constisuted and set up that it could offer its facilities to bridge the gap while the necessary machinery is being set up to carry out the program.

FRUIT OF AN ECONOMIC SYSTEM

Mille Laca County Times

The senate investigations into the ramifications of big business are still going on, and is revealing startling figures in the way of profits for some of the nation's big financiers. Recently it was disclosed that the firm of Dillon, Read and Co., made big profits of $6,819,270 on the sale of common stock of an investment trust founded by them for which they had paid $24,110. This amounted to a profit of $280 for every dollar invested. In another instance the firm bought a stock at 20 cents a share, organized a trust, and cleaned up more than $7,000,000 by dumping the stock on the public at a high price.

It has also been revealed how $100,000,000 was extracted from the United states treasury with the connivance of the Shipping Board for the benefit of certain steamship lines that padded their payrolls to cover up loans made by officials to a son of the chairman of the shipping board. Government Officials on the shipping board who attempted to protest such practices were summarily dismissed.

By various tactics big business is able to make their gains by scaling close to the edge of the law. in fact most of the big gains are made technically within the law. Our economic system works that way, so there is not much can or will be done about it as long as the present system exists. It is a system that has for its natural corollary the beggaring of huge masses of the population in order that a few may live in luxury. No use kicking on the fruits of the tree as long as you believe in nourishing the tree.

CONSUMERS MUST CONSUME

By Gny W. Mallon

Slowly, reluctantly, even kicking and screaming, western civilization is being driven to the hitherto abhorent notion that the consumer must be furnished with purchasing power whether he works or not. It is touching to watch the tortures of the moralists caught on the horns of this dilemma —one school of them seriously proposes that the output, rather than being allowed to fall into the hands of the consumer, should be destroyed A billion pounds of coffee, millions of bushels of wheat, thousands of bales of cotton, uncounted gallons of milk have recently been subjected to holocausts and destruction, thus keeping un polluted the economic morality of the wayfaring citizen. He has not worked, so he must be prevented from consuming. This worthy censorship, however, like another recent noble experiment in prohibiting consumption, has not served economic realties, however much it may have served the cause of beautiful morals. The jam in the industrial mechanism is not relieved by even such monumental measures of deliberate waste and loss. The consumer must be permitted to consume!

POTATO MEN WORKING ON ALLOTMENT PLAN

A potato allotment plan to improve prices to producers through tbe elimination nf surpluses and by effecting an orderly flow of potatoes to the market, is now under consideration by prodncers' associations of western states eays R. Beer Was Known as Far Back as History Goes

Gambrinus was a real person, says the Indianapolis News. He was duke of Brabant in the Thirteenth century and derived his title from Jan Primus or January I. The mythical Gambrinus was credited with the invention of beer, but the record fails to substantiate the story. Beer was known when the Egyptians were making queer-looking characters on papyrus and writings of the time of Seti I (1300 B. C.) mention a citizen who became intoxicated on it. The Greeks, who had two words for it, learned about brewing from the Egyptians, the Romans experimented with malted liquors and the early Germans became fond of brew. Originally the Greeks and the Romans, loyal to the grape, despised beer as a drink of the barbarians. Pliny noted that beer was plentiful in Spain, and wrote that "so exquisite is the cunning of mankind in gratifying their vicious appetites that they have thus invented a method to make water itself produce intoxication." The natives in South Africa knew about brewing as far back as history goes.

Holland's Old "New Church"

Holland possesses no Westminster Abbey and no Pantheon. The nearest approach to either is the "New Church" at Delft, where are buried mony of the royal family of Holland since William the silent established the unity of the nation, down to William III, father of Queen Wilhelmina. The church is one of the oldest in Hollnad and was built at the beginning of the Fifteenth century. The steeple, 120 yards high, is one of the most graceful on the western side of Europe, and contains a fine carillon, on which melodies are played several times daily. This was the last portion of the church to be completed, and took almost 100 years to build.

Some Flies Live All Winter

Some houseflies live all winter. Unprotected they are probably killed. Those which have found shelter in some warm place continue to liva actively. Some flies possibly exist in dormant condition in such protected places as behind pictures and loose wallpaper. Sluggish specimens behind hooks on bookshelves in December and January have been observed, and hava been found in the same positions and still living a month later.

Versions on "When in Rome Do as Romans Do"

Like most such sayings, its origin is not really known. But it is often credited as the advice of St. Ambrose to St. Augustine. The latter was in the habit of dining on Saturday as on Sunday, but at Rome they had begun to fast on Saturday, and Augustine, puzzled by the difference in practice, appealed to St. Ambrose, the bishop of Milan. His counsel was:

"When I am at Rome I fast as the Romans do; when I am at Milan I do not fast. So likewise you, whatever church you come to, observe the custom of the place, if you would neither give offense to others nor take offense from them."

Other versions of his advice are given, and the same idea is found in other places as in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy: "When they are at Rome they do there as they see done."

Stamps Money Cannot Buy

We often hear of a unique stamp fetching a record price, but there are stamps which no bid would secure, however high it might be. They constitute the most wonderful collection in the world, twenty-four of every issue, which has ever been made in the British empire, starting with the "penny" blacks of 1840. They are kept in the vaults of Somerset house, and three officials, each with a key, must be summoned before access can be had to them. Thousands of stamps of all colors, shapes, prices, sizes, and denominations are there in glass-covered, dust-proof cases. Only one feature have they in common. All are British. None of these stamps could be duplicated if lost or destroyed, because once the plates from which stamps are printed show any sign of wear they are destroyed. Thus it may be said, small as they are, they are as valuable as the greatest paintings the nation possesses, and there is certainly no collection in the world to equal them.

Life of Luther Burbank

Luther Burbank was a famous American plant breeder, taking up that work at the age of seventeen after leaving public school. He was born in Massachusetts in 1849, married Elizabeth Waters of Hasting, Mich., in 1916 and died in California in 1926, maintaining to the very end that he did not believe in the hereafter. He carried on experimental work with plants for more than 50 years, producing many new varieties of flowers, vegetables, berries and fruits. He also was a lecturer and writer on horticultural subjects.

Indian Drought Legends Like Stories of Bible

Many legends of the southwestern Indians bear striking similarity to stories of Biblical times. For instance, there is the story of great draught when the hummingbird found food.

The people had begun to lose their faith in the Great Mother who ruled the universe. They turned from her teachings and her ways to follow their own desires and the mother, in order to punish them, took the clouds out of the sky and put them away and soon the land became parched and suffering became widespread.

For four years no rain fell and all entreaties to the mother failed to awaken any response. All efforts to locate her were futile. Only the hummingbird knew. To the hummingbird the mother gave instructions that her place of concealment should be kept secret and in return for preserving the secret the hummingbird was permitted to visit Shipap, place of origin and final resting place of the dead, where it was able to draw the honey from the flowers and satisfy their thirst.

After four years of suffering, during which many died, the people finally learned the truth that the source of all food and water was the mother, and when this truth was completely impressed upon them the rain returned and rejoicing was great throughout the land as the refreshing showers brought relief.

Dream Opals Carved by Craftsman of Long Ago

Many years ago there was a craftsman who made ornaments for lovely ladies. Slim wrists of Oriental dancers sparkled with his handiwork, regal heads were hung with the creations of his dreams of beauty. But of all the jewels with which he worked the one he loved the most was the opal.

One day he found an opal of great size and price. It was as large as his closed hand, lustrous as the star above the crescent moon, and luminous with elusive fires. He would make of this opal, he thought, the most perfect jewel he had ever made, so that seekers of beauty would see it and wonder.

With reverence he worked, as he carved his dreams into the shifting colors, until he had fashioned a bracelet fit to adorn the loveliest lady of all time. That was so many years ago that most of the legends have been forgotten, and the craftsman's jewels are sealed in undiscovered tombs.

"Movie" Dogs Must Have Souls

A celebrated trainer of dogs for movie purposes, and the first man to produce "dog operas," says that his dogs are all hand picked. "There are just two points I take into consideration when I select a dog for training; first, the dog's eyes must show that it has a soul. Second, it must have a broad head, sufficient to encase a good sized brain. Nothing else matters. He may be a wreck from kicks and curses, half starved and cowed. This shows that be needs only a friead. He will respond to your kindliness quicker than the well-fed, contented dog that has known no hardships. Win his confidence and you get complete obedience—idolatrous obedience, I might say. Then he will do anything you commond him to do without osking why or questioning its practicability. That's what makes 'dog opera' possible."

COUNTY MAY GET $15,000 IN CASH

Re-employment Office Will Secure Labor For Project

Prospects for more work for Pennington county unemployed became quite favorable last Tuesday when J. A. Erickson, county engineer, received a telephone call from the state highway department saying $15,000 would probably be available for graveling streets, state and county roads.

Marshall county is also due to receive a sum of money for graveling purposes to the amount of probably as much as $35,000 to be distributed on roads throughout the county.

Labor for this project will be secured by the National Reemployment Service, it was announced by the local office. Registrations have been called for at three places in the county: Warren, Middle River and Grygla. Registration at these three pleces will start Saturday morning, November 18, and contiue until Tuesday evening, November 21. Those who find it more convenient to register at the office in Thief River Falls may do so. Those who have teams or trucks are also asked to register them.

These graveling projects will be started as soon as possible and are a part of President Roosevelt's recently announced plan to put four million men to work by December 15. There will be similar projects in practically every county in the state.

Allied Drys Propose Temperance Course

Because of the belief of the dry organization that special care should be given to the teaching of temperence in view of the coming of hard liquors, a committee has been working to draw up a course for the teaching of temperence in the Minnesota schools.

Foundation for the study of the matter was laid yesterday at a conference between members of the committee and officials of the state department of education. No course can be introduced without the consent of the state department, and the first task of the committee will be to determine what part should take in forming the course.

Some members are doutful as to whether or not a special course should be set up in view of the fact that the schools, under a general state provision are treating with the psychological and social effects of alcohol in courses dealing with narcotics and stimulants.

Members of the committee are: Superintendent Carroll R. Reed of Minneapolis and Superintendent S. O. Hartwell of St. Paul; A. E. MacQuarrie, principal of Minneapolis Washburn high school; Russell Petarson, principal of LaFayette school, St. Paul; P. C. Tonning, state depaty commissioner of education, and W. F. Webster, former Minneapolis superintendent.

50 Wardens To Be Dropped Account Depleted Coffers

Fifty state game wardens will join the unemployed beginning November 15, according to a plan announced recently by W. D. Stewart, Minnesota game and fish commissioner.

Depleted funds of the department necessitated a plan for cutting the pay roll in order to keep within the income for 1933 and prevent a deficit January 1, Stewart said.

The income of the game and fish department is derived mainly from licenses, fines and commercial fishing permits but returns from these sources have fallen off heavily during the last year, according to Stewart.

The individual wardens who will be dismissed for the winter have not been named but Stewart indicated that those dismissed would be rehired next spring when the department would be on a sounder financial basis.

WINTER DRIVING RULES

Skidding on icy or slippery highways already has taken its toll of deaths and injuries in Minnesota this fall. Below are five rules to prevent skidding which have been given to all employas of the state highway department. They are good rules for every driver to remember:

1,— Keep in gear. Rear wheels are less likely to skid if they are kept turning by the motor.

2,— Apply brakes gently, Don,t apply the brakes to the rear wheels harder than they can take them, or they will slip. A little slip is a young skid.

3,— Don't shift gears unless you must. Trouble may follow if you have to shift gears on a hill and the road is icy.

4,— put on chains, all around, if it is icy. A pair of chains costs less than a damaged vehicle.

5,— Pay full attention to the business of driving. Handle everything in an easy manner—gas, stearing, brakes-no sudden moves if skids are to be avoided.

COUNCIL DEBATES OIL CO. CONDUIT

Newell's Dogs, Again Are An Issue Before The City Government

Meeting for their regular session Tuesday evening the city council discussed the application of the Standard Oil Company to run a pipe line from their bulk station on Atlantic Avenue to their service station on Main Avenue and Second Street. A representative of the Standard Oil Co. was present and outlined the proposed project which will call for a two inch conduit to run from their bulk station to the service station, a distance of six blocks. The reason for the application, the representative said, was to meet competition with other oil companies who have pipe lines connecting their bulk and service stations in this city.

After a discussion of the application, the council laid the matter on the table to be acted upon at their next regular meeting, so the proposition can be thoroughly investigated before any action is taken.

A petition signed by the residents on Conley Avenue, asking that the street be kept open, referred to the council by the county board, was turned over to the Street committee, who were instructed to request that the county furnish a snow fence to keep the street open.

Newell's dogs again entered the council proceedings. A letter from the State Department of Health asking the council what could be done about the situation and asking for a report on the problem was received and referred to the city attorney to be answered. The letter questioned the sanitary conditions at Mr. Newell's residence and offered a bulletin dealing with such conditions.

City Clerk P. G. Peterson was instructed to write to Ray R. Ganger, auditorium architect, relative to the seating and stage equipment for the new building.

Lawrence Bjorkman was granted a permit to build a house on lot 15, block 3 in Porters addition.

Following a discussion of the installing of a stoker in the new auditorium, which drew pro and con opinions from the councilmen, the meeting adjourned to Thursday evening for final action on the purchase of the stoker.

At a special adjourned meeting last Thursday evening the council heard from stoker representatives and received their bids. The Central Lumber company was given a contract to furnish the city with coal this winter at $9.00 per ton. The United States Government was granted permission to discharge all sub-soil drainage with respect to the proposed federal building into a sanitary sewer on La Bree Avenue north, on account of the shallow depth of the storm sewer in the alley of block 57.

U. S WILL PLACE MEN AT WORK

Program Affects Men in Relief Line—Cost Put at 4 Billion.

Washington — President Roosevelt has approved plans calculated to take 2,000,000 persons off relief rolls throughout the country and put them to work on a self sustaining basis, the White House revealed. This plan will involve the expenditure of at least $4,000,000,000 of government funds. In high administration circles decision to take the millions off direct relief and put them in the wage earner class at once, was described as a departure of relief work, and at the same time a digging in for the winter. The first 2,000,000 men comprise those now on work relief provided by local relief administration operating under the state and federal emergency relief administration. These immediately will be placed on regular pay at the hourly rates prevailing for similar work. A 30-hour week is contemplated. The plan will be administered by a newly created civil works administration under direction of Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief head, and funds will be drawn from the $3,300,000,000 public works allocation. Creation of the new agency will remove from the relief rolls a major portion of those receiving the necessities of life on the basis of public aid and place them on regular employment. It is designed to remove from relief rolls all employable persons. Those hired by the civil works administration will benefit by an immediate increase in income over their former relief allowances. It was explained that projects on which the workers will be used will include not only the types on which relief work now is being given, but also on a wide range of employment in activities bordering on, but not covered in, the province of the public works administration.

Nebraskan Wins Corn Husking Title.

West Point, Neb.—Sherman Henriksen, who farms 320 acres of land, 11 miles east of Lincoln, Neb., was crowned national cornhusking champion at the tenth annual contest on the Ben Staip farm near here. The 33-year-old farmer told thousands of persons who crowded onto the farm he was mighty glad to be the first Nebraskan to win the national title, and was proud of his record. He husked 27.62 bushels of yellow dent corn in the 80-minute contest. Ted Bale, Minnesota champion, was fifth.

EMPLOYMENT ON STATE HIGHWAYS TOTALS 11,500

Approximately 11,500 men in all parts of Minnesota have now been given jobs on state highway work, it is shown in reports of the Highway department.

Construction projects financed by emergency Federal funds are providing work for about 8,500, while another 3,000 are employed on maintenance.

In September the number of workers on construction jobs was only 2,400. This figure has been more than tripled in October and November. Hundreds of teams of horses owned by farmers have been hired. The highest possible employment will be maintained through the winter, according to N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, although there will be a decrease from present figures after severe weather sets in.

Recent dispatches from Washington anounced that Minnesota led all other states in the number of NRA highway projects approved and the number of contracts awarded, although its allotment of funds was smaller than in numerous other states.

DEMAND FOR HORSES EXCEEDS THE SUPPLY

Receipts of horses and mules at public stock yards were 221,142 for the first eight months of 1933, as compared with 171,587 for the same period in 1932, almost a 30% gain.

Demand has overtaken supply, says A. L. Harvey of the animal husbandry division, University Farm, St. Paul. Dealers are scouring the whole country buying up all the horses and mules that farmers are willing to sell. Foals, yearlings, and two-year olds are especially in demand, and fillies bring from $10 to $15 more than geldings of equal merit.

The 1930 census showed that 86 out of each 100 farms were operated entirely with horses or mules. Indications point to a greater percentage now, for farmers have found that when the prices of farm products are down, the cost of maintaining horses and mules is down, says Mr. Harvey. The increased use, coupled with a decreased rate of breeding in the last decade, has left the country with a supply of horses and mules insuffcent to meet the demand.

It will not pay to engage in raising horses or mules solely for market purposes, continues Mr. Harvey, but it will pay any farmer who is located in a section that is well suited to the production of horses and mules, to raise enough colts for his own replacements, and it may prove profitable to raise an extra colt or two to sell.

Scene from "Morning Glory" showing at the Lyceum Wednesday and Thursday. This picture received a four star rating in the Liberty Magazine.

U. FARM HOLSTEIN COW SETS NEW STATE RECORD

Minnehahn Pietertje Daisy, a senior three-year-old Holstein cow of the dairy herd at University Farm, St. Paul, recently completed a state record for cows in Class B—milked not more than three times a day. She gave in 365 days 673.2 pounds of butterfat; 19,190.9 pounds of milk with an average test of 3.5 per cent of butterfat. Her daily ration was from 20 to 23 pounds of grain, 24 pounds of silage, 3 pounds of beet pulp, and 20 pounds of alfalfa hay. She was on pasture 150 days.

Dr. W. E. Petersen of the division of dairy husbandry, University Farm, reports that Daisy is the result of a daughter-sire mating, and is the largest daughter of Sir Pietertje Mamsell Ormsby, who is the sire also of two other state leaders. She weighs about 1700 pounds which is greater than the average for the breed.

As the product of a daughter-sire mating, Daisy, in size and record, rather upsets the common belief among dairy cattle breeders, that inbreeding causes reduced size and vigor.

TWELVE STATES NOW ON T. B. FREE LIST

Twelve states have now eradicated bovine tuberculosis, according to word received at University Farm, St. Paul, from the United States Department of Agriculture. Minnesota is not among the twelve. The latest state to be declared tuberculosis free is Kentucky. The other eleven are: North Carolina, Maine, Michigan, Indiana Wisconsin, Ohio, Idaho, North Dakota, Nevada, New Hampshire, and Utah.

Minnesota has made considerable progress in freeing its herds from tuberculosis, but some 14 counties have stood out against the necessary testing and thus kept the state from gaining a place in the select list, with the resultant advantages in the marketing of livestock products.

Dr. C. P. Fitch, head of the division of veterinary medicine. University Farm, St. Paul says that Minnesota's present position works directly to the detriment of the farmers of the state, as it will make it increasingly difficult for Minnesota to retain the advantage she now has in the sale of her livestock products.

OVER CROWDING, CAUSE OF FEATHER-PICKING

Overcrowding is usually the cause of feather picking in poultry floks, says F. B. Hutt, professor of animal genetics, University Farm, St. Paul. Feather picking is merely a bad habit, and it is more likely to appear when the birds are in overcrowded quarters.

The old rule of 4 square feet of floor space to each hen is safe and even with the lighter birds such as leghorns, says Dr. Hutt, it is not desirable to give less than 3 square feet for each hen.

A farmer recently asked me how to feed his hens in order to prevent their picking out each others feathers. He thought the difficulty arose from some deficiency in the ration. Investigation showed, however, that the ration was wholly satisfactory, but the man had crowded 500 hens into a building whose capacity at the outside was 250.

SUPT. A. A. MCDOWELL OF NORTHWEST SCHOOL CALLED TO CAPITAL FOR RESEARCH

In 1922 he was appointed livestock specialist at the University of Minnesota, followed by the superintendency of the Northwest School and Station in 1927. He is in charge of the department of horticulture and beekeeping and has supervised the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers on the school campus, which is regarded as one of the most beautiful in the Northwest.

FEDERAL AID FOR JOBLESS STUDENTS BELIEVED CERTAIN

Relief Administrator and Gov. Olson Discuss New Set-Up

Virtual assurance that the federal government would grant $120,000 to the state for the education of unemployed youth was given Governor Floyd B. Olson by Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, during his visit here some time ago, it was learned from an authoritative source recently.

The appropriation when granted will undoubtedly be sent directly to Governor Olson, who will appoint his own administrators.

Hopkins and the governor discussed the project thoroughly and a plan for administering the funds to the University and state colleges was set up implying the governor's faith in the success of the plan.

U. May Get 500

The terms of the application now pending in Washington, D. C., call for a federal grant of $15 per month for 1,000 state youth to permit them to continue their education.

Five hundred students, one-half of the group destined to receive aid, will matriculate in the University, it is estimated by those conversant with the situation. This figure was estimated when it became known that applicants would be allowed to select the college or university they wished to attend.

6,000 Applications Expected

Although the University administration has professed ignorance of the number of students they would receive in connection with the project, they have gone ahead steadily with plans to accomodate at least 500.

Present plans call for cooperative housing of 150 of the group in the farm campus dormitory. Another group will be lodged and fed on the third floor of the Minnesota Union, if present hopes materialize.

Approximately 6,000 applications are expected during the next month from eligible candidates for the 1,000 positions.

Wintry Gale Roars over Northwest.

Chicago—Wintry storms hammered at the northwest, and left a trail of damage and 12 deaths that covered more than a half dozen states in the northern tiers and extended into Canada. Some sections were pelted by rain, sleet and snow driven by northwest winds of strong gale velocity. Others, where fields were bare and dry, were darkened by thick clouds of dust that made day seem like night. Parts of the storm area reported winds as high as 60 miles an hour.

Wiggin Group Sued for $100,000,000.

New York—Suit for $100,000,000 against Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase National Bank and 135 fellow directors as well as the bank itself, charging them individually and collectively with negligence, misconduct and waste of the bank's funds, has been filed. Notice of the suit, instituted by holders of 1,000 shares of the bank's stock, was served on Wiggin personally.

Foshay, Henley Must Serve Terms.

St. Louis—Wilbur B. Foshay and Henry H. Henley must serve 15-year sentences in federal prison and pay a $1,000 fine each. The United States Circuit Court of Appeal, at St. Louis, handed down this decision. Foshay and Henley were convicted of conspiracy to use the mails in a scheme to defraud. Their trial was the longest criminal trial in Federal Court history in Minneapolis.

St. Paul—With selection of a jury composed of five farmers, two women, an accountant, a blacksmith, a hardware clerk, a grain dealer, and a railway clerk, the government began presentation of its case against Roger Touhy, notorious Chicago gang leader, and three of his lieutenants, charged with the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy brewer.

Austin—1,000 farm strikers and striking employees of the Hormel packing plant held possession of the $5,000,000 Hormel packing plant after a battle in which they repulsed deputy sheriffs who attacked them with tear gas. Leaders of the strikers accepted a proposal, made by Governor Olson, that their demands for wage increases be submitted to the state industrial commission for arbitration.

Minneapolis—A federal grant of $120,000, presumably to carry out the education relief program in Minnesota, was received by F. M. Rarig, state relief administrator. It is expected the money will be used to finance approximately 1,000 students in continuing their higher education in colleges and universities of the state. Each student, under the plan, will receive $15 monthly for living expenses. The University of Minnesota has agreed to suspend tuition fees for these students.

Minneapolis—Brewers and wine makers already are increasing the alcoholic content of their beverages—and storing the product pending the official demise of prohibition on Dec. 5. But Minneapolis, and Minnesota, for the present at least, will have to be satisfied with the 3.2 beverage even after national prohibition is officially buried. In less than a month the United States will be "wet" again, but it doesn't mean a thing to Minnesota, at least not until the state legislature repeals a prohibition law, passed at the last session, forbidding sale or distribution of beverages containing more than 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight.

St. Paul—Governor Floyd B. Olson will convene the state legislature in special session about December 4, he said, to repeal state prohibition and pass a new liquor control measure.

Hibbing—Proposals to float two bond issues for projects under the federal reconstruction program were defeated by voters at a special election. One provided for a $290,000 bond issue for a sewage disposal plant and the other was a $60,000 proposal for improvement of streets and highways.

PATROL COLLECTIONS SHOW BIG INCREASE OVER 1932

Minnesota's Highway patrol was instrumental in collecting $98,923 for the state in the first eight months of 1933, as compared with 65,743 in the same period of 1932, according to a report made to Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg by John P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol. This is an increase of $33,180, or over 50% and represents money the state would not have collected without the patrol.

Closer checking of motor vehicle licenses and equipment is responsible for the increase, Chief Arnoldy said. Fully 80% of the collections came from operators of trucks from other states who do business in Minnesota and had not been using Minnesota licenses..

While the patrolmen and the six license inspectors who work under patrol supervision were increasing the contributions to the state treasury by foreign truck companies, they did not let down their other duties, Chief Arnoldy said. More warnings were issued to drivers for traffic offenses than in the same period of last year. However, the Patrol obtained unusually fine co-operation from the public, the chief said, and it was not necessary to make as many arrests as formerly to enforce the warnings.

BUY NOT, EAT NOT

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Sometimes we havs to go against our training or go broke. Sometimes what we havs always believed to be a rule of virtuous conduct proves fatal in practice. For instance, ws have grown up in ths belief, fostered by our parents and teachers and enforced by our government, that ws havs no right to take or use ths property of another person without his consent, but if ths property in question happens to be a blackjack that the other person is aboat to bring down on my head I shall hava a better chance of surviving if I perceive, in time, ths unwisdom of clinging unalterably to old convictions. That is, there are times of emergency when clinging to an old conviction will be ruinous. Let us cousider the present time in its relation to our old conviction in favor of thrift.

People of pioneer stock are often spoken of as the "backbone of ths country," and probably they are. Pioneers are thrifty or they don't survive. If the wood pile is used too freely in ths autumn it may not last through the winter, and the Midland child learned thrift at its grandmother's knee. Moreover, we've been taught for several generations that it isn't what a man earns that counts and takes care of him in his old age; it's what he saves. We'vs always believed that thrift is a virtne, that spending is risky and that squandering is suicidal. We demand thrift from our government, vote against political candidates proven unthrifty, and we investigate, and often relegate to private life, officials shown to be carelessly lavish with public funds. The value of thrift, indeed, is one of our strongest convictions. No one doubts that it is a right and useful conviction or that it would be dangerous to unsettls it; but here is the United States government coming to us now, asking us to buy, bny, buy, advising us to spend our money rather than to save it, and generally appearing to set itself strongly in opposition to that old principle of thriftiness in which we were trained. There seems to be a contradiction somewhere.

Moreover, the government asks us to spend at a time when we havo the least to spare, at a time when the Federal government itself, as well as our State, county and city governments, are taking heavily from us in taxes and in that way lessening our power to spend. Worse still, our government, through the N.R.A., asks us to spend at a moment of great financial uncertainty in our lives, at a moment when we don't know whether we're emerging from the depression or going deeper into it, and when we aren't sure whether we're less afraid of the future than ws were a year ago, or more so. The curious thing about the government's exhortation to us to spend is that the exhorters know how we feel and how we're situated; they know our old conviction in favor of thriftiness and they agree with that conviction—and yet these same exhorters ask us to buy, buy, buy!

What's the answer? Money is a means of trade. If you had a cord of wood and no food, and your neighbor had a cellar full of potatoes and no fuel, and if neither of you were willing to trade, he'd have raw potatoes to eat but he'd freeze to death, and you'd have heat enough perhaps, but you'd starve to death. Thrift is indeed a virtue; but this is a time of emergency during which it's necessary to buy goods so that somebody'll have money enough to pay us for what we produce. If it's hard for ns to get rich by washing one another's shirts, it's certainly impossible for us to make a living by washing our own. It seems wiser to live by spending than to perish by saving.

ARE WE KEEPING FAITH WITH THOSE WHO DIED IN THE WAR?

Another Armistice Day has passed— Another year gone by since that joyous November morning when the pealing of churchbells, the blowing of whistles and the shouting of a milion throats greeted the news that the war was over.—— The war was over?

What fervent prayers unanswered,— What blasted hopes for the wellfare of a harrassed humanity lie burried in that decade and a half.

November 11th 1918—— everybody on the streets, shouting, screaming, throwing their hats in the air, tearing each others clothes off in the madness of the hour—— Laughing, dancing,— and weeping.

Mothers flitting about thru the crowd, disheveled,— dashing away the tears that would not stop— embracing all and sundry in a crazy aftermath of the war's tension. Down in the park they are burning Kaiser Bill in effigy.—— Hurly Burly world,—— Topsy Turvy world—— —the war is over. The Prince of Peace has arrived at last and the Devil has been driven back to his Hell.—— Innocent—— credulous,—— misled humanity. In his sumptious Wall Street offices the Devil was already planning the next "clean-up."

Fifteen years after the war to end all wars—— and a score of wars in the interval with more brewing. Fifteen years since the war to make the world safe for Democracy—— and half the world under the heels of the dictators. Fifteen years since millions made the supreme sacrifice to end misery and want—— and more people dying from want and starvation than died on the battlefields of France.

In Flanders fields the popies blow
 Between the crosses row on row,
That mark the place; and in the sky
 The larks still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
 We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
 In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
 To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
 If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, tho poppies grow
 In Flanders fields.

A REGIMENT OF ONE

Hormel, the owner of the packing plant at Austin, asked the Governor to send the militia to quell the striking workers at his plant, but the Governor refused and sent Frank Starkey, his Industrial Commissioner instead. "If Frank can't fix it up, I'll go down myself." the Governor said.

"Don't come down without the militia," Mr. Hormel admonished, "it would not be safe for you."

But the Governor did go down himself and without the militia, and he certainly was not in any danger—— from the strikers.

After observing the spirit displayed by the Hormel kind of people when they came to St. Paul to protest against the passage of the income tax, the child labor amendment and the unemployment insuance bill last winter, and contrasting it with the spirit shown by the farmers and workers who came to ask the passage of the moratorium law and for relief, we would vauchsafe the opinion that the Governor would be safer in the company of the striking farmers and workers than in any other company he could choose.

If past performances is any criterion, we tremble to think of the shambles that would now be Austin if we had one of the "safe and conservative" men of past administrations in the Governor's chair. While Hormel was trying to recruit a force of 200 men (the dailies politely refrain from telling us what kind of men) in Minneapolis, Governor Olson talked to the strikers and showed them where they were wrong in seizing private property and persuaded them to arbitrate their strike. We have a faint suspicion too, that he told Hormel that if he imported his thugs the militia would be called out—— to protect the lives and property of the strikers.

Anyway something seems to have happened to government in these United States for when Hormel called Roosevelt on the telephone to get federal intervention, the President just "wasn't home."

At that the wag who transposed Hormel's admonition and said the militia had better not go to Austin without the Governor was probably quoting more truth than poetry.

And Congressman Shoemaker saved Mr. Hormel's refrigeration plant and bacon to the tune of about $3,000,000. That's one for the "conservative" press to jot down on the cuff.

Attacks on the Child Labor Amendment by newspaper publishers and their attempt to line up the pnblic egainst ratification indicate that labor and other forces favoring the amendment are in for a hard figbt.

Next year and 1935 will be crucial years in ths figbt for the amendment. In 1934 eight States which have not acted favorably will meet in regular legislative sessions and others will very likely call special sessious. In 1934 most State legislatures will be in session.

Pointing out the necessity for every friend of the amendment to bestir himself or herself and work as never before for final victory, the American Child organ of the National Child Labor Committee, Says:

"If the goal of 36 ratifications is reached in 1935 it will make possible Federal legislation in time to replace the child lebor restrictions in industrial codes which will expire that year, according to the terms of the Recovery Act. If it be not ratified—then we must expect a return to old conditions of child exploitation. For previous experience indicates that when a period of unemployment begins to abate, tbe number of children entering industry tends to increase."

There is no doubt that the Child Labor Amendment will be ratified and made part of the Federal Constitution, however hard a fight is made to defeat lt. That is settled. Labor has made up its mind-child labor must be permanently abolished and will see that this is done by ratification of the amendment.

WHAT ABOUT THE SALOON?
Mankato Free Press.

President Roosevelt is reported to be studying a tentative program which the government will follow in dealing with the liquor problem, once repeal becomes effective.

It should be remembered that the Democratic platform on which the president was elected, pledged specifically that there should be no return of the saloon "directly or indirectly".

Thus far the administration has been active in bringing about the return of beer, aggressively in favor of repeal but has been discreetly silent on this phase of the platform pledge. The most important question concerned with repeal is "What about the saloon?"

It's up to the president and the administration to furnish an adequate and practical answer.

THE CO-OPERATION OF TOMORROW
Red River Valley Times
(Oslo)

In a recent issue, the Dairymen's League News commented on future farming cooperators— the children of the parents who belong to the Dairymen's League all of whom are learning some of the simple, yet fundamental, rules of cooperation.

It would be an excellent idea if all the farmers and others interested in cooperation mode an attempt to develop understanding of it in the minds and hearts of the producers of tomorrow. A generation raised almost from infancy with a belief in cooperative principles, and with constant opportunity to watch them evolve and win sucess, should make incalculable future agricultural progress.

This is an especially interesting snpposition in the light of present agricultural conditions. It is said that much of the difficulty experienced by the Department of agriculture in raismg the farm incame is due to the fact that too fany farmers are still disorganized, and it is a long and arduous task to bring them together on a common footing. The cooperatives are making valiant drives to enlist more members—— and they are succeeding. But they would have succeeded in a much shorter period had the farmer of today been schooled in cooperation by his forebears.

Stronger cooperatives, better supported— that is the ideal now. And along with it, there should be plans for assuring the fullest flowering of the cooperative scheme through preparing farm children to take their place in organized agriculture.

PROSPERITY BY DESTRUCTION.
(Stephen Messenger)

Prosperity, tbe most obvious definition would show, consists in a condition of plenty. The prosperous man is tbe man who has plenty of wealth. And the prosperous country is the one with an abundance of sustenance.

In the past four years the substance of all the "depression" countries has greaty increased. So far from weelth having become scarce, it has since 1929 multiplied many fold and must now be destroyed. When we destroy enough, all will be well, the depression will be gone, and everybody will be back at work. Doing what? Producing more snbstance, presumably, which presently no doubt in prosperitys interests will have to be destroyed again. There is such an abundence in the world that it has become a pest and a nuisance and must be destroyed. The organized atructure of buman sustenance leads on to the organized destruction of human life. This would seem to follow from the logic of the situation.

The Liberal Digest

Status of the Farmer-Labor Association Explained.

From the beginning of the organization of the Farmer-Labor Association in Minnesota there has been a widespread misconception concerning just what its status or purposes really is. Of course everybody knows that the legal status of the Farmer-Labor party in this state is identical with thet of the two other mejor political perties in the state, the Democratic and Republican, and cannot be changed by any individual nor combination of individuals, and from what the writer has been ablo to learn thet is not the intention nor purpose for which the Farmer-Labor Association was created. Its principal object as far as we have been able to understand, has been to help the new party in organization work, especially in the larger cities and to raise funds with which to promote the party and carry on our battle for the welfere and rights of the common people.

In order to become a member of the Farmer-Labor Association, a small fee must be paid for the sole purpose of carrying on the work of promoting and keeping the new party alive. We are not in the financial position in this respect which the Democratic and Republican parties are becauss, tho large speciel privileged corporations and big interests have always furnished them with plenty of money with which to carry on their propaganda and political battles, and they have thus far been very sncceesful in getting what they have gone after.

The Farmer-Labor party was not created by the Farmer-Labor Association whicb every intelligent man and woman in this state well know— it was created long before the Farmer-Labor Association was ever known or heerd of.

In brief, here is how the creation of tbe Farmer-Labor party in this state was brought about: Hundreds of farmers in the state had become members of a progressive political organization know as the Nonpartisan League, the writer of this article being one of the first east of the Red River. In ths year 1918 numerous members of the League suggested that we get out petitions and run an independent candidate for governor because, we had no party in which to run onr candidate and the only way we could get him on the ballot was petitioning the voters of the state. Several conferences were held in different counties of the state and the result was we decided to run Dnvid H. Evans for governor. This was before the present depression had struck the farmers as hard as it has later done and we suceeded in raising quite a campaign fnnd, organized as many connties as we could nnd went through ons of the bitterest and most exciting political campaigns ever witnessed in this state. Some of our speakers were drenched with water from fire hose and driven out of cities and villages and others were arrested and thrown into jail. The name Farmer-Labor was given our party when our petitiona were filed with the secretary of atate. After the smoke from our first political battle with the big fet boys had cleared away that cold November election day in 1918, it was fonnd that our candidate for governor Dave Evans had polled a total vote in the state of 111,966. His vote in Pennington Co. being 1,138. This was before the women of thia state were given the privilege of voting, and of course the total vote in the state and country at that time was only one-half of what it has been since. From thab time on the battle has continned persistently with a steady gain at each election until we have at last become the major political party of this state.

If the Farmer-Labor party had not been lncky enough to have obtained a legal statua the same as the other two major parties we would have been sold ont and ditched years ago, just the same es our own and oaly big daily newspaper, which costs our farmers and laborers several bundred thonsand dollars, "The Minnesota Star" was et Minneapolis in the balmly days of the Van Lear regime Hundreds of thousands of dolars have been available at nll times for its destruction, but its founders who are now becaming gray-haired and bent had learned a lesson and fortified our new party with a legel status which cannot be destroyed.

The Farmer-Labor party is here for all time. It destinies are going to continue to be left in the hands of all tha people. Its founders were not of the Tammany Hall type, and the successors of these founders, the people at the ballot box are all great believers in what the immortal Abraham Lincoln said at tbe close of the Civil war, "Eternal Vigilance Is The Price of Liberty."

The Farmer-Labor Asa'n. invites everyone to affiliate with it.

FARMERS GROW MORE RADICAL AS THE RECOVERY FAILS THEM
By Carl Haessler
(Federated Press Writer)

Farm loyality to tbe Roosevelt relief and recovery programa of lest spring, farm skepticism as the programs took shape, farm discontent as they began to fool the farmer witb rising costs that ate np the grain prices, farm revolt as farm prices tobogganed again —that is the emotional history from March 4 to the preaent hour of the farmers' attitnde toward the government. The most radical expression of the present rebellious mood is to be beard at the 2nd National Conference of farmers scheduled to open in Cbicago Nov. 15 for a 4-day meeting.

Though the national strike called by the Farmers Holiday Assn., a more moderate organization than these sponsoring the Chicago conference, has been temporerily suspended the demands will still be pushed witb renewed striking if Pres. Roosevelt does not create real ferm recovery. Part of the strike program is a strike against both taxes and payment of interest on debts until the demands for prices to cover cost of production, reduction of interest to 1½ per cent nnd currency inflation to make cheap money with which to pey off the mortgage sharks shall be won.

The Chicago conference, which is expected to attract almost a thousand delegates, is called by farm organizations in 24 states forming the Farmers Natl. Committee for Action. Mexican and Negro as will as pare white farmers are enrolled under its banners.

Executive Secy. Lem Herris is instructing delegates to come well prepared, "Every delegate should have at least two blankets and should wear warm clothing," he says. "Those coming in trucks should have the sides covered with canvass as protection against the cold. Don't forget to stow away a couple of boxes of food and a few cooking utensils, plates and cutlery to be used along the way."

The conference program is interesting to industrial workers and trade unions because it stresses the solidarity between all workers, farm and city alike. It demands higher prices for what the farmer produces and lower prices for whet he must buy, but it demands that the middlemen and the corporations be soaked and not the city workers. It believes in high wages and low profits to insure prosperity for both farm and city workers.

The conference also plans to prepare effective stoppage of evictions and forclosures and this program may become useful to city workers facing similar evils. Scaling down or concellation of oebts is another livs issue and so are lower rents for farm tenants and cash relief given outright and not on a loan or mortgage basis. Mass nction and active picketing are indicated as natbs to success. Headquarters of the committee in Chicago are at 2457 W. Chicago avenue.

The most reactionary form organization in the United States has also been shown to be probably the most crooked, as witnessed by the forced resignation of Executive Sec'y M. S. Winder of the American Farm Bureau Federation, with headquarters at 58 E. Washington street, Chicago. Winder and H. R. Kibler, the farm bureau's director of information, were fired when a senate investigation in Washington revealed that the federation's lobby in Washington was for sale to the highest bidders and tbat substantial donations or perhaps fees had been paid in by the power trust and other corrupters of public officials, educators and editors. In three depression years the power trust's own brand of "farm relief" had brought $31,000 into the farm bureau federation treasury.

The power trust operated through the Natl' Electric Light Ass'n. the Sam Insull corruption set-up, now known as the Edison Electric Institute—a change, es Sen. Norris has said, "from one dirty shirt to enotber." It wasn't the power trust end othsr payments that caused Sec'y Winder to be fired, however, so much as the discovery by his superiors that he had pocketed some fees on the side without their knowledge.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

KANSAS THE VICTIM

In the present wet-and-dry figbt Kansas again is e victim of tbe calumny, half truths and outright falsehoods spead by wet propagandists who never will forgive this state for making an outstanding sucess of prohibition. Kansas' answer to its detractors who question the value of its bonedry policy is that 54 of its 105 caunties are without any insane, 54 without any feeble-minded, 96 without any poorhouses, 53 without any persons in jail, 56 without any representatives in the penitentiary.

WHY THE PROHIBITION PARTY

When a people have become thoroughly carupted, when the taint has penetrated to their hearts and homes, when the rights of person, property and reputation have no guarantee in tbe sobriety and virtue of the community; in a word, when the morals and manners of a people have become thoroughly polluted, the end of that people is at hand, the body politic is sick unto death. The coming of this condition under the regime of political carruption brought about by selfish domination in the present political administrations needs no prophet to fore-tell.

The Prohibition Party believes that the true funtion of government is to forstall such a crisis. We believe thst the most permanent and enduring of all nstional safeguards consists in that thorough culture of the National Heart which can be furnished oaly by the power of a true system of morsl culture, sucb as is found in that divine axiom, "Righteousness exaltsth a nation," and which finds universal sanction in the platform, principles and policies of the prohibition Party.

BEER AN ENEMY OF THE INTELLECT

One-half to one quart of beer is sufficient to impair memory, lower intellectual power, and retard simple mental processes, such as the addition of simple figures. This narcotic or deadening influence is first exerted on the higher reasoning powers that control conduct, so that the lower activities of the mind and nervous system are for a time released. The everyday, well poised, self-controlled man goes to sleep, as it were, and the primitive man temporsrily wakes up.

He: "You were no spring chicken when I married you."
She: "No, I was a little goose."

WHEN IS A MAN A MAN?

When he can look out over the rivers, the fields, and the far horizon with a profound sence of his own littleness in the vast scheme of things and yet have faith, hope, and courage which is the root of every virtue;

When he knows that deep in his Heart every man is as noble, as divine, as diabolic, and as lonely as himself, and seeks to know, understand and to love his fellowman;

When he can sympathize with men in their sorrows, yea, even in their sins, knowing that each fights a hard fight against many odds;

When he has learned how to make friends and to keep them, and above all, how to keep friends with himself; ffl

When he loves the flowers and feels the thrill of an old forgotten joy when he hears the laugh of a little child;

When he can be happy and high minded amid the meaner drudgeries of life;

When star-crowned trees and the glint of sunlight on flowing waters subdue him like the thought of one much loved and long dead;

When no voice of distress reaches his ears in vain and no hand seeks his aid without response;

When he sees good in every faith that helps any man to lay hold of divine and see majestic meanings in life, whatever the name of that faith may be; ffl ffl

When he can look into a wayside puddle and see something beyond mud, and into the face of the most forlorn fellow mortal and see something beyond sin; ffl

When he knows how to love, how to hope, how to pray; fflfflffl

When he has kept faith with himself, with his fellowman, with his God, in his hand a sword for evil, in his Heart a bit of a song, glad to live, but not afraid to die.

IMPROVED SUPER SHELL
First Gasoline to give Full Summer Mileage plus Quicker Winter Starting

Now, Super Shell gives you all the extra mileage you obtained last summer, plus quicker starting for winter driving.

Some ordinary gasolines are overloaded, for quick starting in cold weather, with light gassy parts, which you lose after your engine warms up, thereby reducing your mileage. Other ordinary gasolines are hard to start, waste fuel in starting, and also reduce your mileage.

The improved Super Shell, by Shell's new and exclusive reforming process, gives you quicker starting on the coldest day in winter, and saves, for extra mileage, the gasoline you formerly wasted in starting.

The average motorist will get one more mile per gallon this winter—over 200 extra miles.

SUPER SHELL SURE STARTS QUICKER—AND I STILL GET THE SAME EXTRA MILEAGE I GOT LAST SUMMER!
SUPER SHELL

In JUNE, Extra Mileage ... In NOVEMBER, getting Extra Mileage, too ...
What Mr. Conde, St. Louis, says above is typical of remarks we hear from Super Shell customers everywhere. All last summer, car owners told us "Super Shell has everything, but most of all—it's got mileage!" Now, in November, Super Shell users say they are still getting the same extra mileage—plus quicker starting!

WHY WAIT FOR GEORGE TO SPEND IT

Legend tells us of a Chinese ruler who decreed that at a given moment each and every one of his subjects should yell at his loudest so that the man in the moon might hear.

The great day came—and silence. Not a sound was heard in all the land except the feeble cry of one old deaf man. Everyone else kept quiet so that he himself could hear the others.

Thus we see that one more ancient discovery may be credited to the resourceful Chinese—that of "letting George do it"—the most widely used of all their gifts to civilization.

Today too many of us are waiting for George to spend it.

I am no prophet. I have no standing as an economist. And I am not a magician despite my claim that a thing can be made larger by taking away a part of it.

What do I mean?

The best way to insure capital is to spend a part of it when prices are low.

The man who spends one dollar out of ten in making business better will find the nine worth more then the ten as values rise.

Mass achievement is ever a matter of individual and co-operative action. Napoleon got his army over the Alps a man at a time. We must rescale the peaks of prosperity the same wey. The Now Is The Time To Buy Trail is our easiest path.

Each one who can must spend—and millions can spend if they but will.

While we are waiting for the release of frozen funds to start a buying wave, nineteen out of every twenty dollars in 16,655 banks are free to spend as we will. $33,695,974,000 are on deposit. This is 25 per cent more money than we had in all of our banks when we went into the World War to help save those across the sea.

Now we refuse to save ourselves.

Depression will linger if we wait to spend out of income instead of out of capital—and our capital may shrink while we wait.

Industry has signed with N. R. A. Some have signed until it hurts. The public should now sign with industry and spend some of its capital. The cow without pasture can give no milk. An industry without sales can pay no wages. Feed industry. Buy something. Build something. Let us not forget this—better an hour of work than a dollar for dole.

Capital is going to take care of the unemployed—either by buying what labor produces or by dole taxation. The choice is obvious.

And when we spend, personel selfishness should take a holiday. The chisel should not replace the golden rule as a business tool. Those who use it will help prolong depression and in the end murder quality.

Let's take a look at the Blue Eagle.

We see in its grasp the symbols of industry and action. The chisel is conspicuous by its absence. Let's remember this whenever we do business with our fellow men.

And further, neither capital nor labor should attempt in times like these to intrench itself at the expense of the common good. And no chisel should lurk in any political coat-tail. Let us have public, as well as private, unselfishness.

Ours is the richest country in all the world. It is rich in money. It is rich in market. It is rich in a necessity of replacement and repair built up by the highest standards of living the world has ever known.

Let's inflate our confidence before we inflate our currency. Let's remember that God helps those who help themselves and that Mr. Roosevelt is not likely to do more. He can't throw the forward passes and catch them too. He expects each and every one of us to play ball with him.

Let's stop nursing depression. Let's begin to count our blessings. Business is better. It is like a man with a trunk half way up stairs. It is but taking a rest before starting for the top. Let's give it a boost.

Buy Something!

Build Something!

This message is not addressed to those who cannot spend or to those who now are spending. It is addressed to the man who is jingling the slacker dollar in his pocket, little aware that it is growing less in purchasing power as prices rise.

Weasel Kills Animals by Attacking the Ear

"The weasel," writes Bishop Pontoppidan, Norse rival of Baron Munchausen, "although small, kills animals of a much larger size, as the reindeer and bear. He jumps into one of their ears when they are asleep, and adheres so fast by his teeth, that the creatures cannot disengage him. He likewise surprises eagles and heathcocks, by fixing on them, and never quitting them, even when they mount in the air, until the loss of blood makes them fall down."

Farmers and sportsmen need no such ancient chronicles of the weasel's blood-thirstiness to convince them of the animal's destructiveness to poultry and game. It is the present-day "Gyp the Blood" of wild gangsters, according to authorities.

The weasel is the smallest of all American purely carnivorous or flesh eating animals. What it lacks in size it makes up in energy and ferocity. With no reindeer liable to be roaming about, except at Christmas, this pocket edition of ferocity may have reason for an insatiable appetite. These predators, however, hunt both day and night and kill far more than they can eat—for the sheer joy of killing. Prey consists of rabbits, squirrels, rats, mice, poultry and game birds. A weasel always attacks a vital part of its victim, such as the brain, back of neck of the jugular vein on the side.

Rumania

Rumania, whose history began as a Roman colony, proclaimed its independence May 22, 1877. The World war resulted in the return of Bessarabia, which Rumania lost to Russia in 1878, and the addition of Transylvania from Hungary and of Bukovina with part of the Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh from the Austro-Hungarian empire.

Fish of Many Colors

Skillful breeding by aquarists over a long period has resulted in the many color varieties of various species of tropical fish inhabiting the tanks of the fanciers. Brilliant colors have been produced to such an extent that if some of the fish available were placed beside their ancestors brought from tropical waters it would be hard to recognize them as individuals of the same species.

Chinese Dialects

There are a number of different Chinese dialects. For all practical purposes Mandarin, the dialect spoken in the old capital, Peking, known as Peiping, is by far the most important dialect. It is the native speech of the majority of Chinese and the recognized vehicle of oral communication between all Chinese officials, even when they come from the same part of the country and speak the same patois.

Isle of Pines Beauty Spot in Caribbean Sea

The "Treasure Island" of Robert Louis Stevenson's story is reputed to be the Isle of Pines, little resort 90 miles south of Havana, Cuba, in the Caribbean sea.

The island is a favorite with Americans, and was held by the United States from the Spanish-American war until turned over to Cuba in 1925. English is the language spoken among the 8,000 residents, most of whom are white Spaniards. Much of the island is still owned by Americans. There are no railroads or trolley cars, and life is peaceful.

Plantations, pine forests, marble mountains, brilliant tropical flowers, bright-hued birds, coral reefs, and many coves and caves where corsairs hid, are features of the island. Old gold coins have been found in iron-bound chests abandoned by pirates in the labyrinthine caves.

The island is 34 by 43 miles, and the two main towns are Nueva Gerona, capital and business center on the north coast, and Santa Fe, thermal bath and resort center, 11 miles to the south, inland.

Freak Dinosaur

One kind of dinosaur, the triceratops, had a head so big that it made up about one-third of the animal's entire body.

Early Day "Women's Rights"

Before the Revolution Margaret Brent petitioned Lord Baltimore for equal rights for women in the Maryland Proprietary. During the Revolution and when the framing of the Constitution was in process, Abigail Adams, wife of the second President, lobbied to have men and women given equal rights in the new Constitution.

England's Unmarried King

England has had only one king who grew to manhood and who never married. He was William Rufus, or William II, son and successor of William the Conqueror. Edward V and Edward VI were not married, but they died without reaching their majority. There is no law which requires the king of Great Britain to be married. A prince of Wales would not have to be married in order to ascend the throne.

Ways of Carrying Mail

In Alaska mail is carried from one settlement to another and from the inland regions toward the coast by dog sleds. At the other extreme of the picture we find that a substantial part of the letter mail of the city of New York is moved through the congested sections of the city by a system of underground pneumatic tubes

Occupations for Shut-Ins

The transcription of manuscripts into Braille, basketry, weaving, the copying of manuscripts, original writing, pottery making, the preparation of designs for wall papers and textiles are among the occupations followed by persons who are not able to go out to places of employment.

Preacher's Dole

Every clergyman who preaches a sermon at St. Paul's cathedral in London is given a bottle of sherry and a loaf of bread, the gift of the Corporation of the City of London. No one knows when or how the custom originated, but it is continued because "it has always been done."

One of the First Streets

What is believed to be one of the first streets of the world has been discovered by an Austrian expedition at Merimda on the western delta of the Nile. The lines of the huts date back to about 4,000 or 5,000 B. C.

LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE WINS SWITCHING CASE

The St. Paul Live Stock Exchange finally won its long fight in behalf of the patrons of the St. Paul market in requiring defendant carriers to absorb the $4.00 per car switching charge on livestock into South St. Paul.

On January 15, 1932 the Live Stock Exchange filed complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission alleging that the assessing of $4.00 per car switching charge between St. Paul and South St. Paul, in addition to the linehaul rate, was unreasonable and discriminatory against the South St. Paul market. Hearing was held before an examiner of the Commission on May 5, 1932, at which the Exchange presented evidence to bear out the complaint. Briefs in behalf of the Exchange's case were filed by W. P. Dolan, acting as Counsel for the Exchange and also by Herman Bode, Counsel for the Railroad Commission of the State of South Dakota, intervenor. Following argument of this case before the Commission in Washington the Interstate Commerce Commission handed down a decision in favor of the St. Paul Live Stock Exchange. Defendant carriers succeeded in getting a postponement of the effective date of the Order to November 22, 1933, on their plea to reopen the case for reargument. Carriers' petition to reopen the case was finally turned down by the Commission October 17, 1933. The new tariffs, therefore, provide for the absorption of the switching charge in the line-haul rates on all railroad shipments to go into effect November 22, 1933.

Pursuant to the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission ordering the absorption on Intestate movement, the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, on Mr. Dolon's request called a hearing October 30th to determine on the question of absorption on Minnesota intrastate shipments. Following this hearing the defendant carriers signified their willingness to file tariffs with the State Commission absorbing the $4.00 per car switching charge on all standard minimum cars effective November 22. Absorption of the switching charge will, therefore, become effective on November 22nd on all standard rail cars into and out of South St. Paul.

This is a wonderful victory in behalf of the patrons of the South St. Paul market and will result in the saving of approximately $200,000.00 per year, based on the average rail receipts over the past five years.

This case is only one of many similar services that the Live Stock Exchange renders in behalf of patrons of the South St. Paul market. The Live Stock Exchange extends to all patrons of the market the use of its traffic department in any matter in which the markey patron is in need of transportation assistance. These requests may be made directly to the Exchange or thru the members old-line commission firms.

BERTHA THERSA HOPPE DIES IN EXCET TOWNSHIP THURSDAY

Shot Still Dropped

The manufacture of small shot is still carried on much as it has been for years. The work is still done in tall towers known as shot towers, varying from 100 feet high up to the tallest located in Austria, which is 249 feet high. The lead used is melted and poured into an iron collander at the top of the tower. As the lead comes out of the holes in the collander it forms into globular shape and hardens. At the bottom it lands in water which cools it. The various sizes are obtained by varying sizes of outlets in the bottom of the collander. After the shot is taken from the base of the tower it is run down an incline, which discloses any not perfect in form. The sizes are separated by the use of sieves and as final operation the shot is polished.

A minimum of 1,100,000 needy persons will be benefited directly this winter through the payment of cash allotments by members of the Civilian Conservation Corps to their dependents, according to Robert Fechner, federal director of emergency conservation work. Such cash allotments, he said, are expected to aggregate more than $35,000,000 in the months of November, December, January, February and March. Actual checks mailed October 31 to the families of men in the camps at that time totaled $7,658,306, this representing the first monthly payment for the second enrolment.

Shama Thrush Is Attractive

The shama thrush, a native of India with its coat and long tail of shiny jet black into which a few white feathers are mingled, its burnt orange breast, its alert, jet black eyes and its black beak, presents a striking appearance. It is about the size of a robin, though its body is more slender and its tail is much longer.

Glow Worm an Insect

That interesting little creature commonly known as the glow worm is really not a worm at all, but an insect, says an English scientist. The luminous worm-like individual which we recognize under the above name is the female of the species which retains its larval form in adulthood. It is the male that develops wings of a type that indicate it to be what it really is, a member of the beetle family.

Legend of the Phoenix

The Phoenix is a fabulous Arabian bird the only one of its kind, that is said to live a certain number of years, at the close of which it makes in Arabia a nest of spices, sings a melodious dirge, flaps its wings to set fire to the pile, burns itself to ashes, and comes forth with new life, to repeat the former one. The legend of the Phoenix is one which is constantly appearing in literature as an allegory of immortality.

This year the management announces that it expects entries from greater distances and an increased attendance,

The show is sponsored through the Northwest Farm school near Crookston and has substancial State backing and large attendance. Information relative to the show may be had by writing John Saugstad, Crookston, Minnesota.

Baldness

The blond or fair-haired are most susceptible to loss of hair, as are those of nervous temperament and those engaged in sedentary occupations. Inquiry has never revealed a bald American Indian, while oddly enough the fair-haired Scandinavians respond most quickly to treatment for falling hair. Baldness also is caused by worry, which would bear out the contention that nervousness and shiny petes are in a relation of cause and effect.

The Yellow Peril

The Yellow Peril was a scare, originally raised in Germany in the late nineties of last century, that the yellow races of China and Japan would in a very few years have increased in population to such an extent that incursions upon the territories occupied by the white races—followed by massacres and every conceivable horror—were inevitable.

INDEPENDENT BASKET-BALL IS BEING ORGANIZED

Independent basket-ball is getting off to a fine start this year. A number of the fellows are already putting in practice sessions at the high school gym after the high school squad finishes their practice at 9 p. m. The organization is in the early stages of organizations yet but steps have already been taken to schedule games.

E. Hollister, who is employed at the Hertz store office, is at the present time negociating for games on the independent's schedule. Other men on the squad are: Clerence Offerdahl, Merle Lindberg, Bob Boreen, Eddie Froseth and I. Hendrickson.

BOWLING TEAMS BEGIN LEAGUE COMPETITION

Bowling league play got off to a good start this week when six teams made their start for a season's record. The Soo Cafe took the jump on Hamilton's News Stand winning two out of three games. Severt Brandon lead the Soo with a score of 197 and Irving Lundell lead the News-boys with 176.

Jungs' pin smashing crew won three straight from the Red Crown, at the same time hanging up a all time record for the local alley with a score of 2440 pins bowled over. L. Hegelund was high for Jungs with a 225, and Orvis Oien second with 210. Frank Kiewel rolled 207 for the Red Crown team.

Brutrud's Clinic won three from Montgomery Word. John Johnson lead the doctors scoring with 174 and Hammrickson rolled 170 for Words.

L. H. S. HAS LOTS OF MATERIAL FOR THE BASKET BALL TEAM

It appears that the high school is not suffering from lack of basket ball material this year. It is true, as Coach Dooley has stated, that some of the boys who were on the squad last year may have a tough job holding down a regular berth this year. Some of these new prospects coming up look plenty good.

It is a rather tough break that the boys are handicapped by not having a good practice floor. The high school gym is small and the ceiling is for to low to develop any form of shooting baskets. However the boys should develop their offensive passing and fundamentals during the early season now before they get into the new auditorium later where they will be able to develop their eye for the basket and polish off their offensive attack and defensive style.

Jacksonville Public Plant Makes Profit; Two Million A Year

Speaking before the Rotary club, John T. Alsop, Jr., mayor of Jacksonville, Fla., pointed with pride to some of Jacksonville's accomplishments and to the fact that its municipally owned electric light plant already has made a net profit of $2,000,000 this year selling electricity at a minimum of one cent a kilowatt.

"Jacksonville's taxes this year have been reduced to 11½ mills on a 50 per cent valuation," he asserted. "and that is the lowest tax rate we've had in 40 years. I believe that in five years our city will be free of taxes."

Speaking in a similar vein in a radio address, Mayor Alsop said:

"Jacksonville has the distintion of having advanced in the matter of municipal ownership further than any other city in United States, for we operate our electric light plant, docks, water works, radio station, air port, golf course and studium, all of which earn a profit sufficient to pay at least two-thirrs of the cost of operating the city government."

Britain to Pay Small Amount on Debt

Washington—A small payment by Great Britain as a token that she owes the United States around $4,000,000,000 in war debts and acceptance in the same spirit by the Roosevelt administration seemed likely to be the only results of negotiations just concluded. The terms of the payment on account probably will be the same as Great Britain made on June 15, when she paid around $10,000,000.

Liquor Control Study Commission Advocates Virtual Return to 'Old Saloon' System

Would Allow "On Sale" With All Its Evils in Hotels, Clubs, Restaurants

'Off Sale' of Spirits Would be Confined to Sale at Drug Stores

DANGEROUSLY HIGH TAX IS ADVOCATED

Educational Program and Curb On Liquor Advertising Recommended

(Going the Old Saloon One Better)
(An editorial. Page four)

The report of the Minnesota Liquor Control Commission was completed Saturday and made ready to be submitted to the Legislature when it convenes in special session at the call of Governor Floyd B. Olson on December. 4th. The various control systems which the commission has studied is listed in an introductory paragraph and include:

1. State dispensary system.
2 Centralized state control thru some stote administration agency.
3. Central-local control in which the state regulates certain phases of the business but allows the municipalities to regulate others, particularly retail trade.
4. Local control.

No mention is made of whether or not the commission has considered stote manufacture and sale with the profit eliminated. The Commission recommends that all manufacturers and dealers be licensed and suggests that manufacturers shall pay $2,000 per year license; wholesalers, $500 per year; distributors, $250 per year and retailers, $100 per year. They would also have railroad companies and air transportation companies pay $10 per year for each dining car or plsno wherein liquor is served. While they would require a bond from others they think none should be required from this latter group. They do not explain why a saloon on wings or wheels should pay only one tenth the license fee required of those resting on terra firma.

Undor their plan hotels, restaurants and clubs only could be licenced to have liquor "on sale" but would not require that food must be purchased in connection with the order for liquor. The report fails to explain, why in view of this fact other business institutions could not also be licensed to sell liquor. These institutions can, under the Commission's recommendation sell only "on sale," all "off sale" would be done thrugh the drug stores. While the Commision recommends that the people of a community may prohibit the "on sale" of liquor by "local option" they recommend that "off sale" shall be stote-wide and not under the jurisdiction of the people, of the various localities.

They recommend that the law be administered by a state liquor Commissioner at a salary of $7,500 per year, and that in his department shall be five different divisions, as follows:

1.—DIVISION OF ENFORCEMENT, the duties of which are to include correlation of local enforcement with state activity.

2.—DIVISION OF FINANCE, in charge of licensing, inventories, audits and taxation.

3.—DISPENSING DIVISION, charged with the supervision and regulation of all "on sale" and "off sale" license holders.

4.—DIVISION OF REGULATION OF ADVERTISING.

5.—DIVISION OF TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

They recommend a tax on all "hard liquor" as follows:

1.—Beer having more than 2.3% alcohol, 10 cents per gallon.
3.—Sparkling wines' (7 to 14%') 60 cents per gallon.
4.—Fortified wines, (14 to 25%,) 40 cents per gallon.
5.—Liquors, (approximately 40%,) 50 cents per gallon.
6.—Whiskey, 60 cents per gallon.

They recommend that the municipalities shall be allocated 50% of the license fees, and further recommends that the Commissioner of Liquor Control shall be authorized to consult with the Stote Department of Education with reference to a program of temperance education. Their recommendations also include advice that liquor advertisements shall be restricted to a statement of the name, address, date of incorporation of the manufacturer or dealer, a coat of arms or a trade mark, and a description of the article in the most simple and direct terms. They would prohibit all outdoors, calendar, cut-rate sale, simple and radio advertising.

State Senator Victor Lawson of Willmar and four other members of the commission filed a report favaring the retention of the present statewide prohibition law.

Viebahn Makes Second Survey Of Light Plant

W. W. Viebshn, the young engineer brought in by the mayor last summer to make a survey of the power and light facilities of the city, has been here the past week making a second survey. His report of last summer was never presented to the city council, altho it was published in the papers and came in for a great deal of discussion, its correctness being questioned by local engineers.

A bill for $80 was presented to the council for his services subsequent to his report, which they have refased to pay, maintaining that they have not ordered the work done. Inquiries among the council members at the present time reveals the fact that the new survey has not been authorized by them.

Freshman-Sophmore Party Held Friday, Novmber 17

The Freshmen-Sophmore party, given by the Sophmores as the result of the Freshman victory in the initiation football game, was held last Friday night at Lincoln high school. Initiation was allowed this year only in the form of a football game between the Frosh and Sophs as a result of undecent tactics used a year ago in starting the Freshmen on their way through high school.

A feature of the evening was a mock wedding with all the frills and ceremonies, with Vernon Erickson as the bride and Erling Melby the groom. Robert Boreen entertained the party with a program of sleight of hand tricks and magical performances.

Chauffeurs Must Renew Licenses in November

In a statement from the Secretary of State's Department chauffers who want to renew their licenses for 1934 are urged to do so before December 1. The department calls attention to the section of the law which provides that chauffer's licenses can be renewed without examination only if the application is made in November. The fee is $1.00. Those who fail to apply for renewal this month must take the regular examination and pay a fee of $1.50 before license can be issued to them. The law does not permit any exception to this rule.

Application blanks, calling attention to the renewal requirement, were mailed to all chauffers before November 1, at their last known address. A great many of these have not yet been returned. Some have come back unclaimed, indicating that the person addressed has moved without giving his new address to the Secretary of State or leaving a forwarding address. Anyone who has not received his renewal blanks may have one on request.

The law reqaires that a chauffer's badge be carried by "every person who is employed for the principal purpose of driving a motor vehicle belonging to another, and every person, including the owner who drives a motor vehicle while it is in use as a carrier of persons or probably for hire." Licensed chauffers are exempt from the drivers' license law passed by the last legislature.

LARGE AUDIENCE SEE NORWEGIAN DRAMA AT THE S. OF N. HALL

Daughters of Norway Plays 'Amerikaneren' With All-Women Cast

A full house greeted the production of "Amerikaneren," a Norwegian folkplay, by the lodge of the daughters of Norway, Tuesday evening. The play which was staged at the Sons of Norway Hall deals with everyday life in the mountain valleys of Narway sixty to seventy-five years ago, and was played by members of the Daughters of Norway lodge with women taking all parts in the cast.

The story may be somewhat hackneyed, dealing as it does with the love of a "Husmandsgut," (Peon's son) for the daughter of the rich "bonde," (peasant). The girls parents oppose the match and the boy goes to America to seek his fortune. In the meantime the girl's father brings doubt into the minds of the young couple and a well-to-do factory superintendent courts the girl. However the girl will have nothing to do with him and when "Arne" returns home after six years there is some explaining, a happy reunion, the old gentlemen gives his blessing and all is well that ends well.

A full house greeted the production and altho the plot is hackneyed the story was exceptionally well presented and must have been long and seriously rehearsed to avoid the use of and English words in the dialogue.

Governors of Six Midwestern States Plan to Take Their Farm Relief Plan to Congress

Plan Rejected by Adminsittration Will Be Placed Before Solons In December.

Following the President's refusal further to consider a pricefixing and market cantrol plan for Agriculture, farm leaders and governors of midwestern states are ready to go over Roosevelt's head and carry the matter onto the floor of Congress in December. After the White House decision John Bosch, president of the Minnesota Farm Holiday association said, "No one can tell what will happen now. When a man is dying he wants to die fighting. If we know we have to die it is going to be hard to control the farmers until Congress meets.

Declaring the "Farmers will never have any security until they own the market places in which and at which their products are sold," Governor Olson futher remarked:

"Certainly the present plan can not bring agricultural prices up to parity, or to a price equal to cost of production plus a profit. And the market for wheat still remains in the hands of speculators, —beyond control of the producer. Of this I believe we convinced the President.

"To me the present plans af the Department of Agriculture represent an ineffectual tinkering with a system that has never given the farmer a fair deal and never will. At the best it can anly hope to help him as to future prices. No hope lies in it for the securing of fair prices, whether they be based an parity ar cost of producting, for the commodities naw in the possession af the farmer.

Direct Mandate fram Congress

"I believe Mr. Wallace and his colleagues to be sincere, but I believe they are more apprehensive as to the reactions in some quarters from the carrying out of our plan then they are doubtful as to the practicability of it. They are hesitant at attempting it without a direct mandate from Congress.

"I knaw that the farm leaders in the middle west apprave aur plan. I believe that the great majority af farmers apprave it. I believe that all the farmers wauld apprave it if it could be explained to them. If the same effart were used ta put it aver as is being used ta put aver the valuntary schemes af the Department af Agriculture it cauld be explained satisfactorily to the farmer.

Market on Planned Basis

"The farmers have a constitutional right to strike. As a matter of fact if all of them could and would withhold their products from the market and would market them on a planned basis, preferably through co-operative organizations of their own, the prices of farm commodities would increase.

"The fact is that they will never have any security until they own the marketing places in which and at which their products are sold."

Farmer-Labor Club to Circulate Petitions for Liquor Sale Thru State Stores Without Profit

A lively discussion of liquor control featured the meeting of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Association Club at its meeting at the court house last Friday evening. The assembled members took up the plan of control suggested by the Educational Bureau of the Farmer-Labor association point by point and adopted a resolution recommending the plan to the state legislature with one or two minor changes. Speaking on the proposed plan, Charles Hellquist stated that liquor profits have always been used to corrupt government and public morals, for manufacturers and dispensers gain in proportion to their sales. Profits from the evil is also used to corrupt the press through fat advertising contracts he said. and stated that he believes that the solution is to have the spirits manufactured and sold by the government— at cost! The liquor traffic is a monoplized industry, "and as such should be state owned and operated," he said.

Sam. Brandvold brought laughs and applause when he said. "They have broken the farming industry, and they can break the liquor industry the same way. All we have to do is to take the profit out of it."

Characterizing "on sale" systems as bringing back all the evils of the old saloon with its treating curse, the club went on record as opposed to any and all methods being advocated for "on sale," and recommended a system of "off sale" being inaugurated somewhat similar to the Swedish and Canadian systems where the spirits are sold in government liquor stores in original packages only, and for consumption off the premises. They recommend that it be manufactured by the state in as pure a form as possible and sold direct to the consumers at, or near cost, with no tax or a very small tax added. They also recommend a permit system whereby a person can buy all that he could himself consume, but no more, in order to eliminate the "hip bottle" retoiler. In their resolution they recommend that permits shall be sold at not over 25 cents per year. It was pointed out that drivers' licenses are sold by the state at 25 cents and there should be no reason why a liquor permit should be higher in price. The fact that the Congregationalist church have Mobilization of unemployed men under the new Civil Works Administration which will put 2000 people to work in this district of the National Reemployment Service was begun early this week, Arnie Solem announced this morning.

"Approximately $20,000 has been alloted to Pennington county," Mr. Solem said. Work was started this morning on graveling 2½ miles on C. A. R. No. 15. The gravel is being taken from the Carl Finstad pit. All gravel will be hauled with teams and loaded by manpower.

In this county the County Board and County Engineer direct the Civil Works Administration with all employees being selected through the National Reemployment office. The allotment of men for Pennington county is 182, Mr. Solem stated, following his return from St. Paul where he and the County Engineer attended the explanatory administration meeting, designed to get the work under way immediately. Marshall and Kittson counties are outlining large graveling projects that will be undertaken immediately, Mr. Solem said.

All of these projects are paid for by the national government in special grants to counties that will put 4,000,000 men to work by December 15 at a cost of $400,000,000.

Registrations for this work will be taken at Goodridge Friday, Nov 24, and St. Hilaire Saturday, Nov. 25. The local office will continue to receive registrations.

SKATING RINK BEING SET UP FOR WINTER

Ticket Sale Will Be Started Monday; Campbell Asks Support

Patting up the fence surrounding the American Legion skating rink was completed Wednesday afternoon and the lighting fixtures were to be set up this morning, according to Alex Campell chairman of the rink committee.

The rink was enlarged this year by widening it so that 2600 square feet of ice will be added to the original skating surface. "This addition will accomodate more skaters and is expected to increase interest as well as spur public support of the project," Mr. Campell said. Work of building up a skating surface will begin just as soon as weather permits; he said.

Ticket sales will start on Monday costing; 50c for children, 75c for high school students, $1.50 for women, $2.00 for men or a family ticket for $3.00. He urges every one to support this project and to cooperate with the Legion to make it a success.

Co-chairmen of the sale will be Oscar Paulson and Haakon Olson.

97 Cars Thanksgiving Turkey; Are Shipped

Ninety-seven cars, over 1,900,000 pounds of turkeys, were shipped from Thief River Falls during the Thanksgiving turkey pool this season. RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA COMPLETE

Roosevelt and Litvinoff End the Two Nations' 16-Year Breach.

Washington—Recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States was announced by President Roosevelt and for the first time in 16 years, a soviet official, Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinow, was host to a group of high administration officials, entertaining them at luncheon. Although showered with telegrams of congratulations and good will from prominent Americans, business was not forgotten by the commissar. He has some serious problems to settle before returning to Moscow. He began a series of conferences on trade, debts and claims with Undersecretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr.. Russia has heartily approved the appointment of William C. Bullitt as the first American ambassador to the soviet union. Bullitt is popular in Moscow, where he is regarded in much the same way that colonial Americans idolized Lafayette. The jocular, youthful Philadelphian tried in the infancy of the soviet union to convince President Woodrow Wilson and the allied statesmen at Versailles that the new Russia should be taken into the family of nations. He failed, but the Russians did not forget his efforts. It is expected that millions in trade will pour between the two nations.

Alexander Antonovitch Troyanovsky, former ambassador to Japan and now vicechairman of the Soviet State planning commission, will be Russia's first ambassador in Washington.

JU I)R FARMER-LABOR ASSN. GROWS RAPIDLY

Evidence that the youth of Minnesota is turning its attention to public affairs is seen by the reception the Junio rFarmer-Labor Association is receiving among the younger citizens of the state.

Local associations have been formed in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Buffalo, Stillwater, Columbia Heights and Benson, and are under way in several other Minnesota towns.

Meant to be a supplementary wing of the senior asociation, the Junior group will enlist the young to vote. The healthy reception of the Junior Association is evidence of the need for a younger wing.

Another important Farmer-Labor club of young people is the University of Minnesota branch formed last month. This organization, composed at present of progressive student leaders, will study the economic and political significance of the movement and will seek to show the value of the Association to the students and faculty members of the University of Minnesota.

RURAL CREDIT BUREAU SALES SHOW INCREASE

During the months July, August and September, 126 farms were sold under the direction of the Rural Credit Department, as compared with 318 farms sold during the entire former period of the Department's existence.

The Department has in its possession some $65,000,000 of investments in farms and farm mortgages. During September 74 farms were sold, the largest number in the history of the Department.

The upturn in the number of sales has been regarded as an indication of the increase in demand for farm land. According to T. H. Arens, Conservator of Rural Credit, land values have hit bottom and people realized that now is the time to buy farm lands.

Most of the purchases were made by former owners of the property.

3 BIG CITIES VOTE FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IN NOV. ELECTION

GRAIN FUTURES ACT UPHELD

The validity of the Grain Futures Act, under which the grain exchanges of the country are regulated by the Federal government, was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States on October 9, when it refused to review the decision of the Seventh District Court of Appeals sustaining the law. The ruling ended the fight of four Chicago grain brokerage firms to escape the provisions of the act requiring brokers to report their transactions in futures to the government. The brokers declared the act constituted an unwarranted invasion of their private rights.

FARMER-LABOR CLUB SPONSOR PETITIONS FOR LIQUOR PLAN

gone on record favoring this same plan was brought out at this meeting.

It was decided to send copies of the resolution containing the plan with the proposed minor changes to each of the members of the House of Representatives, J. O. Melby of Oklee and W. E. Day of Bagley, and to the State Senator, Mrs. Laura Naplin of the 65th District as well as to the Governor and to the presiding officers of the two houses of the legislature. The group also decided to circulate petitions containing their plan among the people to be sent to the legislature as soon as it convenes.

The Forum is printing a petition on page six of this issue and all favoring the F-L plan are requested to clip the petition, attach it to a paper and sign it, getting as many signers as they can to go on with them and to send it in to the Forum office. All that are received will be forwarded to the members of the legislature from this district for presentation to both houses when the session convenes on December 4th.

The plan advocated by the Farmer-Labor Educational Bureau will be found in the "Liberal Digest" column on page four of this issue.

SWITCHING CHARGES ON STOCK SHIPMENTS ARE DISCONTINUED

As a result of an agreement between the railroad companies and the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission, announced today, shippers of livestock to South St. Paul will not be required to pay a switching charge of $1.00 per carload to the St. Paul Bridge and Terminal Railway Company after November 22. By the same agreement, the railroads will absorb or pay $4.00 of the $4.65 switching charge per carload applicable to the movement of livestock to the Cudahy Packing Plant near Newport and will pay in full the charge of $1.80 per carload on all shipments to the McMillan Plant on the Upper Levee.

There has been a great deal of dissatisfaction among livestock shippers and farmers concering the switching charges at South St. Paul, and a bill was passed by the last session of the Legislature to compel the railroads to absorb the switching charges on all intrastate shipments but the Railroad and Warehouse Commission did not deem it advisable to attempt to enforce this law until after the Interstate Commerce Commission, which had under advisement switching charges on interstate shipments, made its decision. Otherwise, friction betwen the Federal and the State Commissions might have resulted, detrimental to the interests of the farmers and livestock shippers.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was handed down recently, does not require the railroads to "absorb" the switching charges on livestock moving to the Cudahy plant at Newport or the McMillan plant on the Upper Levee, but by reason of the agreement now made with the railroads by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, those charges are also eliminated, except for a fraction of the charge to Newport.

The "absorbtion" rule is only applicable to state and interstate shipments of livestock moving on regular carload minimums.

SWEEDISH KING GIVES MEDAL TO HIGHWAY PATROL OFFICER

Lieutenant Glen Dahl of the Minnesota Highway patrol has been honored by King Gustav of Sweden with the "Vasa Medal in Gold," John P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol has been advised by M. Hallenborg, Swedish vice counsul in Minneapolis.

"I have the honor to inform you that His Majesty, the King of Sweden, in view of the excellent work of a detachment of the State Highway patrol during Count Folke Bernadotte's visit to Minnesota last summer, and particularly as a mark of appreciation of the services rendered by the officer in charge, Lieutenant Glen Dahl, has been pleased to bestow upon him the Vasa medal in gold," Mr. Hallenborg advised Chief Arnoldy.

Lieutenant Dahl lives in Minneapolis . He is well known in North Central and Northeastern Minnesota, where he was on duty during the past three years.

Arrangements are being made for the ceremony of award, probably in the headquarters of the patrol in the Highway department building in St. Paul.

'SEAPORTS' IN THE MAKING

Press dispatches from Washington announce that the Public Works administration has allowed $15,500,000 to Peck dam and reservoir in east Montana, designed to assume an adequate flow of water for navigation on the Missouri river. Kansas City sponsors of the Missouri river development say the construction will make "seaports" of such Missouri Valley cities as their own, St. Joseph Mo., Omaha, Neb., and Sioux City, Ia., opening new and cheaper transportation for the products of agriculture and industry by assuring a nine-foot channel in the Missouri from the Mississippi to Sioux City and perhaps farther.

Senator Clark of Missouri is quoted as saying that he was assured by President Roosevelt that the entire Missouri river project, including Fort Peck reservoir, will be carried out, but that only funds to take care of immediate work will be allocated at present.

FARMER-LABOR PARTIES WILL BE FORMED THRU MIDWEST BY LEAGUE FOR POLITICAL ACTION

Dr. John Dewey of the Columbia University, president of the League for Independent Political Action of which Howard Y. Williams of St. Paul, one of the Farmer-Labor candidates for Congress in 1932, is national director, announced last week that immediate action would be taken to organize Farmer-Labor parties in mid western states.

The purpose of the movement will be to attack the agricultural crisis through co-operative action in organizing the various state branches of the party, according to the announcement.

Williams has just returned from a months survey of the agricultural situation in the mid-west. "After a series of personal conferences with farm, labor unemployed and progressive political leaders in Wisconsin, Iowa, the two Dakotas and Michigan," he said, "we have made the decision to encourage and assist them in launching Farmer-Labor parties in the key states."

In order to concentrate in the midwest, the office of the national director of the league will be moved to St. Paul shortly.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS IN U. FARM COURSE

That the modern homemaker faces a big responsibility is clearly brought out in a recent statement by Miss Wylle B. McNeal, chief in home economics, University Farm. In her invitation to Minnesota homemakers to attend the annual Homemakers Week, January 15 to 20, Miss Mc Neal says:

"Think of the important link you represent between your family and the better things which modern civilization offers for living. The new Knowledge of foods for health will benefit your family only if you learn to apply it. The same is true of better things in home comforts, in home facilities for reading; recreation, and other phases of right family living. As the family buyer, you must know how to spend wisely, if your family is to enjoy the most from what ever income it has to spend."

The Homemakers course will help prepare the homemaker for her responsibilites. A few of these subjects are: Home Accounting; Buying of Cotton Fabrics; Canning Demonstration—Fruits and Vegetables; When to buy and when to sew; Use of New Patterns; Using Less tender Cuts of Meat; Books and Magazines for Children; Prenatal Care and Confinement; Canning and Preservation of Meats.

All together about 30 talks will be given on the Homemakers seperate program. In addition, women will be welcome at any of the 150 or more agricultural classes, and at the numerous general meetings and entertainment sessions which are a part of Farmers and Homemakers' Week. County extension agents and high school agricultural or home economics teachers can give information.

YOUNG CREAMERYMEN PREPARING TO STUDY

A full attendance is assured for the Six Weeks' Creamery Course at University Farm, St. Paul, which begins January 3, says Prof. W. B. Combs. Up to the middle of November, he had approved approximately 20 applications, out of the 24 which the course can accommodate.

Those accepted include young creamerymen from Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin and other states, who want to fit themselves for promotions to creamery managerships through the intensive study of such subjects as buttermaking, dairy bacteriology, milk and cream testing, creamery accounting, creamery arithmitic and creamery mechanics.

This short course will be the only one offered by the University Farm Dairy Division this year, the short courses for advanced buttermakers and ice cream makers have been abandoned because of reduced University budgets. Likewise the requirements for entry to the Six Weeks' course have been tightened. Only men of real promise who can pass a written examination are being accepted. Any one wishing information may write Prof. W. B. Combs, Dairy division, University Farm St. Paul.

PROMINENT WOMEN WILL SPEAK AT THE NORTHWEST SCHOOL FARMERS' WEEK

An attractive program has been arranged for the women's meetings held in connection with the Northwest School Farmers' Week. Women of prominence in civic and public health matters have accepted invitations to speak. Mrs. Chas. S. Mitchell of Duluth will give two addresses on Tuesday, discussing "What the New Deal Means to Women" and Women and World Peace." Club women and others who have heard Mrs. Mitchell are enthusiastic over her engagement here.

At the request of women's organizations, Mrs. W. W. Fuller of Fargo has been invited to feature the Wednesday's program and will read "Elizabeth, the Queen" and A Lantern in Her Hand." Mrs. Fuller is a pleasing reader and will delight her Crokston audiences.

Health day will be observed on Thursday with Dr. Esther McGinnis, head of the Parent Education Department of the University of Minnesota. Dr. McGinnis, an authority on child training, will in addition to her two adresses put on an interesting exhibit of charts and books on child training of interest to parents.

Miss Bess M. Rowe, formerly of the Department of Home Economics at the Northwest School, now on the editorial field service of The Farmer's Wife publication of St. Paul, wil be the headline attraction for the women's program on Friday. Miss Bess Rowe will be welcomed back to Crookston by a host of friends who know her.

The music and entertainment features of the women's meetings will be on the same high plane as in former years. Musical organizations and artists from Crookston and various parts of the Red River Valley have been invited to appear on the program.

MINNESOTA MUNICIPALITIES TO MEET AT CROOKSTON DEC. 14

Municipal officials from eleven counties in the northwestern section of Minnesota will attend a regional conference sponsored by the League of Minnesota Municipalities in cooperation with the city of Crookston on December 14.

Invitations have been sent to 62 cities and villages within driving distance of Crookston. In addition to city and village officials, delegates are expected from counties and townships. Mayor W. J. Kirkwood of Crookston is extending invitations on behalf of his city. Any person interested in municipal government is cordially invited to attend.

Delegates in attendance will be able to combine this meeting with the attractions of the Red River Valley Winter Shows which will be in sesion for five days, December 11 to 15, inclusive. Following the procedure at previous regional conferences, no formal program has ben arranged, although it is expected that Senator Henrik Shipstead, who will be a great guest at the shows, will meet with the municipal officials at one session.

Tha Crookston conference, like previous conferences at Benson and New Ulm, will permit the officials in cities and villages within a reasonable driving distance to meet together and consider informally the governmental problems common to all. In all probability these subjects will include: poor relief, tax delinquency, municipal public works as affected by federal grants, re-employment and wages, the N. R. A., and local governments, position of municipalities when the eighteenth amendment is repealed, special assessments, public utility rates, and revenues and taxation.

League officials, including Dr. R. R. Price, Secretary-Treasurer, M. B. Lambie, Exective Secretary and A. Fuller, League attorney, will be present to participate in a round table forum conducive to a ready exchange of experience and reference. Every person will be given an opportunity to raise question and enter into discussions.

Crim will serve as judges of this contest.

Other educational contests are being scheduled for 4-H club members under the supervision of H. A. Pflughoeft, district club leader.

As a fitting climax of the day's activies, a banquet and appropriate program with presentation of trophies to winners is being arranged by E. R. Clark and H. A. Pflughoeft.

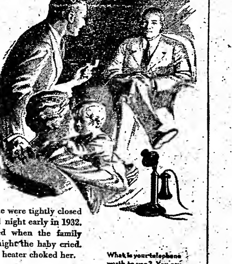
"We found out that night what a Telephone is worth"



An actual incident from a community served by this Company, showing how one telephone call may be worth more than telephone service costs in a lifetime.

Doors and windowa of their home were tightly closed to keep out the icy gale of a cold night early in 1932. The fire in the heater was banked when the family retired for the night. About midnight the baby cried. Her mother awoke, fumes from the heater choked her.

She roused her husband . . . fell back unconscious. He was barely able to reach the telephone and call for a doctor before he was overcome. That call brought help in time to save their lives.

What is your telephone worth to you? You pay a few cents a day for your telephone — it brings you friends and leisure and may add years to your life.

GOING THE OLD SALOON ONE BETTER.

We have just completed a study of the liquor control plan recommended by the Liquor Control Commission appointed by Governor Olson some time ago, and which made their report and recommendations last Saturday. This commission was supposed to be composed of the "best minds," the "leading citizens" of Minnesota. Sixty of 'em. If their suggestion is the best that our leading citizens can devise to correct the evils of liquor, then it's about time that the common ordinary plunks be given an opportunity to try their hand at it, or God help Minnesota. After reading it we take a great deal of satisfaction in the fact that we are not rated among the "best people" and associate mostly with the "mugwumps," "bog savages" and "timber beasts." We can't think of one of them that could bring out such an assinine report under the name of "control." As a control plan we can believe that even a bartenders convention would offer it with profound apologies.

If the commission had set out with the deliberate intention of formulating a plan for the return of the old time saloon with a few extra evils added, they could hardly have succeeded better than they have with the plan they recommend. They lead off their report with the statement that they have studied all and sundry liquor plans, but they seem to have lost sight of the fact that 90 per cent of the evils of the liquor traffic in the old saloon days was a direct result of the "on sale" feature. They have apparently also overlooked the fact that every country that has experimented with liquor control until it has found a reasonably acceptable plan, bar all on sale, or sale by the drink, and allow sale in licensed or state liquor stores, and in sealed an unbroken packages only. They do not allow drinking on the premises where it is sold. But the commission would go the old saloon one better. While liquor was easily obtainable in the old days in bar rooms, they would allow it to be sold in the hotel and cafe dining rooms, on the railway diners and even in the crowded quarters of a passenger airplane.

While they would have the spirits sold and consumed freely among the women and children in hotels and restaurants, they take great precaution with the "off sale" part of their plan. Altho the sale of liquor in bottles, for consumption off the premises was never an evil during the old saloon days, they very carefully confine this part of the dispensing of liquor to retail drug stores, because as they say "they have experience in the handling of alcoholic beverages." May we ask just what particular experience is necessary to wrap up a bottle of liquid, whether that liquid be whiskey or vinegar?

Speaking of taxation, they say: "Taxation should be low in order to keep the price of alcoholic beverages within the reach of those who wish to buy it through legal sources and to eliminate the illegal wish to buy it through legal sources and traffic." After getting this bit of wisdom off their chests they recommend a tax of 60 cents per gallon. That's $60 per hundred gallons. Rum-runners are hauling it 200 miles or more for a lot less than that now, according to the best "underworld" information we can get. Yet they think it would eliminate the illegal traffic.

They recommend that "no intoxicating liquors should be sold to minors, and none be sold to intoxicated persons." What a concession! Those things were illegal in the old saloon days and are illegal now in the case of beer dealers. But, who is to be the judge of when a person is intoxicated? Who will gainsay the youth of eighteen or twenty years that claims to be twenty-one, when there is a nickle in profits to be made?

The commission recommends that advertising be restricted; a needless provision, for no self-respecting newspaper took liquor advertising in the old days and none will today.

The commission has fallen down miserably. Their report is an insult to every thinking citizen, and we hope that the governor will throw it back in their faces.

The profit is the root evil of the liquor traffic, and the commission knows it, and knew it when they penned their abominable report. The profit motive is what made the old saloon impossible and the profit motive made prohibition a failure. Liquor profits corrupted government, from the small city councils to the National congress in the days of the saloon as well as in the days of prohibition, and liquor profits would do the same thing under the plan advocated by the commission. Liquor and prostitution went hand in hand in the old days and who will maintain that hotels will not be turned into brothels under the commission's plan?

The commission seems to be under the impression that we are concerned with some formula for legalizing the liquor traffic. We are not. To legalize it is easy, what the American people want is a system of control that will make it easily obtainable for those that insist upon having it, and yet will discourage the traffic in it, to the end that it be finally completely abolished because no one wants it.

That can only be done by taking the profit out of it. Let it be manufactured by the state in the purest possible form so that no manufacturer can reap profits to be used to corrupt government and public morals. Let it be sold to those adults that must have it, in an amount as large as any person can reasonably expect to consume, so cheap that no dealer can hope to compete. Then, and not until then, will we be approaching a solution of the liquor evil. And yet, that will not solve the problem entirely. Only education and a revamping of the social structure to abolish total idleness and abject poverty can finally rid the world of the curse, and to that objective let us set our faces with renewed determination.

Would but some winged Angel ere too late.
Arrest the yet unfolded Roll of Fate,
And make the stern Recorder otherwise
Enregister, or quite obliterate!

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire.
Would not we shatter it to bits—and then
Remold it nearer to the Heart's desire!

YES—COOPERATION PAYS.

(St. Louis Co. Independent))Hibbing)

Here is an interesting fact, appearing in a bulletin of the American Cotton Cooperative Association: During the past half-dozen years cooperative gins have handled, on the average, more than twice as much cotton as the average for all gins. They have made money in many instances where other gins have failed, and a large part of the money received by them has been returned to the growers in the form of patronage dividends. In addition, the cooperative gins have improved cotton quality through installing the best and most modern machinery and achieving the highest standards of service.

This is just one more testimonal to the achievements of farm cooperatives— whether they deal in cotton or wheat or dairy products or fruit. They've revolutionized old methods and banished ancient and fallacious ideas. They've shown the progressive farmer which side his bread is buttered on. They've demonstrated beyond argument that disorganized farmers are farmers on their way to the receiver's court—and that organization can bring agriculture more permanent worth than all the farm relief schemes ever proposed.

An extrodinary high percentage of cotton farmers sell their product to cooperative gins, and they get a substantially better price as a result. There's a tip in that for other classes of farmers, who aren't so well organized. Cooperation has passed beyond the theory point and its success is a matter of cold statistics.

AN UNDAUNTED LEADER

St. Louis County Independent

The settlement of the strike at the Hormel packing plant at Austin this week can be attributed to the work of an undaunted leader, a man who has shown himself to be able to cope with any and every situation that has arisen, Governor Floyd B. Olson, who personally took charge of the situation and proposed an arbitration agreement that was accepted by the strikers.

This is not saying, however, that the strike was not justified, as there is no question but that the employees of the plant had grievances and were within their rights in odopting the only methods available to bring the matter to a head.

Governor Olson is an outstanding friend of the laboring men and the farmers and he can be depended upon to see to it that they recieve a square deal in ever controversy; he is the one man in Minnesota upon whom the workers and the farmers have pinned their ftaih, and he is big enough to retain the confidence reposed in him.

Plan For Liquor Control Advanced by Educational Bureau, F-L Association

It is almost certain that national prohibition will be repealed by next month. Only a few more states are needed to make repeal complete. It is time for the people of Minnesota to decide what sort of liquor situation they want after national prohibition is gone.

Do we want an entirely uncontrolled sale of liquor in Minnesota, or do we want to put the sale of liquor under a control plan? Most of the people who voted against prohibition did so because of the sale of illegal liquor and crime that came with prohibition. They do not want an uncontrolled situation, they want something that will better the situation, and better than the condition that existed before prohibition.

Repeal olone will not solve the liquor problem. Consider for a moment what the result would be if uncontrolled sale of liquor were allowed in Minnesota. The open, legal saloon would return. Liquor interests would make large sums of money out of the sale of liquor, and would reach a position of political and economic power. Liquor advertising and the promotion of business by liquor interests, would tend to stimulate the largest possible sale of liquor, and powerful interests would be operating to make hard drinkers of as many people as possible.

Is it not possible that we would have even more drunkenness, more crime, more auto accidents, and heavier taxes for crime prevention?

We need a control plan, to put the sale of liquor on a controlled basis at the start, in order to avoid the evils of an uncontrolled liquor traffic. After studing the results of liquor control throughout the world, Educational Bureau has reached the opinion that the best plan is to put the sale of hard liquor directly under the control of the government, by means of a state-owned system of liquor sales. This is a plan that has been tried in many counties and has worked well in most cases.

It eliminates the power of private interests, and garantees that the liquor business will be conducted in a way that will serve the best interests of the people, and not the interests of private profit from the sale of liquor.

We believe that this plan will appeal to both wets and drys as offering the best control of the liquor trade that is possible under present conditions.

THE PLAN IN BRIEF

1. Strong liquor should be sold only by a system of state owned stores, or dispensaries. Dispensaries should sell liquor only in bottles not by the drink, and no drinking allowed in the dispensary.
2. Light liquor, such as 3.2 beer, should be sold by private sellers, as at present.
3. Liquor should be sold at low price, and with a low tax, in order to eliminate the bootlegger by underselling him.
4. Local communities should decided by local option whether or not they shall have a dispersary.
5. There should be education in the public school on the effects of liquor.
6. There should be a system of permits, to prevent sales in quantity.

THE DETAILS OF THE PLAN

1. Strong liquor should be sold only by a system of state-owned stores, or dispensaries. Dispensaries should sell liquor only in bottles, not by the drink, and no drinking should be allowed in the dispensaries.

Eliminates Private Profit

This has many advantages. First, and most important, it takes the private profit out of liquor business. When liquor is sold by private sellers, anxious to make a profit, they naturally want to sell as much liquor as possible. They try to encourage business, and that is bad for temperance. A state-owned system would not be interested in making a profit. It would not advertise, it would not try to increase sales. It would not try to stimulate an appetite for liquor in those who do not want to drink. A state-owned system would be run for public service, to eliminate the undesirable features of the liquor trade, and not for private profit.

Since a state-owned system would not be run for a profit it would sell only good quality, pure liquor, tested by experts. These would have no reason to try to pass off low quality or poisonous liquor onto the public in order to increase profits.

Eliminates The Saloon

Second, this plan prevents the return of the saloon. The state dispensary would not be a place for drinking, but simply a store, selling liquor in bottles. Under this plan people would be able to buy liquor, drink it at home, or with other friends, use it for hospitality, but the saloon would not exsist. The social atmosphere of the saloon and the custom of treating were the cause of much of the excessive drinking in the days of the saloon.

Sale of Liquor Under Direct Control

Third, the state-owned system would be under direct control. The men working in state stores would be state employees, and responsible for running the store in the right way and not allowing any abuses. Since they would not be making any profit out of the business, they would not be tempted to sell liquor to children, to enter into business alliances with vice, or to follow any of the bad trade practices that were sometimes carried on in the days of the saloon.

Finally, a state-owned system would be a planned, unified system, without the expenses of competition and duplication of facilities that are often found in private business. It could buy in quantity, and ship in quantity. Therefore state ownership would be the most economical way of handling the liquor at lowest price.

A low price for liquor is necessary, in order to eliminate bootlegging.

2. Light liquor, such as 3.2 beer, should be sold by private sellers as at present.

Many people who drink like to buy their drinks with their meals, or they want to buy a drink at a time, instead of by the bottle. They like to sit at a table with friends, and enjoy themselves in a social atmosphere.

Under this plan they would be able to do so, if they drink light liquor. Light liquor would be sold by private sellers, in restaurants, beer parlors, and so on, just as it is sold now.

Would Tend to Substitute Light Liquor for Hard Liquor.

This would have two good effects. First, it would encourge the use of light liquor instead of strong spirits, because it would be easier and more convenient to get the light liquor.

Would Eliminate the Speakeasy.

Second, it would help to eliminate the speakeasy. If no way is provided for people to drink in social surroundings, some people will buy liquor by the drink in an illegal saloon instead of getting it by the bottle in the state dispensary. But if it is possible and convenient to drink light liquor in a restaurant or beer parlor they will go there, instead of taking a chance on a low quality bootleg liquor in a speakeasy.

3. Liquor should be sold at a low price, and with a low tax, in order to eliminate the bootlegger by underselling him.

State controlled dispersaries have been tried in many counties, and experience has shown that bootleg liquor is sold in quantities under the best system of control if the price is high. The only way to eliminate the bootlegger is to undersell him.

It is not hard to undersell the bootlegger, because a legal state-owned system can make liquor and distribute it much cheaper than the bootleggers can. But if a very high tax is added on to the price of liquor the bootlegger can undersell the legal liquor.

Bootlegging has two bad effects. It destroys control, and it cuts down revenue.

Bootlegging Destroys Temperance

First of all, it destroys control. Temperance cannot exist while the bootlegger is in business. He makes a private profit, and he tries to sell as much liquor as possible. He sells to children, or to anyone who will buy it. Bootlegging destroys law enforcement. It hurts not only the enforcement of liquor laws, but the enforcement of all laws. City racketeers, especially, are interested in other kinds of law-breaking besides the liquor trade. The money they make on liquor makes it possible for them to protect themselves from the law while they carry on other illegal activities.

Bootlegging Cuts Down Tax Income

Second, bootlegging cuts down revenue. It is a proven fact that a high liquor tax brings less money to the government than a low tax. If there is a high tax the bootlegger gets the business, and he pays no tax at all.

Laws against bootlegging can't stop bootlegging. They have been tried and they have failed. As long as the bootlegger is making plenty of money he can evade the laws.

The only way to get rid of bootlegging is to undersell him. Therefore, in order to promote temperance, in order to eliminate low grade and poisonous liquor, and in order to get the highest possible tax revenue on alcohol, the tax should be low and the price the same.

4. Local communities should decide by local option whether or not they shall have a dispensary.

This is desirable of course. If a community doesn't want a dispensary, the state should not force it to have one. Each district should decide by majority vote whether of not to have a dispensary. Dry sections that don't want dispensaries won't have them.

Citizens of a section that has voted dry should be allowed to buy liquor from the state store in the nearest community that has a dispensary if they want to drink.

The option question should be on the ballot every two years, so that if a community changes its mind, and wants to bring in a dispensary or take out the local dispensary it can vote on the matter again. It would be wrong to force a community to decide once and for all on this question.

5. There should be education in the public schools on the effects of liquor.

Education is the best way of promoting true emperance. The prohibition way has been tried and it has failed, but education offers a hope of teaching voluntary self-control.

6. There should be a system of permits, to prevent sales in quantity.

The permit system has been tried in many counties, and works well, if it is not used to cut down the amount of liquor a man may drink. Under the permit system, each customer of a state store has a permit, which allows him to buy a certain amount of liquor each month, and no more.

A permit system should be used, but it should allow each customer to buy all the liquor that a man could reasonably want to use. The only reason for permits is to keep bootleggers from buying in wholesale quantities.

Stop Quantity Sales to Bootleggers

Naturally, if a bootlegger could buy plenty of liquor at a low cost from a state store he could cut it and re-sell it a drink at a time in a speakeasy or he could sell it in dry districts. It would be a sorry joke for the state to furnish cheap liquor for bottleggers. But under a permit system any man could buy as much liquor as he might want, but no one

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

By Olaf Braatelien, Crosby, N. D.

The forgotten man. Some reference was made to him in the last presidential campaign. The inference was that he was to be remembered after the election.

We were not sure then just who was refered to. Some even said there was no forgotten man. Now we know better.

There is such a man of importance. He is one of God's noblemen. He is a benefactor to mankind because he makes food-producing crops grow where they never grew before. He is a patriot because he furnished food that won the War. He is a Chrisian because he is his brothers keeper —he supplies his brother with necessaties of life. He labors on and on to help God answer the prayer of the world "Give us this day our daily bread."

But go to his home and you will see tiny, skinny hands of underfed children reaching up into a bare cupboard for things that they need but cannot have. You will see a mother still young yet old, who knows what it is to go without things that she needs. Amidst plenty you will see all about that home evidence of deprivation, want, and malnutrition,— the pitiful plight of poverty.

For this man there is no protective code, no NRA. He has to pay what is asked of him for what he buys and take what he can get for what he has to sell. His is the only business in the world wherein one must buy everything he has to buy at retail prices and sell everything he has to sell at wholesale prices. Others are living off the bounty which the government forces this man to pay. Manipulation, profiteering and greed and not the law of supply and demand control the process of his products.— It has long been thus.

"Bowed by the weight of centuries he leans
Upon his hoe and gazes on the ground,
The emptiness of ages in his face,
And on his back the burden of the world."

The forgotten man. He lives out in the country. He is the farmer.

could buy in lots large enough to bootleg.

The permit system should not be used to cut down the permitted amount of liquor below the amount a man might want to drink. In some countries this has been tried, in an effort to cut down the consumption and promote temperance. But the result is to promote bootlegging. If people can't get enough liquor from the legal system they get it otherwise. This has been the experience of many countries.

If we want temperance in Minnesota we must not leave any place for the bootlegger.

Advantages of the Plan

After studying the results of many different liquor control plans the Bureau believes that this plan would produce good results, and that it would be the best plan for Minnesota. It is better than the private saloon system for it takes the profit out of the liquor business. It puts liquor directly under state control. It eliminates the bootlegger, and the law breaking that goes with bootlegging. It provides pure liquor, sold under best conditions, for those who want to drink. It will not stimulate drinking by those who don't want to drink. It will encourge temperance, and encourge the use of light liquor instead of hard liquor. Through local option it allows districts where the people vote dry to remain dry, and it provides the best protection for dry districts by eliminating bootlegging.

It will not prevent all abuse of liquor, but it offers a good workable plan for reducing the abuse of liquor to the smallest possible amount and promoting temperance.

It will provide the largest possible revenue by keeping the price of liquor directly under control and making the profit and the tax both state revenue. It eliminates the economic and political power of private liquor interests.

Finally, this plan would get away from the bad effects of the restrictions of prohibition. In many countries besides United States it has been found that prohibition has a tendency to increase drinking. If people are not allowed to have a thing they want it. If liquor must be gotten illegal it becomes interesting.

To promote temperence, liquor should be taken as a matter of course People should know that if they want liquor they can get it, in a perfectly legal way. Then liquor will become much less interesting; there will not be any achievement about getting it, and people will pay less attention to it. Those who drink will be more inclined to drink moderately, and those who don't drink won't be excited by the illegal atmosphere of alcohol, and tempted to drink by the thrill of doing something that is forbidden.

TELLS HOW TO MAKE VEGETABLES TEMPTING

How much enjoyment, and to a large extent the amount of actual nourishment, that the family will get from its supply of home canned vegetables this winter will depend on how these vegetables are served, says Miss Inez M. Hobart, foods specialist of the home demonstration staff, University Farm, St. Paul.

A bulletin recently written by Miss Hobart, tells how to serve canned vegetables attractively. "Each vegetable has its own characteristic oder, color, flavor, and texture," she explains. Conserve these and you will make vegetables popular in your home." She also tells how to avoid losing the minerals and vitamins that are so vital to health.

General directions for preparing vegetables to numerous recipes for preparing certain vegetables in ways that are new and unusually pleasing. Any housewife may have a free copy of this bulletin by asking a county or home demonstration agent, a high school home economics teacher, or by writing the Bulletin Office, University Farm St. Paul, for Special Bulletin 159.

Jon in good old Norse fashion served strong drink and the Norwegian "Kognak" was too strong for Petterson, it just plumb took the mustaches off him. The situation became desperate until he had made a trip out to the dressing room and applied more glue.

PETITION FOR CONTROL PLAN

To the Honorable Members of the Legislatnre of the State of Minesota:

We the undersigned hereby respectfully request the Legislature of the State of Minnesota to enact a liquor control law in the line with the plan advanced by the Farmer-Labor Education Bureau whereunder intoxicating liquor would be manufacturedby the State and sold in State liquor stores under a permit system, eliminating profits and taxes as far as possible. Such a system would eliminate the present illicit manufacture and sale and put an end to the greatest evils of the liquor traffic. We unhesitatingly condemn any return to the old saloon system under any guise and oppose any plan for "on sale" of intoxicants,

THREATEN TO STRIKE AND STOP THE TRUCKS

Allege N R S Committee Told Them to Go Home and "Feed the Cows"

A group of angry farmers from Badger township, Polk county was in the city yesterday to file complaint and protest against alleged unfair tactics by the relief administration in their community, with the local NRS manager. They have held organized meetings the last two or three days, Mr. Nienaher, their spokesman and chairman of their organization told a Forum representative and have already a large and militant membership.

The delegation that visited this city were a committee to protest with the NRS manager, Mr. Solem, against the use of trucks for graveling highway number 174. The trucks are running on 100 hour allotments, Mr. Nienaber said, "and not a single truckdriver is on the preferred list and entitled to aid." Gravel is being hauled a distance of about thirteen miles another member of the group said altho there is gravel suitable for roadmaking within short hauling distance. The group demands that the trucks be taken off at once and teams be substituted on 60 hour allotments. "We have complained to the NRS committees in our community," said Nienaher, "and they refuse to heed us. We have decided to go over their heads and come direct to the head office here with our grievance. We believe that Mr. Solem is fair and will see that we are treated right."

"When one of the boys went to the local committee and asked for work, he was asked if he had any cows. When he said 'yes', they told him to go home and take care of 'em."

Members of the committee stated that they were determined that the trucks shall be pulled off and the work done with teams and man power and vowed that they would declare a strike and stop them if they continue to run after Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Solem was out of the city and the delegation was unable to see him, however they left a request for him to come down and investigate.

Hog Allotment Plan Is Considered Here

Action in this county on the corn-hog allotment program will be started December 1, but will not take any definite action until after the Winter Shows conference of County Agents at Crookston. At this meeting final plans and organizations will be formulated. Mass meetings will be called, Mr. Douglas, county agent, said, to explain the project to all farmers interested.

Outlining the plan briefly Mr. Douglass said that the average of hogs roised during 1932 and 1933 will be cut down 25 per cent. The producer will receive five dollars more than the market value of his produce in payments over three years. The first payment of two dollars will be following acceptance of the contracts at Washington, D. C., one dollar the following September and the final two dollars will be paid the following winter.

The corn plan will not effect this section of the country, Mr. Douglass said.

$19,000 Project Will Get Under Way Next Week

'Dead-Ends' of Water Mains in Outskirts to Be Connected For Fire Protection

B. UMLAND MAKES SURVEY

Council Advertises for Bids on Water Mains; Project Totals 22 Blocks

Arrangements have been made this week for an $18,000 water-main improvement project in the city of Thief River Falls. The city will share in the amount of $6,483 in the Civil Works grant received by this county and at a special meeting of the city council last Friday evening it was decided that these funds could best be used as stated above. The action was heartly indorsed by Mr. Solem, District Manager of the National Reemployment Service as one that could be advantageously completed during the winter months and also a project that will give the maximum amount of work for the unemployed.

The work on this project will follow the recommendations of the Fire Underwriters Inspection Bureau who advised some time ago that the "dead-ends" of the city's water-mains be connected up with cross mains so as to allow a full flow of water to the hydrants in the outlying parts of the city where the pressure has proven to be far too low for effective fire-fighting. The project will include about 22 blocks of water-mains.

Under the plans of the council which were endorsed by the councilmen elect who are to take office the first of the year, and who therefore will have to complete the project, the city will purchase the water-mains and pay for the skilled labor and engineering connected with the enterprize, and all of the $6,480 federal money will go towards paying for labor. A resolution was passed at the Friday evening meeting calling upon the Superintendent of Water and Light to secure the services of Mr. Bert Umland to make a preliminary survey and estimate of the project and its cost. At a meeting on Tuesday evening Mr. Umland's report was read and his estimate calls for the expenditure of about $18,998.95 for the entire project. This estimate is

PRESIDENT SIGNS DISTILLERY CODE

Federal Control is Designed To Cover the Period Until Congress Acts.

Warm Springs, Ga. — President Roosevelt signed a code establishing federal control of the liquor traffic after repeal of prohibition and until congress fixes a permanent method. The President in a formal statement said that he did not want the code to interfere with state liquor control measures and also that he did want to prevent the confusion and uncertainty that would necessarily arise between the actual legal repeal of the amendment and the passage of appropriate legislation by congress in consequence thereof. As redrafted by the President's committee and a group representing the distillers, the administrative provisions of their code provide for creation of a code authority by the industry, its members and actions being subject to approval by a federal alcohol control committee composed of five government officials. Provisions in the code include creation of a federal alcohol control administration of five government officials to supervise the industry with the co-operation of a code authority of 10 distillers. The code authority is vested with power to administer provisions of the code subject to the approval of the control administration, but the administration retains its power for strict regulation of the industry. The code permits operation of distilleries under construction and contracted for on December 5—the repeal date. The administration retains the power to control production in the future and also to regulate and fix prices. All distilleries must sell their products in bottles, and are prevented from controlling retail outlets of any description. False advertising, misbranding, commercial bribery, shipment or delivery of consignment, prizes or premiums, advertising allowances are prohibited. No sales are to be made to unauthorized vendors and distillers are required to protect dry states.

THE PROCESSING TAX AND BREAD PRICES

While wheat farmers in the United States stand to benefit greatly as a result of the wheat program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration the effect on bread prices paid by the individual consumer is almost negligible, it is pointed out by Administration officials.

Bread prices according to statistics compiled by the consumers' counsel of the Administration, rose from 6.4 cents a pound in February to 7.9 cents on September 26. But of this 1.5-cent increase, only a half cent was due to the processing tax of 30 cents a bushel levied on wheat. The remainder was due to increased costs of labor.

Commenting on the effect of the program on the price of bread, C. C. Davis, director of the production division, says: "While the consumer has had to pay one-half cent more for a pound of bread because of the wheat processing tax, what does it mean to the farmer? It means millions of dollars, increased income for hard-pressed wheat farming families—dollars to spend for shoes, implements, hats, lumber?. It means a chance to set wheat growing in this country on a sound basis, so that wheat farming families may continue to be customers for city industry."

WOOD IS CHEAP FUEL; USE AIDS COMMUNITY

Since Minnesota's severe winters make fuel almost necessary as food, her people are lucky to have a wood supply at their very doors, or only a short distance away, says Parker O. Anderson, extension forester, University Farm, St Paul.

"With wages below what they were in former years, the price of a cord of wood is only half or a third that of an equivalent amount of coal. Producer and consumer are in more direct contact and market demands can be fully supplied without overcrowding. Long railroad hauls, middleman's costs, and handling and care can be greatly reduced.

"Wood is a locally produced crop, harvested by local people, and distributed by local transportation, leaving more money in local channels."

INDEPENDENT BANKERS' ASSN. ATTACKS CHAIN INSTITUTIONS

The Independent Bankers' association loosed a broadside attack on the chain banks, chain bankers and the Treasury Departments appointments to major positions in the Ninth Federal Reserve District last week. In a letter to the press they have the following to say about the stiuation in this state:

"This is a liberal state, headed by a most outstanding Governor. We have turned our backs on reactionarvism and special privilege. Does the Federal Government expect us to remain silent when we are treated to such a dose of reactionaryism? Like the French people in Louis the Fourteenth's reign, our loyalty to the President is still unquestioned. We lay the blame, as the French did, on his advisors, but how long—how long will that be our attitude? The independent bankers, the liberal bankers of the state, the ones that come in close contact with the agricultural problems have been almost completely ignored. It sems strange that an administration headed by the great liberal, Franklin D. Roosevelt, should be a party to this injustice which is being perpetrated upon the liberal bank element. Surely the government cannot be a party to advancing the domination of the branch bank crowd. Democracy cannot have so far forgotten her Jeffersonian precepts as to want to place the credit machinery of the nation in the hands of a few. The President surely realizes that the days of the Republic will be drawing to an end whenever financial control rests in a few hands.

"We have a peculiar situation in Minnesota. The Federal Reserve Bank has at its head a person who, in his own estimation, is of Jove-like intelligence, a man who once bore the recommendation of this Association, —for which we are very apologetic —and who at the present time seems to be advising Mr. Morgenthau and having his advice accepted in the Northwest. This man does not belong to Mr. Roosevelt's party, he is a reactionary of the iciest water and his continuation in office gives a chill to the country banker, as there seems to be a well grounded suspicion that his activities have been engaged in an effort to drive the independent bank out of existence.

25,000 MEN TO GET SIX WEEKS HIGHWAY WORK

Approximately 25,000 men may be given employment in Minnesota under the new federal highway aid program, it was estimated by Nels W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, meeting with his eight district engineers to select projects to be carried out under this program. Each man would be given six weeks work.

Mr. Elsberg received instructions from Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the U. S. bureau of public roads, to submit lists of six to eight projects in each of the state's 87 counties costing not more than $5,000 each.

MAY SEED GRASSES ON CONTRACTED ACREAGE

A program for seeding grasses and legumes for erosion prevention and soil improvement on acreage retired from the production of wheat, cotton, tobacco, and corn in connection with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's acreage reduction program has been given the administration's approval. Officials of the administration feel that it is highly desirable that growers protect the soil of these contracted acres from erosion and maintain their fertility.

To encourage such a program on the part of the growers, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has through its replacement crops section co-operated with the Division of Forage Crops and Diseases of the United States Department of Agriculture, in the preparation of information to enable farmers to make successful seedings. A circular giving such information has been prepared and this, together with detailed advice on the seeding mixtures best adopted to a farmer's own locality and soil may be had from the extention service, University Farm, St. Paul, or from Minnesota county agents.

RAIL EMPLOYEES VOICE PROTEST AGAINST TRUCKS

Declaring taxes they pay are used to provide highways for trucks and buses "which are not required to pay their full share of the cost," the Minnesota Railroad Employees Association through their president, John W. Moe, Minneapolis, today protested operation of those vehicles on state roads.

"Approximately 150,000 persons in Minnesota," Mr. Moe said, "are directly dependent upon the railways for support and thousands more are partially and indirectly dependent.

"Our homes are taxed and assessed for highways and streets. We pay license fees on our automobiles and we pay gasoline taxes and we believe it injust that our taxes should be used to throw us out of jobs, which is exactly what happens when they are used to protect big trucks and buses who are not required to pay their full share of the costs."

He charged that the only demand for longer and heavier trucks and buses comes from those who want to manufacture and operate that type of vehicle, and from road builders.

NEW C C C CAMPS PLANNED

Two new reforestration camps have ben planned for northern Minnesota during the winter months to replace the C. C. C. camps that have moved. The Government plans to place 50 men at Clear River and 50 men at Norris between now and December 15. Wages and proceedure are not yet certain except that we understand that labor is to be local and either from relief lists or unemployed. No doubt relief cases will be taken first and unemployed next.

NO "HELP" IS NEEDED TO APPLY FOR U. S. LOANS

Despite the fact that the Farm Credit Administration's statements to the press, over the radio and in pamphlets emphasize the fact that farmers should apply for loans directly to secretary-treasurer of national farm loan associations, authorized correspondents of the Federal land bank or to the bank itself, a number of unofficial and unauthorized individuals have sought to collect fees or commissions from farmers for so-called service of helping them obtain loans, according to an announcement made by the Farm Credit Administration.

These individuals told prospective borrowers that they could aid them in obtaining loans or increase the amount which they would be able to borrow, neither of which they could do. Some individuals have offered to perform this so-called service for a commission or fee. The statement is repeated by the Farm Credit Administration that no unofficial intermediary is necessary for farmers to make applications for loans and no such person will have any influence upon the amount of the loan which will be made.

The initial deposit required of borrowers is $11, which includes the one dollar charged by the secretary of the national farm loan association or the authorized correspondent of the bank. If it appears obvious to the bank, after careful study of the farmer's statement, that no loan can be made and if no appraisal of the property is made the $10 is returned to the applicant. If an appraisal is made any unused part of the deposit is returned to the applicant. If the loan is made the initial deposit, of course, is applied on the cost of making the appraisal and other expenses incident to the farm mortgages loan.

Greenback Inflation Barred in U. S.

Washington—Printing press money has no place in the present Roosevelt monetary program and the President is unchanged in his opposition to this type of inflation, according to assurances given by the President to members of the federal reserve board. At the same time the reserve board, banking upon this and other assurances, has adopted a policy of full support for the President, on the promise of giving him a fair opportunity to try out his monetary policy.

Strike Ties Up Chicago Stockyards.

Chicago—Striking stock handlers brought operations at the world's largest livestock center to a sudden halt. Work at the gigantic Chicago packing plants is proceeding temporarily but will be brought to a standstill soon unless the dispute is quickly settled. The scene at the Union stockyards was one of terrific confusion as a handful of men sought to unload hundreds of truckloads of cattle, pigs and sheep that arrived at the yards.

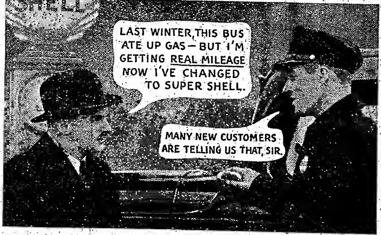
IMPROVED SUPER SHELL
Saves You 200 Extra Miles In Winter
—and Gives Quicker Starting

Here's real news for you motorists! Super Shell is improved again!

Some ordinary gasolines are overloaded for quick starting in cold weather, with light, gassy parts, which you lose after your engine warms up, thereby reducing your mileage. Other ordinary gasolines are hard to start, and waste your fuel by excessive choking and, therefore, they, too, reduce your mileage.

The improved Super Shell, by Shell's new and exclusive reforming process, gives you quicker starting on the coldest day in winter, and saves, for extra mileage, the gasoline you formerly wasted in starting. Try a tankful.



SHELL
LAST WINTER THIS BUS ATE UP GAS—BUT I'M GETTING REAL MILEAGE NOW I'VE CHANGED TO SUPER SHELL.
MANY NEW CUSTOMERS ARE TELLING US THAT, SIR.

THOUSANDS CHANGING TO SUPER SHELL... Like Mr. Remnus, Cleveland, shown above, many thousands of motorists everywhere have changed to the improved new Super Shell. All because Super Shell is the first gasoline to combine quick-starting with full mileage. No need for you to waste one mile or more per gallon in cold weather. No need to be bothered with a hard-starting engine. Change to Super Shell—get the quickest starting you've ever known, plus longer mileage.

1621—THANKSGIVING—1933

In 1621, the pioneers of this country inaugurated the Thanksgiving Day; a day set aside to give thanks to an Almighty Creator for the bounties of the earth that he had bestowed upon them. They had felt the pangs of hunger and the ill effects of malnutrition, those stern men and women who braved the terrors of an unknown continent and an uncharted wilderness to gain religious and political freedom. But the harvest had been good, and in devout prayer they gave thanks and feasted upon the fruits of gardens and fields; secure in the knowledge that for another year; until another crop could be harvested, they would not need to suffer for the want of food.

Their little seashore settlements have expanded and grown until they envelop a continent. The wilderness has disappeared and in its place a mighty empire with bustling cities and far stretches of fertile countryside has come into being. The treasures and resources of the earth, and water and sky and the inventions of two centuries have brought forth a wealth in food, clothing and shelter that they could not have imagined in their wildest dreams—yet privation stalks the land even as it did in that first winter that they spent on these shores.

We wonder what they would say; what the reactions of those sturdy God-fearing men and women would be if they could look upon their progeny now and see the rows of fine modern apartment houses standing vacant while thousands live in hovels and re-modeled boxcars; warehouses bursting with cotton while men women and children face the severe winter without proper clothes; elevators bursting with grain, while children suffer from malnutrition and adults go hungry.

While they feasted and thanked God for plenty, we must strangely enough, thank God because we have found a way out of a depression caused by overproduction, by destroying our surplus. Anomalous as it seems, we are, if we are to believe the reports of "Business Week" and other economic barometers, clothing our people better by destroying the wherewithal to make clothes; and feeding our people better by destroying foodstuffs and curtailing its production.

Perhaps we are old-fashioned, but it looks cross-eyed to us. We believe it would look sacrilegious to our forbears. We fear that we are piling up a terrible reckoning that will overtake us in the future, but, we are thankful that more people can sit down to a Thanksgiving dinner this year than have had that privilege for several years.

ANOTHER BIG BAD WOLF

Our esteemed contemporary has discovered another big bad wolf in the fact that H. P. Lund and Sons of this city was denied the right to bid on the Roosevelt to Baudette graveling job. One would think from their version of the case that this so-called discrimination is something new that the highway department just thought up to keep our local contractor out of the bidding. They would also have us believe that the local contractor's bid was much lower, when as a matter of fact Mr. Lund did not enter a bid. According to Mr. Lund's story as told in the Forum office he was denied an opportunity to bid and came home again and prepared a bid which he then filed with Mr. Berve until after the bids had been opened in St. Paul. Mr. Lund informed us that he was refused an opportunity to bid on this work, because as the department told him his firm has not done enough graveling to qualify. Quite obivously, inasmuch as his bid could not and would not be considered, Mr. Lund could bid as low as he liked in the unofficial figure he placed with Mr. Berve. He would not be called on to do the work at that figure. While we do not contend that Mr. Lund would purposely place a low figure with Mr. Berve in order to make the case look bad for the highway department, we nevertheless wish to point out the fact that the opportunity was there for him to do so if he should choose. And after having been barred from the bidding it would not be unreasonable to suppose that in the heat of the battle he should be inclined to do just that. However inasmuch as there was only a matter of less than $4,000 difference between his figure and that of the successful bidder, on a job running near the $100,000 mark his figure was no doubt honestly made.

The prequalification rule invoked by the state highway department is not a new ruling. This rule was one of the things that was investigated by the highway investigating committees in both houses of the Legislature last winter and even the hostile Senate was very mild in its criticism of of the rule. The rule was invoked in Minnesota after similar rules had been invoked in all surrounding states and was designed to protect Minnesota contractors and Minnesota labor from the influx of contractors from other states.

Obviously the department could not rule that only Minnesota contractors could bid on Minnesota Work. But they could say that only contractors who had done a certain amount of work for the state should be eligible to bid. This did effectively keep outside contractors out of Minnesota, for no large outfit would come in and do the dinky little jobs they could qualify for as a beginning. Mr. Lund told the writer that he does not bid in North Dakota. The reason for that is also quite obvious. The prequalification rulings in that state would make it necessary for them to bid on only minor jobs in that state until they had built up their qualification requirements to the larger ones.

H. P. Lund and Sons have not done enough graveling for the state to qualify for the Roosevelt-Baudette graveling. They have been in the main grading contractors and are qualified to bid on any grading job up to 300,000 yards. In this case the department merely told Mr. Lund that as a shoemaker he would have to stick to his last or start as all others must start, as an apprentice.

We make no defense of the ruling. We are not well enough versed in the matter of road building to pass an opinion, but we believe that the House committee which investigated the matter last winter went into the thing quite thoroughly and this is their report:

> "Your committee finds that prequalifications of contractors bidding upon public work is the product of the experience of various states and was inaugurated in the State of Minnesota in dealing with public contractors to protect Minnesota labor and industry because of the prequalifications in force in neighboring states.
> Your committee further finds that the United States Bureau of Public Roads has prescribed certain prequalifications binding upon contractors bidding upon projects wherein are involved Federal Aid monies of the United States, appropriated to the various states and in particular to the state of Minnesota."

We know quite well, that the Lund firm is responsible and capable contractors, and we want to make it plain also that we believe them quite able to handle the graveling in question, however we also want to point out that in this case they run up against a ruling which has in the main been invoked for their protection and it must be admitted by any fairminded person that no exception could be made in their case without revoking the rule not only with respect to graveling but in all other lines like grading and paving as well. Since a suspension of the rule in this instance would have effected a saving of only 4 per cent the department should not be subjected to criticism for having adhered to its ruling.

In the Rostrum

Editor the Forum:

The farmers of Pennington county have always been strongly opposed to a Count Agent and have considered it a useless and unnecessary expense ever since the first one was forced upon them several years ago. They have shown this by votes at township meetings and at other times by other means whenever they have been given a chance. Wherever farmers have met at auction sales, Ladies aids, and other occasions they have talked about the needless expense in keeping a County Agent. I have talked with hundreds of farmers in this county and of all these only about half-a-dozen ever said that the County Agent had been of any use to them. The other farmers said that they either had never had anything to do with the County Agent or else that he had done them more harm than good.

One of the main reasons expressed by the farmers for starting the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League was to protest against the useless and needless expense in keeping a County Agent. One of the first resolutions adopted by the farmers at an Economy League meeting was a request to the County Commissioners asking them to discontinue all further appropriations to keep a County Agent.

In the township meetings, March 1931, a vote sponsored by Commissioners Lockrem, Race and Mandt on the County Agent question was taken when the farmers voted more than two to one against any County Agent appropriation. In April 1931 the Taxpayer Economy League presented a resolution to the County Board requesting them to immediately discontinue all County Agent appropriation to comply with the wishes of the farmers as expressed by the vote taken in March. The County Commissioners then claimed that the appropriation for that year had already been spent. They promised, however, to make no such appropriation, when the time came, for next year. But the following December they seemed to have forgotten their promise, as they then made a County Agent appropriation for 1932. In January and February of 1932, the Taxpayers Economy League called those different meetings to protest against this action taken by the County Board. A large number of farmers came to these meetings and told the Commissioners that they had no use for the County Agent and asked them to stop the appropriation made in December 1931. The result was that at the third of these meetings the County Board did as the farmers asked them and adopted a resolution to recall the appropriation made for the County Agent.

A month or two later, however, some parties induced the County Board to re-hire the County Agent to fight grasshoppers. In December 1932 the County Board made an appropriation to keep the County Agent for the year 1933. Whether to fight grasshoppers or what they have not said. In March 1933 another vote on the County Agent sponsored by some of the Commissioners was taken at the township meetings. This vote was more than three to one against the County Agent. In April 1933 the Taxpayers Economy League again presented a resolution to the County Board to immediately stop all County Agent appropriations. The Board claimed that the appropriation for 1933 had already been spent but promised to make no appropriation for County Agent at the December 1933 meeting.

The County Board will have their meeting on Tuesday, December 5th., 1933. At this meeting the County Agent appropriation is likely to be taken up again. The County Board seem to have forgotten such promises made before. The only chance for you farmers to cut out the needless and useless County Agent expense is to meet up like you did in January and February of 1932 by voice as well as vote that you want no County Agent. The Taxpayers Economy League has called a meeting, at the Courthouse on Dec. 5th., Tuesday, at 11 a. m. Now come all of you who have voted against the County Agent and I think the Commisioners will do as you request.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

(By H. G. Teigan)

The greatest event in the world politics during the past week, is without doubt the recognition of Soviet Russia by the Government of the United States.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has done the practical and the courageous thing in re-establishing diplomatic relations with the land of the Russians. While it is regretted that such recognition was not accorded the Soviet Government 15 years ago, it is with a good deal of satisfaction that the liberals of the United States note the action that the Roosevelt administration has taken.

Of all the things that President has undertaken to alleviate economic conditions in the United States there is little doubt that the re-establishing of diplomatic and trade relations with the Soviet union is the most important. Russia needs American goods above all else, and there is no country in the world more qualified to render this aid than is the united States. According to a statement of Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of foreign affairs, Russia stands ready to purchase during the next year approximately $350,000,000 worth of goods in this country.

Moral Issue Involved

It is not, however, purely a matter of getting business from the Russians that should actuate liberal-minded persons in wanting diplomatic relations re-establishing between the United States and Soviet union. There is a moral and political importance attached to the matter. Governments are recognized by each other primarily on the basis of stability, and not on account of their particular form of government. Moreover, the United States government has in years gone by, not hesitated in recognizing the most autocratic of regimes. Turkey with its Sultan, Russia with its Czar, and Japan with its Mikado, have been recognized by Uncle Sam. Even Hitler and Mussolini, exercising far greater power of dictatorship than is being exercised by Stalin, the alleged ruler in Russia, have had no difficulty in keeping in the good graces of our government.

Anyway, it is satisfying to know that end of aloofness from Soviet Russia has been reached. And President Roosevelt deserves credit for his courage and good sense in doing what his weak-minded predecessors failed to do.

Bullitt Appointment Fine

The appointment of William C. Bullitt as the first Ambassador to Moscow, is also a wise and sensible move on the part of the President. Mr. Bullitt, it will be recalled, was the man who was sent by President Wilson from Paris in 1919 to negotiate with Lenin and Trotzky, then the heads of the Soviet government, for a basis of recognition. Mr. Bullitt did his job most creditably and secured from the Soviet government every concession possible to work out a plan of diplomatic relations. President Wilson, however, had some change in mind by the time Mr. Bullitt returned.

Farmer-Laborites of Minnesota have a just reason to feel gratified, inasmuch as they were among the first in America to demand recognition of Russia. At the national convention of the National Nonpartisan League, held in St. Paul in December, 1919, the Leaguers of Minnesota, as well as those of other states of the Northwest and West, went on record in demanding re-establishing of diplomatic relations with the workers' republic in Russia.

The world evidently continues to move forward, though slowly, due in the main to the blindness and stupidity of the ruling capitalist class.

The Liberal Digest

TO DISARM:

—o—

A Play With an All-Star Cast
By E. D. Canham
(Christian Science Monitor)

NOTE— We could think of no better way to illuminate the underlying issues of disarmament the things that make statesmen talk or act the way they do in Geneva—than to call a conference of ordinary (or forgotten) men or women. So the following is an account of such a meeting, convoked on a remote island by "Cooks Tours for Peace, Ltd." It is, in reality, a composite of what men and women are actually saying at their firesides, across cafe' tables, and on street corners, in all the countries represented.

Scene: Remote island.
Time: The present.
Characters: An American, Japanese, Englishman, German, Frenchman, Russian.

—o—

The German: Ja, ja. I know you all got pretty excited the other day when our Nazi delegates withdrew from the disarmament affair at Geneva. You blamed us, and said we were for war. Well, you fellows don't understand. Look at me. Am I not just as much of a man as anybody? Should'nt I have equal rights with all of you? Are you going to keep me in those chains of Versailles forever? Did you not promise to disarm your own selves after you made me disarm? Are you going to believe that war-guilt lie about me forever? You know it was the system, the whole world-system, that drove us to war, not just the German people or even their rulers.

We trusted your Geneva and your promises for years and years. Nothing came. So we got desperate, and we said to Hitler: "Well, then, go ahead and get us our rights your way." And the only thing to do was to withdraw from that deceitful Geneva business.

Unless you promise to give us equality, we shall stay away. And you must start to cut your own armaments too. Or than we will have to begin building forts and guns and planes and ships, for we will need them in self-defense. And that will all turn out a bad business. I know, I know. But we are men, and Germany has a right to be a proud nation, and we will not keep inferior forever.

The Frenchman: I know too, my friend. But think of France. Three times they came, your German armies, in the last century. Twice they came, in my own memory, and now your Hitler says he will come again! You parade on the Rhine frontier, and you shout and scream for revenge! You have left your mark in France, and when you were last driven from our soil we vowed: "We must write a peace that will prevent Germany from marching in our land again," We did not put you in chains for the fun of it. We did it for our own security.

If England or America had promised to help us defend our land, we would not have written such a treaty. But they did not, and we have to depend on our own steel and our own men. Our allies, too—Poland—you threaten to overrun. Despite all this, we heard your complaints. We complied. We withdrew our troops from the Rhineland. We admitted you to the League of Nations. We finally wiped out your reparations. And what has happened? Every time we have been generous you have come back and asked for far more extreme things! Our greatest concession, the reparations, just paved the way for your Chancellor Hitler! That is history; it is fact. And you want us to make another concession! How dare wa . . . for there is scarcely anything left for to demand but arms to fight us with, and territory which we or our allies are entitled to! We want peace. We want good feelings with you. But above all we want to protect France.

The Japanese: I sympathize with both of you! I am of a proud people, too, like Germany, and I am interested in Japan's security, like France. I, too, feel that you nations have been crowding us into a position of inferiority. I, too, suspect that your great navies are for the purpose of checking our legetimate growth. I tell you, my friends, Japan has to grow. There are four babies born a minute in my country! And they must have a chance to live. We don't want land for colonies. We want land to control; to cultivate, to make a market and a granary of! We want to produce our foodstuffs in Manchuria, and to sell our textiles to China. The Chinese were unreasonable and trouble-making; they made excessive demands and didn't keep their promises to us to permit the our peaceful expansion in Manchuria. So we had to take the place over, and we may have to act to prevent interference from Russia or continued sabotage from China.

We must have the right to organize and to trade, or Japan cannot keep going. To protect our expansion we need armies and navies. We are a great people, and are going to be greater. You cannot trust us into a place of inferiority, any more than you can Germany. With your 5-5-3 naval ratio! And your Japanese Exclusion Act in America! Our armaments are for defense, and for self-respect. Until you remove the slights upon our national honor, and persuade us we do not need the forces for defense, we will have to insist on armament.

The Englishman: Gracious, but you chaps do a lot of talking! Your words and your "logic" rather confuse me. I can't help thinking you're way out of touch with basic, common-sense reality. Pride? Self-respect? Inferiority? Those are fine words, but what do they really mean? They are the old jargon of war. Now, I can tell you fair I really want disarmament. I doubt if I'd go and fight in another war, I swear I wouldn't. That last business was awful enough, and the next one would be a thousand times worse. Look at London half an hours flying time away from some other chaps landing fields! Couldn't they just blow us off the map! Oh, I know, we could blow them off too. But a lot of good that'd do.

No, we want peace. And we don't want to get drawn into trouble on the Continent. Besides we've given up a deal of pretentions about our Empire. Its coming of age. There are a few vestiges our politicians talk about keeping aeroplanes, for instance, for subduing the heathen. And our navy, after all, has to keep a bit of its old strength—equal to you Americans. We believe in justice for Germany, yes, and security for France. But peace, above all.

The Russian: What a tangled-up mess you capitalist states have made of things. Your talk is all tangled, too. Not that I really mind, if you want me to be Frank. Because the worse messes you get into, the sooner you will see that I have the only right system: Communism. You'll pardon me if I smile slightly at the wars and rumors of wars you chaps are talking about. And if I'm cynical about your disarmament you mustn't object. I've told you time and again that the way to disarm is to disarm! You've heard Comrade Litvinoff say that.

As for me, a simple fellow from Tschbinsk, I can't be so glib. I know that a dozen years ago, when we were trying to get the USSR started, you set armies of troops on us, and we had to fight hard to survive. So I've feared since that you might jump on us the instant we relaxed vigilance. The Red Army seems necessary to prevent some of our eager and anti-Red neighbors from hopping in. They're so keen on saving the world from Communism! Well, if your economic and war crises keep on, I think the world will be about ready for a change.

The American: Whew! Thought I'd never get a word in edgewise! I've heard all you say, and you all seem to be pretty excited about it, but it leaves me cold! Sure, I'm for disarmament. I never did have much use for armies . . . . the navy is something else again, but there's a lot of bunk in this militarism. I don't understand why you fellows all talk as if war were inevitable. Don't you see what fools you'd be to get into another war?

Well, you won't catch me in another of your wars. No, Sir! And I won't make any promises to help enforce anybody's peace. I intend to mind my own business, and stick to my own pursuits. I'm ready to consent to any degree of disarmament you chaps will agree to, although I insist on having an equal navy with anybody! That's tradition, and Admiral Dewey, and all the rest of it. Yes, I guess I've got my pet ideas, the same as all of you. But it stikes me this has been a pretty fine talk we all have had. Seems to me that if us common fellows could get together once in a while we might be able to solve some of these "insoluble" problems they tell about. What do you say?

Epilogue: Take these arguments, reduce them to diplomatic terminology, and you have Geneva. There you will find the positions of France and Germany, deadlocked after 15 years of argument and four years of war, At last the stark issues are stripped of camouflage. They are: Can a just peace—with its symbol, effective reduction of armaments be worked out between the two late combatants? Can the stigma of Versailles be removed so that Germany will lose its sense of persecution, of encirclement? Can France be convinced that its best security lies in a friendly neighbor? Can these things come before another trial of arms settles nothing? Can the disarmament debate—which in its crudest form is as old as the history of nations—be settled by the reign of international organization and order? That is the question, as yet unanswered, upon which the perpetuity of society as now organized demands.

the gauge of battle to the world at large and announced a program of continued effort against the drink habit and the drink traffic, including the mobilization of its entire national force in twenty-five regional conferences, to be called in strategic cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian boundary to the Rio Grande River. The dates of these conferences are yet to be determined.

"The first objective announced by the National officers of the W.C.T.U. who have been in conference at Evanston for a week, is to expose the so-called "Rockefeller Report," contained in the book, 'Toward Liquor Control,' as an unscientific effort to gild the liquor traffic and excuse for increased drinking, under the dangerous formula of 'True Temperance.'"

"The W. C. T. U. believes that the Rockefeller ideas of education, if given a chance in the schools, would produce a nation of liquor drinkers with an einvitable army of drunkards who learned from their text books to drink liqnor. This must be stopped at all costs.

"Other objectives of the W.C.T.U., it is announced, comprise establishment of the following programs:

1, Show the social, ecnomic and personal importance of Total Abstinence as opposed to Moderation.

2, Expose the phrase 'True temperance' as a brewers' term; a mere invitation to drink beer.

3. Resist the advertising campaign for beer and wine; oppose efforts of brewers to give away beer to children and other minors; ask for complete prohibition of liquor advertising by newspapers, magazines, radio, motion pictures of billboards.

4. Work to retain all state prohibition laws; work for prohibition from local units to the largest political divisions obtainable.

5. Arrange a visual education program showing by window displays the economic losses fron liquor and the drag on the family purse from beer; keep the radio waves hot for total abstinence. Don't let the brewers into the home via the microphone without going right in behind them.

6. Establish state and local committees of research or inquiry to get the truth about the effects of the relegalized liquor industry. This includes arrests for drunkenness, antomobile accidents caused by drinking drivers and all other resulta of the mannfacture and sale of liqnor.

The W.C.T.U. has already strengthened its educational program and will make a determined effort to keep the well-known scientific facts abont alcohol before the educational systems of the country.

ROY OEN COMPLETES FOOTBALL CAREER AT U

Roy Oen, the Gopher's lightweight center, finished his brilliant football career at Minnesota last Saturday against Wisconsin. Dick Cullhm, Journal sports writer, is of the opinion that, "Altho the Gophers will lose only Oen, the loss will be heavily felt."

Mr. Cullum puts it in a nut shell when he refers to Roy pitted against Charley Bernard, Michigan's great center, who is the unanimously selected on every all-American team.

"Oen really played better than Bernard. He was clearly more consistently effective on defense and quite often gave better blocking on attack. Bernard was a great center, smart and active, but he had nothing whatever on Oen."

Oen was the key to Minnesota's defense formation and is known as one of the smartest and most dependable defense man the Gophers have ever had.

PROWLERS GO INTO DEPRESSING SLUMP

"We'll be lucky if we win a game," said Coach Dooley, discussing the basket-ball prospects for the coming season. "The boys have shown very little improvement since they started practice."

Checking over the situation we find the Prowler's passing is actully rotten, there is no snap, fire or pep in the work-outs.

Ball-handling lacks that confident crispnes so necessary to the successful ogense.

With basket-shooting confined to the short shots under the basket, because of the low gym ceiling coupled with poor ball handling and weak passing Mr. Dooley stated, that unless the boys snap out of this slump which is the worst he has ever seen, the Prowlers won't be hard to beat this season.

The council plans to carry the project as far as the federal funds immediately available will stretch and at the Tuesday evening meeting passed a resolution to advertise for bids on 4,000 feet of cast iron water-main.

It is expected that the work will get under way the first part of next week, and it will be pushed thru with the least possible delay according to members of the council. ELSBERG PRAISES COUNTY ENGINEERS FOR COOPERATION

The fine co-operation of county commissioners, county highway engineers and other local officials made it possible for the State Highway department last week to establish a record of putting 8,000 men to work on emergency Federal jobs in 48 hours, according to N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

In order to speed up the Civil Works administration's plan to take men off the relief lines throughout Minnesota, the Highway department undertook to place 10,000 men on road jobs in the shortest possible time. The first crews went to work last Wednesday, and by Saturday the full 10,000 were on payrolls instead of relief rolls. Every county in the state was included in the program.

While we celebrate the day of Thanksgiving each year, too frequently these holidays have been merely a matter of habit. The course of our times ran too smoothly to consider the true purpose of the occasion. The first Thanksgiving was a real one. So was the one in 1918, when the unhappy war ended. And this year we have a real Thanksgiving Day—one marked by true gratitude for the forces that are overcoming the evils of economic depression. Let us commemorate in worthy fashion.

Forum Receives Letter From Hibbing Making Correction on Information Regard Viebahn

The Forum is in receipt of a letter from Mr. O. Widstrand of Hibbing, Minn., pertaining to information regarding Mr. W. W. Viebahn, the electrical engineer, who was hired by the mayor last snmmer to make a survey of the light and power facilities of the city. Mr. Viebahn gave his address as Hibbing and the Forum made inquires at that place to find out the man's qnalifications and connections when the report he made on the situation here came in for a great deal of criticism and discussion. We received a letter at that time from Hibbing to the effect that Mr. Viebahn was unknown there. That letter was published in the Forum during the recent campaign, in an extra.

The letter which we received from Mr. Widstrand on Tuesday last, is selfexplanatory and we take pleasure reprinting it. The Forum also wishes to apologize to Mr. Vieban for any injustice we may have dons him by publishing the first letten received from Mr. Widstand.

Mr. Widstrand's letter follows:

My. Dear Mr. Aalbu:

From information given me by his brother-in-law, J. O. Rival, whom I know to be reliable, he has worked for St. Louis county as an electrical engineer, looked after the motors and electric lighting plants in the rural schools, for several months.

APPLY DRIVERS LICENSES EARLY

Avoid Last-Minute Rush Says Clerk; Law to Promote Safty

Prompt application for drivers' license is urged by Adolf Eklund, clerk of the district court of this connty. Blanks are on hand at his office in the court house and all applications from drivers in this county should be made to him.

Between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 licenses must be issued in the state before March 1st, and the clerk is anxious to avoid the usual last minute rusb by applicants.

The applicantion fee is 35 cents of which 10 centa is retained by the county as a serivice fee.

There is no examination and all drivers of motor vehicles, 15 years or over, must have licenses.

The purpose of the licensing law is to protect the public from careless and irresponsible drivers. Suspension or revocation of the license is provided for reckless driving and other serious violations of the law.

"Othe states with drivers' license laws have succeeded in reducing the number of auto fatalities as much as 30 per cent, and there is every reason to believe that Minnesota will have a like experience," said Mr. A. Eklund.

Dry Counties Would Remain Dry Until They Have Voted Wet

FAVORS COUNTY OPTION

Chief Executive Asks 5 Million Appropriation for Relief Of Unemployed

Governor Olson recommended Tuesday to the special session of the Legislature a new combination state and home-rule liquor control plan which would permit sale of liquor by the bottle and the drink in those communities that want it, and protect those that do not want it by rigid state enforcement and retention of absolute county option.

The governor's proposal would permit of either state and municipal dispensaries, for which he indicated preference, or package distribution through retail drug stores or general food stores, under strict supervision and regulation of both prices and practices by a state liquor administrator.

Sale by the drink in cities and counties that want it would be restricted to bona fide hotels and restaurants under rigid state restrictions hut under the exlcusive license control and regulations of local governing bodies, which would fix the license fees and retain all of that revenue.

If private distribution is undertaken, he asked that the state dispensary aystem be snbmitted to vote of the people as a proposed constitutional amendment at the next general election.

Although they held the spotlight of interest in the packed Honse tives and several bundred spectators chamber where senators, representaheard him deliver his message, Governor Olson rated his liqnor proposals as of secondary impotance in a speech bristling with tax evasion weapons and drastic emergency relief demands.

In the face of Minnesota's critical tax delinquency situation, he shook the weapon of property seizure. He demanded laws which will permit ths state or any political subdivision to bring receivership action against any large individaal or cooperation which deliberately refuses to pay its taxes when able, and to take over and operate its properties, retaining ths taxes and heavy penalties from its revenue.

He asked for an end of the "bargain counter" tax laws which have been abused hy those able to pay taxes, but that homesteads and farm products be exempted from the drastic peanalties.

To meet public relief demands and enable Minnesota to get ita share of federal allotments for relief and empoyment works, the Governor asked the Executive Council be empowered to appropriate np to $5,000,000 for such purposes next year if necessary, and to make contracts with the federal government.

The governors liquor control proposals differ in many major phases fom either the plan recommended hy his own Liquor Control Study commission or that snbmitted by the ednational bureau of his own Farmer-Labor party. He laid the study commission's report before the Legislature, however, praising it for its "valuable infomation and recommendations," and incorporated into his own recommendations many of the features of both this and the Farmer-Labor party plsns.

Highlights of Olson Liquor Plan.

Governor Olson's liqnor control recommendations would provide for:

PROHIBITION IN U. S. AT AN END

Revenues Lost by Dropping of Nuisance Taxes to be Offset By Liquor Returns.

Washington — When prohibition moved out December 5, taxpayers of the country benefited by his passing to the extent of an immediate $220,000,000 a year. President Roosevelt has announced that nuisance taxes in that sum were dropped immediately upon the formal repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Thus on December 5 when the last of the three states had its repeal convention and its convention chairman announced the result of the vote, the law was dead. Federal prosecutions will cease. The state laws will govern. Beer and liquor will flow in whatever manner and degree the state laws allow. The nuisance taxes to be discontinued include an additional half cent tax on gasoline; a five per cent divided tax, and a five per cent capital stock tax. The estimated yield of the special gasoline tax is $68,000,000 a year, the dividend tax $78,000,000 and the capital stock and excess profits combined $80,00,000—a grand total of $220,000,000. To counterbalance it is expected that liquor taxes will yield $250,000,000 to $325,000,000 with $300,000,000 the generally expected figure. A comparison of figures shows the government stands to gain about $8,000,000 yearly as a result of repeal. Treasury officials have predicted federal revenues from repeal during the first month should approach $20,000,000. The $1.10 per gallon tax and the import duties, which for example, are $5 a gallon on distilled liquor, will help cut down the federal deficit. Commissioner J. M. Doran has estimated consumption of 10,000,000 gallons of domestic liquor the first month.

New Group of Highway Jobs Announced For Dec. 19

A. A. A. PROVES VALUE OF AG. EXTENSION SERVIC

Signal proof of the effective service agricultural extention organizations can give in working with farm people is the speedy manner in which the wheat, cotton, tobacco and other AAA programs have been put into operation, Dean H. W. Mumford of the Illinois College of Agriculture said in a recent address at University Farm St. Paul.

From its beginning, nearly 20 years ago, extention work in agriculture and home ecomics has been directed toward bringing about adjustments or changes needed to meet the economic and social problems of the farm and farm home, Dean Mumford pointed out. The Agricultural Adjustment Act brought into new prominence and importance many of the long-established aims and purposes of the extention program, he said, and it is now generally recognized that without the aid of well-organized extention service it would have been imposible to administer, develop, refine and carry out the provisions of the act in the short time available.

Many of the regular lines of extention activity are now more important than ever before, Dean Mumford declared. Among these economic outlook work, farm accounting, improvement of quality in farm products without proportionate increases in costs, introduction of new crops, 4-H club work and home demonstration work.

Extention services must give increased attention to instruction in the use of farm credit and must prepare to school farmers in national and internationel conditions, particularly as to trade and tariff policies Dean Mumford believes.

CORN FARMERS GET FORMS FOR LOANS

The first of about 1,750,000 copies of note forms and instruction sheets for obtaining loans on farm warehoused corn through the Commodity Credit Corporation were sent out from Washington on November 23 with distribution of the entire necessary supply scheduled to proceed as rapidly as possible.

In Minnesota and several other states having farm warehouse laws the loans will be made on corn grading not lower than No. 4 and on the basis of 45 cents per bushel on the farm, with an allowance of 2½ cubic feet per bushel. State certificates that the corn has been warehoused under seal on the farm will be accepted as collateral for the loan. Warehousing cost will be borne by the borrower.

The maturity date of notes to be given by borrowing farmers is August 1, 1934. The rate of interest is 4% The last day for acceptance of applications for loans is March 1, 1934.

An eligible borrower may, in most cases, obtain money promptly by taking his warehouse receipt to a local bank, filling out a note, and signing the loan agreement.

HI-WAY DEPARTMENT GIVES WOOD TO NEEDY

More than 1,000 cords of seasoned firewood is being supplied to relief organizations by the State Highway department, according to a report to Commissioner N. W. Elsberg by the department's roadside development division. This wood largely comes from parts of the state where modern highways parallel railroad rights of way and old snow fences and cattle fences are no longer needed.

Wood obtained from the fences is distributed through relief agencies in the towns nearest the improvement. Permission has just been granted by the Great Northern to remove fences from Albany, in Stearns county, to Evansville, in Douglas county. Other projects under way or completed are on Trunk Highway No. 20, from Harmony to the Iowa line; on highways between Anoka and Brainerd; on Trunk Highway No. 1 from St. Paul to Duluth, and smaller stretches in other parts of the state.

The department is beautifying the highways by clearing all old fences and posts between state and railroad rights of way where possible and is donating the wood to civic organizations to assist in their relief efforts. In some cases highway trucks are delivering the wood to central points when not otherwise laden but in most instances the relief agencies are doing their own trucking. The wood is well seasoned and makes excellent firewood.

An unprecedented clubbing offer; the Farmer-Labor Leader, regular price one dollar per year, and the Thief River Falls Forum, regular price one dollar per year. Both for one year for one dollar for a short time only.

Survey Jobs Loom in State

A new project under the coast and geodetic survey to be financed with funds from the civil works administration and to employ 320 Minnesota men, chiefly unemployed civil engineers and mining engineers will be started at once, Professor Alvin S. Cutler of the college of engineering of the University of Minnesota said Saturday.

The work will consist of multiplying and extending the control plants and bench bakers which provide the basis for accurate surveys for the benefit of engineers. These now are set in the state by the coast and geodetic survey, chiefly along the principal rivers.

Professor Cutler will maintain an office at 229 Auditorium building on the university campus, but applicants for positions must be certified to him by the federal reemployment agency. This agency has an office in Minneapolis at 318 Hodgson building, in St. Paul at 273 City Hall and in Duluth at 200 City Hall. Men outside the three large cities must register at re-employment offices in county seats.

The men will receive not to exceed $36 for 30-hour week, and for the most part will be employed in their home areas. The jobs will run until the expiration of the civil works administration February 15.

POTATO GROWERS WILL SEE NEW VARITIES AT SHOWS, DECEMBER 11-15

Red River Valey potato growers will have a chance to see the new varities of potatoes introduced by the Minnesota station and U. S. Department of Agriculture on exhibition at the Winter Shows, Crookston, Dec. 11-15. A display of the new named varities and promising seedlings will be made by the Northwest School and Station, Crookston, under the direction of T. M. McCall, horticulturist, and acting superintendent. According to Mr. McCall, the new Minnesota Warba has been oustanding early variety in the tests at the Northwest Station during the past three years. Growers are particularly interested in the Warba because of its earliness, productivity and freedom from disease. The Chippewa and Katahdin, newly named varities from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, together with many new unamed seedlings, will be on display.

The potato growers meeting Tuesday morning, Dec. 12, in the Crookston Armory promises to be the largest gathering of potato growers in the valley this year. A. G. Tolaas, a veteran in potato seed improvement, will discuss the new varities and the plan of distribution adopted.

FORD V- TRANSCONTINENTAL FREIGHTER HAS RECORD RUN

Smashing all previous speed records for motor trucks on a transcontinental trip, a Ford V-8 truck carrying a full two ton load of merchandise, covered the 2,945 mile run in 71 hours, 12 minutes and 30 seconds elapsed time.

Under the Observation of Glenn Walee, of the Keystone Auto club, the truck out-distanced by four hours the fastest passenger train service between Atlantic City and Los Angeles.

The transcontinental freighter clocked an average of 41.3 miles per hour required 322 gallons of gasoline, five quarts of oil and only one pint of water. Four drivers drove the freighter in relays under conditions where they encountered snow and ice, heavy rain, and desert sand and dust. According to the drivers the truck came through the test in excellent shape.

The transcontinental Freighter is a stock model Ford V-8 and one and one-half ton truck.

GOVERNMENT TO USE REPEAL TO BREAK DOWN TARIFF WALL

The government has notified liquor importers it intends to use repeal to bring about a lowering on tariff barriers against American products in foreign countries, through allocation of liquor imports after December 5.

Edward G. Lowry, Jr., economic advisor of the treasury department, at the opening of hearings on a proposed government code for importers of beer, wine and spirits, predicted strong competition among foreign countries to get American liquor business.

Importers of wines and liquors were told that reciprocal trade agreements already are under way by which foreign nations might export their wines and liquors to the United States under more favorable terms in return for the removal of tariff barriers against American exports.

Value of Mulch Paper On Vegetables Studied

Use of mulch paper in vegetable growing is of debatable value, according to Minnesota bulletin 298, just published by the state agricultural experiment station at University Farm. The bulletin reports the results of experiments conducted in 1929, 1930, and 1931 by A. E. Hutchins, vegetable specialist of the division of horticulture.

"Though the paper appears to benefit the crops, the advantages in most cases do not pay the additional cost involved," it is concluded. "The paper is most likely to be worthwhile with warm-seasoned crops of high acre value and yields that are grown intensively. The effect of paper varies not only with local climatic conditions, but also with each crop grown. Therefore, each grower must determinethe value of the paper for his particular crops and for his local conditions.

"Mulch paper may have a special appeal to home garden enthusiasts who are not particularly interested in costs. Through the use of paper they may get slight increases in earlines and quality, reduce the labor of cultivation and keep weeds down while away on vacation or busy with other things."

Persons interested in the details of the experiments and results may have free a copy of the bulletin by writing the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul, or by asking a county agent or high school "ag" man.

MAYOR TUNGSETH IN ANOTHER GLARING MISSTATEMENT

In the Zion Messenger, organ of the Zion Lutheran Free church of this city, and of which E. L. Tungseth is the editor, the following editorial appeared in the issue of December 1st:

> Now our Minnesota Governor, according to the late press places control as a secondary matter, and Revenue is the main thing. That is the old, old story over again, John Barleycorn pleading for a place in public life, and promising that he will be so good if only permitted to live, and no sooner does he get a chance before he finds plenty excuses why he should not be molested.
> Now in Minnesota he will through the mouthpiece of our highest executive make his plea for a Let Loose policy because our State treasuries need the money. That is a sensitive situation in these times. He will plead that there are thousands of poor in need of his profits. He comes forward as the great Saviour of the poor, the benefactor of a stricken humanity. Our country and state has long been thinking in terms of relief lines and unemployed and of industrial recovery. Now the old bum, Mr. Barleycorn has been dressed up in a new suit of clothes, tailored up as a gentleman, with shave, shoe shine, manicure and what not. And he has found a willing servant in our Governor, who says, what matters now is MONEY. "Control" must serve just one purpose, fill our empty treasuries. Perhaps it will soon be time to clean house again in our state government. When a man sinks to the level of placing money before morals, profits before purity, he is no man to be leader in a commonwealth like ours. Does a re-election to the governorship of Minnesota make men insane?

In view of the serious charges made against the chief executive of the State in this editorial, and because of the fact that altho we have scanned the papers very closely in order that we might know the Governor's stand on the liquor question, and have found no statement by him (before hearing his message to the Legislature this Tuesday) we sent the editorial quoted above to the Governor, asking him to explain the charges made against him. His reply follows:

> Dear Mr. Aalbu:
> The article concerning liquor control, which appeared in the last number of the ZION MESSENGER of Thief River Falls and which was forwarded to me by you, has a political ring rather than a religious or temperance ring.
> It begins "Now our Minnesota Governor, according to the late press places control as a secondary matter, and revenue is the main thing." I do not consider revenue important in connection with the control of intoxicating liquor, nor have I ever made any statement, directly or indirectly, implying any contrary belief. The statement of the editor of the ZION MESSENGER is false in two respects: first, as to my viewpoint; and second, as to any such statement ever appearing in any newspaper. He cannot produce a newspaper which purports to quote me as saying that I considered control secondary to revenue, in a consideration of the liquor problem.
> I created the Liquor Control Committee of Minnesota, which included some outstanding Drys such as the Reverend J. A. O. Stub of Minneapolis; and in addressing them at their first meeting I said, with reference to the subject matter of the item in the ZION MESSENGER:
> "The possibility of revenue from the sale or liquor is entirely secondary to the considerations of temperance."
> In my message to the Legislature which I will deliver tomorrow, the matter of revenue is considered only incidental to the important matter of control.
> Nothing has appeared in the press of this state contrary to the statement made to the Liquor Committee, which I have quoted to you. As evidence of my confidence in the accuracy of my statement, I will make a contribution to the Poor Relief Fund of Thief River Falls, in such amount as I can afford, if editor Tungseth of the ZION MESSENGER can produce any newspaper in the United States which quotes me as saying that revenue from liquor is the main thing and control is a secondary matter, or words to that effect.
> Trusting that this will answer your inquiry; and thanking you for calling this matter to my attention, I am,
> Sincerely yours,
> Floyd B. Olson
> Governor
> O|M

As we grow older, we grow wiser and sader, as the old proverb says, and we confess that many of our concepts and notions have slipped from us with the passing of the years. "Among our souvenirs" is the idea that men of intelligence; men of the so-called "better class"; men of education, would because of the fact that they have been spared contact with the coarser things, and because of the fact that they have been generally spared the experience of facing privation; because of their environment and early training have higher ethics, and cleaner morals than the rest of us ordinary mortals.

And now we must relegate to the scrap heap our notion that all clergymen are because of their very training and environment and calling in life above moral turpitude. That they, nor any one of them, would not stoop to deceit and misstatements.— Alas, for our crumbling idols.

We have been inclined to overlook the glaring misstatements made by the mayor during the recent municipal campaign. We had forgiven, if not forgotten, the vicious abuse heaped upon us and some of our friends in his published statements. We felt that in the heat of a campaign it would be possible even for a preacher to overstep the bounds of decency and good manners. We discounted the reports brought to us while we were campaign manager for the Progressive group that all the "wideopenists" every bootlegger and blindpigger in the city was "plugging for Tungseth." We were puzzled that he, who during his first term had demanded a clean town and strict adherence to the closing ordinances could run on the same ticket with a man who openly boasted that if elected he would rewrite the beer ordinance on a postage stamp, in just two words, "Wide Open." We could not believe that the clause in his platform; "Assisting the business institutions of this city to retain home trade and attract outside customers rather than drive good dollars out of the community" referred to the booze trade that was going to Red Lake Falls.

Les than five weeks have passed since the election. Those five weeks have been marked by the greatest letdown in law enforcement that we have ever observed. The city ordinances are openly flauted and drunkenness and disorderly conduct is a nightly occurrance on our streets. Can it be possible that there was a "deal made" before election? Can it be possible that a clergyman mayor has joined hands with the wide open element? Is he trying to curry back waning favor with the people who demand order and decency with that "fishwoman" attack upon the chief executive of the State? Will the citizens of Thief River Falls and the members of the Zion Lutheran church who voted overwhelmingly for Floyd B. Olson in the election a year ago and have had no reason to regret it, tolerate this scurvy attack upon him?

RESPECTERS OF PROMISES
(The Christian Science Monitor)

A sadly gulled public already sees many of the dramatis personae of the old liquor system re-emerging Promised a new order, distinguished by model control putting national prohibition to shame, the public is beholding old familiar figures stealing back onto the stage. There is the saloon in the costume of a tavern mincing from the wings; there is the florid-faced bartender long unpopular at the casting office; there is the distiller in a major role; there is the liquor advertisement plastered on the scenery, and there is the politician already suspected of collusion with the liquor interests.

It is hardly a new era. It is not a tomorrow; it is yesterday.

This was a widely predicted happening, hence little surprise is occasioned. It is not surprising, for instance, that the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, led by Mrs. Chas. H. Sabin, is to disband its national set-up or that Nevada has turned back to the localities the whole problem of liquor control.

Because of the flagrancy of the betrayals, the efforts of certain opponents of prohibition to maintain their pledges that the saloon would not return, are all the more conspicuous. Mrs. Robert Lovett, head of the Massachusetts division of the Womens' Organization for Prohibition Reform, has led a gallant and perhaps successful contest against the tavernized saloon in her state.

Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, proponents of repeal, is promoting the formation of an organization of young men, called the Junior Crusaders, dedicated to the cause of promoting efficient liquor systems. Col. Ira Reeves, divisional head of the Crusaders, also has consistantly sought to effect a liquor control plan for Illinois whereby only sales by bottle would be permitted.

Drys who are more intent on the promotion of national sobriety than in mere triumph for a particular legal system, are already discovering in these honest repealists powerful allies. They can join forces against the saloon, against political corruption, against insidious propaganda designed to stimulate the consumption of hard liquor.

That the two groups would promote temperance through different methods does not matter now. If drys are as sincere in their demands for temperance as these honest repealists, they will bend every effort to promote the most efficient control system possible to further public safety and sobriety.

COLLECTIVE SUICIDE
(The New Leader)

Another general war will mean general suicide. Every human being will be within the zone of conflict. Men and women, the aged and the infants, the blind and the helpless, the strong and the weak, will face new and deadly forms of destruction. There will be no neutral zones, no such things as "behind the lines."

A recent book by nineteen experts relates what is being prepared in poison gas clouds to wipe out cities, the spread of bacteria, poisoning streams, and to destroy all forms of life over large areas. All the leading "civilized" powers are preparing for this hideous massacre in their laboratories.

For each power it means mass murder on a scale greater than ever known before and for the peoples as a whole it means collective suicide. No intelligent human beings will stand idle when this ghastly thing breaks. They will be justified in working for social revolution to overtake the ruling class in every nation where it begins.

NAZIS WILL DISSOLVE GERMAN LABOR UNIONS

The nazi government has moved for dissolution of the German labor unions, which a year ago had 7,000,000 members and property worth hundreds of millions of marks. The unions were the strongest and richest in the world.— Their secretaries occupied key positions in in the government and ruled Germany from the socialist revolution in 1918 to the national socialist revolution in 1933.

The unions are to be liquidated and dissolved as organs of that "Marxist class warfare" which the nazis proclaim they have buried forever. They will be replaced by two parallel organizations which will embrace all workers with "fist and brain," employers and employees, in a united German Aryan and Nordic community under the motto, "common interest before self interest."

The Public's Rostrum

o

There has for years been much talk about tax reduction but very little action. The lack of action naturally arises because established boards, activites by the state and its sub divisions, as well as public salaries and pensions are not so easy to abolish, diminish or reduce.

There is however a way of reducing taxes to a considerable extent without any appreciable interference with boards, activites or salaries, and that is the plan I shall outline in this article.

The Legislature should cut all salaries of all public officials under its control except salaries of less than $1000 per year. The cut should be in ratio to the excess over the minimum, for instance: Up to $1000 exempt. $1000 to 12000 cut 10% of excess, that is cut the second thousand 10%. $2000 to $3000 cut excess 20%, $3000 to $4000 cut excess 30% $4000 to $5,000 cut excess 40% etc.

Now, in order to eliminate the losses in money caused by this reduction they should each be given certificates receivable for taxes to the same amount as the respective salary reduction. This would eliminate all loss entirely if the reduction was on salary of one who was a taxpayer to the amount of his reduction, and, if not, he could exchange his certificate to a taxpayer with little or no discount.

This plan would also have a splendid effect on public officials because it would have a tendency to induce them to invest their surplus earnings in taxable property within the state instead of investing in tax-free bonds. This would aid in putting values back into real estate.

These certificates should be receivable for taxes levied by the state for those officials paid by the state; and by the county or municipality for those paid by them, respectively, so as to not interfere with the smooth working of the system.

This system would clearly be constitutional because these certificates would in no way be a legal tender, but just a plain bonus over and above a salary established by law.

Now, if the reader thinks this plan is impractical or a "gold brick" proposition because it claims to reduce taxes without materially reducing incomes of public workers, just let him pick a flaw in it if he can. If he can't I hope he will send his endorsement of this plan to his Representatives and have him analyse it, and introduce it at the special session.

REGARDING HIGHLANDING CREAMERY

There seems to be a feeling that the Highlanding Creamery is not run cooperatively. That the association has no voice in the management of the creamery. The facts are the creamery board have full control of the books and business transacted at the creamery.

There is a committee of three members of the board, A. Hammersten, P. Wold and W. Vaughan who meet with the buttermaker, G. Gunstenson to set the price to be paid for the butterfat delivered by the patrons.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

COOPERATION The president, Gen. Johnson and some others, including a few newspapers, are contending that the NRA will be a success if everybody cooperates and supports this act.

Likewise the Eighteenth Amendment, which was approved by forty-eight states would have been a sucess if everybody had cooperated and supported this great experiment.

It is my opinion that there was more public support for the Eighteenth Amendment when it was passed than there is public support for the NRA.

BENEFIT? To keep the bootlegger out of business, we are told, liquor taxes will have to be low. But we are assured that the consumer will benefit. The lower the tax the more liquor he can afford to buy, and the more liquor he drinks, the greater the revenue to the Government, which could then set aside a greater amount of money for temperance education, to teach the people why they should drink less.

The greatest increase in employment after repeal will undoubtedly be among the alibi-finders. Hitherto, prohibition has been made responsible for, let us say, ten thousand things that are wrong with this country. New reasons will now have to be discovered.

Now that they feel so sure of repeal some of the leading minds of the country are admitting that the stranglehold of the racketeers came by way of the alliance of corrupt legal practices with crime and not through prohibition.

THE DECLINE OF PURITAN VIRTUES

By Paul Hutchinson
(Condensed by R. M. Aalbu)

o

Twenty-two days before his death Calvin Coolidge gave an interview in which he said, "We are in a new era to which I do not belong. When I read about the new-fangled things that are so popular now I realize that my time in public affairs is past. I wouldn't know how to handle them if I were called upon to do so."

More than a political period went to entombment with Coolidge. The whole Ben Franklin outlook on life, the measures of character which have been hammered into 16 generations of youth, were in a sense, watching their interment in that Plymouth hilside.

Of course it is not true that the Puritan virtues,— industriousness, thrift, personal integrity— have been entirely cast aside, but those virtues are under such scrutiny—have been never been before. They must change, and they are changing— because Western civilization itself is changing.

The Puritan stood for a laissez faire system, and for "rugged individualism." But laissez faire has now run its course. It comes out in the red on the ledgers of a mass-production age. "Rugged individualism" is just about the sorriest looking slogan left over from the boom era.

If you haven't realized what is happening to the Puritan virtues, regard for a few moments, the plight of the contemporary schoolmarm. Here she confronts a roomful of young hopefuls, under the responsibility of instructing them in the nature of the good, beautiful and true. What shall she teach?

Immediately the shade of Ben Franklin takes charge of the proceedings. "Remember, children, time is money." he advises. "Remember the busy bee. Remember that the sound of your hammer at five in the morning makes your creditor easy for six months longer." "Get busy, get busy, get busy. The devil has work for idle hands to do."

But the youngsters are not fools. One in every three of them knows that the family breadwinner is out of a job. In other words they know that American life is characterized by periods in which men who want work cannot work.— and you find your words falling flat in the presence of their knowing "Oh, yeah?"

Well, how about that second fundamental of the puritan— thrift? With the full power of the government being exerted to scare the daylights out of any citizen nefarious enough to keep a little gold stake hidden away in the old sock, discussion of the waning virtue of thrift may seem a work of supererogation. But something has happened more important than this flurry over gold hoarding. There has been a widespread throwing overboard of the idea that there is any wisdom in frugality. Thrift cannot be taken seriously when the wastrels are no more broke today than those who scrimped and saved to "put something by." Harsh experience has brought millions of investors to see that our new situation, resulting from the machine, demands a rapid and widespread distribution of wealth if the organism is to function, and that a good citizen, under such circumstances, becomes the man who spends as fast as he can.

One other Puritan virtue which seems to be going into an eclipse while all of us realize that it, of all the list, most needs to be kept alive. That is the virtue of honesty; old-fashioned integrity. I am not going to recount any of the scandals that have lately come into the light. Of what use is it, when the aftermath of every Mitchell case is the comment, "Why get so excited about that? What did he do that most of those in his class have not been doing?

I wonder, however, whether it is sufficiently realized how far down toward the roots of our society this disintegration has gone. A neighbor who has wide contacts with the laboring classes remarked to me on the growing cynicism of the worker in this matter of honesty. "Everything's a racket. Business is a racket. Politics is a racket. Even philanthrophy's a racket. So we mean to get a racket of our own, and clean up." This, my neighbor maintained, is coming to be the characteristic mood of the worker. I fear there is too much basis for his report. Among the unemployed I have found that the struggle to keep alive has produced a revolution in ethical standards. "I have stolen groceries. I have stolen coal. I would feel myself a bad man if I had not done so. You may call it dishonest, but I tell you that while my children are hungry and cold, I would be a bad father if I did not take things for them." Those are the words of a man speaking in a meeting of the unemployed in Chicago.

The tragedy, as I see it, is that integrity is the one virtue which we must place at the foundations of the order that will take the place of laissez faire which is passing away. We can get along without some of these other Puritan virtues if, in their places, we can grow courage and cooperativeness and self-sacrifice and a passion for justice. But honesty there must be at the base of any enduring order.

It is appalling to realize how many are the callings in which common practice has, for decades, countenanced the drawing of a line between what has been called, revealingly, public and private morality. We realize that a lawyer in his private life may be a man of perfect integrity; but often his eminence as a lawyer rests on the slipperiness with which he can guide his client thru the eel traps of the law. Think of the difference between the ethical standards of your banker friend in his hours while writing a prosin his hours while writing a prospectus for Patagonian bonds. Indeed, if you will think candidly about your friends, and yourself, it will grow on you how few of us there have been who have not felt forced to indulge in practices which implied that public and private honesty were two completely separate virtues.

In this day of shifting values, there may be doubt in our minds about the necessity of certain of the Puritan virtues But of one thing we may be sure: there is nothing so lacking, and so needed, in our western society as an honesty that would function everywhere and all the time. The discovery of a new standard of common honesty—"common" in the sense that it operates equally in all the circumstances of living—must come before the recovery of any assuring measure of social health.

USURY
(By N. P. Stenshoel.)

Sometime in the future, I'll lay on a slab,
At the end of a strenuous life,
Thru a "dog eat dog" system of tribute and grab,
Invented by Mammonish strife.
Oh, brother! Oh, sister! wake up from the ruse
By which we are grossly misled,
For legalized stealing there is no excuse,
The system will misery spread.

Our civilization is now in the throes
Of ruin and chaos thru greed,
Avarice and ignorance, they are our foes,
From which we must strive to be freed.
Like cancer, the usury is eating its way;
Turns blessings into a fraud,
God-given products are doomend to decay,
While Mammon remains as our God.

VOLUME TWO THIEF RIVER FALLS, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, DECEMBER, 14, 1933 NUMBER 37

C. W. A. PAYROLL OF $3,935.00 IN COUNTY IN WEEK

Work is Being Slowed Down to Meet Administration Regulations

Pennington County's Civil Works Administration payroll was $3,935.36 last week according to the administration's paying office records. Of this amount, $584.78 went for the sewer extension project in this city, with the balance being paid out for project work around the county. A total of 212 men received checks.

Discontinuing of one job in the county and general slowing up of others, with the oddition of two more projects in the eastern part of the county were changes made by the Reemployment office this week to meet requirements of the administration to keep this work going until February, Arnie Solem announced yesterday. Because of the rush to start jobs in every county under the administration's state highway regulations many men who did not need the work badly have been put to work. A general weeding out of these and placing of men who actually are in need of relief is part of the work being done by the National Recovery Service office in this city at the present, Mr. Solem stated. "Our county allotment is 180 men," Mr. Solom said, "and we must see that this relief goes where it is desperately needed."

O. D. Hollenbeck, director of the reemployment administration, will be in this city tonight to hold a meeting of the county assistants in this district. With Mr. Hollenbeck will be Dreg Bjornaraa, field spervisor for the National Reemployment Service.

There are now 25 people employed in this district on the personal of the office in this city. This includes an office in each of the seven counties in this district, according to Mr. Solem.

THREE CO. MEN ON FARM-HOME COM.

Quist, Johnson And Nelson Named By Dean Coffey

Three well known Pennington county persons have been requested by Dean W. G. Coffey of University Farm to serve as a local committee on Farmers and Homemakers Week, giving information about the Short Course and assisting those interested in making travel engagements.

W. H. Quist, Thief River Falls, Anton Johnson, Highlanding, and Louis Nelson, Thief River Falls are the three appointed, with W. H. Quist as chairman of the committee.

Dean Coffey has appointed similar committees in more than 60 other counties, hoping to have several thousand farm people presented at University Farm the week of January 15 to 20 to take odvantage of the unusually worthwhile program that has been lined up.

General sessions of the Short Course will present numerous speakers of state ond national prominence, stressing subjects of outstanding importance to agriculture, particularly the program and plans of the AAA. The divisional programs, will cover a wide range of specific problems in the fields of homemaking, animal and dairy husbandry, poultry, crops and soils, agricultural economics, horticulture, agricultural engineering, beekeeping, agricultural education and so on.

Many meetings of statewide farm and breed organizations will be held at the Short Course. Lots of entertainment, such as one-act plays, music, movies and banquets, will be provided. The entire program will be free. Local persons wanting additional information should see any of the committee members mentioned.

County Agricultural Agent Completes Annual Report; Lists Emergency Work

The Annual Report of the County Agricultural Agent, was made public this week by R. M. Douglass, Pennington county agent.

Emergency work this year has been one of the most important projects of the county extension service. Seed Loans in the spring, barnyard loans throughout the year, Grasshopper control during the foll, and wheat control during the fall, has taken up a considerable amount of time that was ordinarly devoted to other projects.

"Many farmers who have not heretofore used the services of the county egent have called on him for help in many of these emergency projects." Mr. Douglass said. This has increased extension service work throughout the county.

4-H club work under the direction of the county agent increased considerably this year. Thirty-eight members received free trips to the state exhibitions and cash rewards totaling approximately $900, besides receiving much valuable educational training.

The Woman's Home clothing project, an organization of country women for clothing instruction, through the aid of the county egent who secured the aid of Miss Reid, clothing specialist from the University of Minnesota,, to give instructions. This project helped 1,010 persons and helped these people to made an estimated saving of $2,097. This month there will be a Womens club meeting where plans will be worked out concerning the project for the coming year.

Some of the other outstanding projects handled by the county agent are: potato production, Turkey production and worm control, Ram exchange day, T-B area test and recognition of Pennington as a certified county, and the numerous 4-H Club activities. Other organizations the county agent cooperated with were the, County Fair, Red River Valley Wool growers' Ass'n., Winter shows at Crookston, Land O' Lakes Celebration and the County Poultry show.

Projects outlined in the bulletin for the coming year include soils, crops, livestock, 4-H club work, farm management, home project, wheat production control, and cooperation with other organizations.

TUNGSETH VETOS RESOLUTION FOR LIGHT FIXTURES

FOURTH PAYMENT ON AUDITORIUM IS MADE

Mayor's Contingency Fund is Again Put on the Table

The mayor's veto of the council's resolution calling for bids on electric light fixtures for the new auditorium was read to the council at its meeting last Tuesday evening. The veto message follows:

Gentlemen;

I hereby veto your recent resolution authorizing advertising for light fixtures for the new auditorium, for the following reasons:

First; I can not be certain whether or not you are in earnest about buying such fixtures, you may decide after the advertising has been done and bids opened that you do not want to buy.

Second; you have not made provisions for the payment of said fixtures, and if the new council must accept the responsibility of meeting the account, it may as well do the buying,

Respectfully yours,
E. L. Tungseth
Mayor.

Mr. Larson, representing the architect, Mr. Gauger appeared before the council and stated that he had spoken to the mayor in regard to this veto and pointed out that if the advertising is to be done by the new council there will be no hope of having the light fixtures installed until the latter part of the month of February, and that consequently much valuable time would be lost. He stated that the mayor had intimated that he would be willing to sign another resolution for bids if the council should see fit to pass it. Alderman Paul Harris inquired if the mayor did not know when he vetoed the resolution that he was delaying the completion of the building by so doing. Mr. Larson replied that he was not in a position to answer for the mayor on that question. The council decided that inasmuch as the mayor did not seem to know what he wanted to do in the matter that they would leave it up to the members of the incoming council. If they wish another resolution to be passed so that the bids can be opened directly after the first of the year, the present council will pass a new resolution as to facilitate the matter as much as possible. Mr. Larson said that he would interview some of the councilmen elect on the matter.

An application for a beer license, by Mrs. Bilila was laid over for further consideration. The council authorized the Superintendent of Water and Light to furnish for the neighborhood skating rink at Atlantic north and Seventh street.

Bert Norby was allowed the fourth estimate in the sum of $6,473.18 and the Fergus Plumbing and Heating Co. was allowed their fourth estimate in the sum of $2,127.48 in the construction of the new auditorium.

City Attorney H. O. Berve stated that the Mayor had called him over the telephone and requested that he call the council's attention to the fact that they had not appropriated the Mayor's contingency fund. Members of the council questioned whether the city had any money to appropriate for such purpose and laid the matter over until the next meeting.

Upon further request by the Chief of Police the council voted to suspend the beer license of Frank's Eat Shop for 30 days.

C. W. A. PAYROLL OF $3,935.00 IN COUNTY IN WEEK

Work is Being Slowed Down to Meet Administration Regulations

Pennington County's Civil Works Administration payroll was $3,935.36 last week according to the administration's paying office records. Of this amount, $584.78 went for the sewer extension project in this city, with the balance being paid out for project work around the county. A total of 212 men received checks.

Discontinuing of one job in the county and general slowing up of others, with the addition of two more projects in the eastern part of the county were changes made by the Reemployment office this week to meet requirements of the administration to keep this work going until February, Arnie Solem announced yesterday. Because of the rush to start jobs in every county under the administration's state highway regulations many men who did not need the work badly have been put to work. A general weeding out of these and placing of men who actually are in need of relief is part of the work being done by the National Recovery Service office in this city at the present, Mr. Solem stated. "Our county allotment is 180 men," Mr. Solom said, "and we must see that this relief goes where it is desperately needed."

O. D. Hollenbeck, director of the reemployment administration, will be in this city tonight to hold a meeting of the county assistants in this district. With Mr. Hollenbeck will be Dreg Bjornaraa, field spervisor for the National Reemployment Service.

There are now 25 people employed in this district on the personal of the office in this city. This includes an office in each of the seven counties in this district, according to Mr. Solem.

FOURTH PAYMENT ON AUDITORIUM IS MADE

Mayor's Contingency Fund is Again Put on the Table

The mayor's voto of the council's resolution calling for bids on electric light fixtures for the new auditorium was read to the council at its meeting last Tuesday eveniog. The veto message follows:

Gentlemen;

I hereby veto your recent resolution authorizing advertising for light fixtures for the new auditorium, for the following reasons:

First; I can not be certain whether or not you are in earnest about buying such fixtures, you may decide after the advertising has been done and bids opened that you do oot want to buy.

Second; you have not made provisions for the payment of said fixtures, and if the new council must accept the responsibility of meeting the account, it may as well do the buying,

Respectfully yours,
E. L. Tungseth
Mayor.

Mr. Larson, representing the architect, Mr. Gauger appeared before tha council and stated that he had spoken to the mayor in regard to this veto and pointed out that if the advertising is to be done by the new council there will be no hope of having the light fixtures installed until the latter part of the month of February, and that consequently much valuable time would be lost. He stated that the mayor had intimated that he would be willing to sign another resolution for bids if the council should see fit to pass it. Alderman Paul Harris inquired if the mayor did not know when he vetoed the resolution that he was delaying the completion of the building by so doing. Mr. Larson replied that he was not in a position to nnswer for the mayor on that question. The council decided that inasmuch as the mayor did not seem to know what he wanted to do in the matter that they would leave it up to the members of the incoming council. If they wish another resolution to be passed so that the bids can be opened directly after the first of the yenr, the present council will pass a new resolution, as to facilitate the matter as much as possible. Mr. Larson said that he would interview some of the councilmen elect on the matter.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

LIQUOR TAX IS UP TO CONGRESS

Will Place Government Tax Low To Make Bootlegging Unprofitable.

Washington—The work of whipping into sbape a liquor tax program was formally begun with the opening of public heerings before ths two congressionel committees. The first session brought testimony from the congressional tax export, L. H. Parker, that the tax must be low enough to stop a 50,000,000-gallon bootleg flood. Parker estimatod the probable consumption of liquor during the coming yesr et 140,000,000 gallone (approximately that of the 1913-1916 period) if there was an upward revision of the tax from the present $1.10 level. If that levy were retained, Parker estimated, the consumption might be ebout 200,000,000 gallons. Representative Crowther, Republican, New York, ssid the subcommittee which has been studying the tax question felt the tax should be low enough to permit whisky to sell for $1.60 a quart in order to drive the bootlegger out of business. Dr. James M. Dorea, director of the Distilled Spirits Institute, seid he had reports thet the cost of liquor was dropping. Dorsa seid holiday demands might he expected to delay the leveling down in prices, end pointed out that in the preprohibition period the Christmas season always increased the demand and often ths price markedly for a short time. The arrival of two large shipments of liquor from abroed raised hopes for substantial drops in liquor and wine prices. On boerd the liner S. S. Washington wers about 14,600 cases of whisky.

STATE'S BEST 4-H CLUB FOR 1933 IS SELECTED

A trip for one of its leaders to the National Club Congress and the International Livestock Exposition et Chicago was the state prize for this achievement and the club voted to send its adult leader, Paul E. Garbe, who accompanied the Minnesota delegation to Chicago early this month.

Second place was won by the Hamlin 4-H club of Lac qui Parle county, whose score was so near the top that a trip to Chicago was awarded to Claribel Smith, one of the Hamlin club's junior leaders. Ramsey county's Lakeside Boosters placed third, while fourth ranking went to the Straight River Juniors of Hubbard county. About 35 counties were entered in the contest for most outstanding club, the second held in Minnesota. Last year's champion was the Garfield-Arena group of Lac qui Parle county.

T. A. Erickson, state 4-H leader, University Farm, says the award is based on six main points: organization, membership, club meetings, leadership, members' project work and narrative report and secretary's report.

Of the 45 persons of club age in its community, the Woodbury club had 37 enrolled. All members completed at least one project. Nonpartism League Again Headed by A. C. Townley

The National Nonpartisan League again has come into being, with its founder and organizer, Authur Townley, once more its president.

Revival of the organization came at a mass meeting of several hundred farmers at Bismark at which Governor William Langer pleged his support to an industrial program which Townley termed "the originel Nonpartisan League program."

Federal financial support will be sought by a delegation of North Dakotans who left Saturday for Washington in automobiles under leadership of Langer.

Townley's program calls for expansion of state-owned enterprises and includes, in addition to the present bank, mill and elevator operated by the state, packing plants, tanneries shoe and leather products factories, small distributing flour mills and other industries thet will provide a market for the farmers' raw products and work for the people of the state.

Issuence of money by the state to be used as medium of exchange in purchasing materials manufactured by the proposed enterprises was suggested by Townley in reply to a question of "what are we going to use for money?"

Townley asserted it was practicable for the state to have its own money for use with state-manufactured goods, but cautioned that it must be distinguished from federal currency and suggested it be printed on square pieces of paper.

A resolution was adopted at the meeting naming Townley, Congressman William Lemke end F. B. Wood of St. Paul as members of the executive committee. They composed the original executive group of the league.

The resolution called for expansion of the league into other states and asserted former members in other states "would welcome a chance to again follow the leadership of North Dakota in the movement.

The league has been active in North Dakota politics for many years but its national activites virtually were discontinued when Townley was deposed some years ago as league head.

Corn-Hog Contracts Ready to be Signed For 1934, Soon

Corn and hog producers of Pennington county, and of other Minnesota counties will soon be signing contracts for the reduction of their corn and hog output for 1934, according to word received from Andrew Boss, University Farm, St. Paul, in charge of the Minnesota activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration of the federal government.

Late last week Secretary Henry A. Wallace and Administrator George N. Peek advised Mr. Boss that they had approved the contract form to be used by corn-hog producers. The forms will not be in the hands of farmers, however, before December 15. Mr. Wallace and Mr. Peek also announced the appointment of state corn and hog committees in six midwestern states. The Minnesota committee is made up of Mr. Boss (chairman), Harry Muir, farmer, Faribault county, and Henry Bolstad, farmer, Lac qui Parle county. This committee will name temporary county committees to handle the preliminary campaign of education and will keep in touch with the county committees through county agents and other representatives of the state's Agricultural Extension Service, who will serve in the different counties in an advisory capacity. The actual administration and adjustment work of the program in each county, however, will be handled—as in case of the wheat reduction campaign—by a county-wide association of corn-hog producers, to be made up of those signing the contracts.

Rabbi Picks 10 Foremost United States Citizens

Rabbi Louis Newman, whose list of the greatest personalities of the world, named during boom days, caused widespread controversy, Sunday named the "10 greatest living Americans, judged by the light of events of the last few years." He said they were:

Franklin D. Roosevelt.
Louis D. Brandeis, associate justice, U. S. supreme court.
Jane Addams, founder of Hull house, Chicago.
Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader.
John Dewey, philosopher and professor at Columbia university.
Eugene O'Neill, dramatist,
Sinclair Lewis, Nobel prize winner in literature.
Edwin Markham, California poet, who wrote "The Man With the Hoe."
Thomas Hunt Morgan, California physiologist recently awarded the Nobel prize.
Stephen S. Wise, New York rabbi.

Rabbi Newman, in announcing his selection in a radio broadcast, explained the standard by which he made his new selection:

"Mere acquisition of wealth or the exerting of political power does not make a man great; he must incorporate in himself an illustrious idea or a program of human service. Greatness must be judged on the basis of the intellectual, moral, social and spiritual influence emanating from a distinguished personality, affecting and improving the life of multitudes."

Rabbi Newman expressed the opinion that Rabbi Wise is "the leading name in the field of religious life, applied ethics and sociology."

Devils Lake Votes For Municipal Power Project

In a record vote cast in a special election Monday, Devils Lake, N. D. voters approved by a 70 per cent majority construction of a municipal power plant at a cost not to exceed $400,000. The vote was 1,310 to 657.

City Auditor H. W. Swenson said today he expects the city commission to take immediate steps to file an application with the state public works board for a federal grant and loan.

The election climaxed an intense two-weeks campaign by proponents and opponents of the power plant projects.

The Ottertail Power Company whose franchise runs for nine more years, maintained present rates are not discriminatory and are as low as places where municipal plants are operated. Also opposing the project was a taxpayer's committee which contended the city should not go into debt for the plant and that the bonds to be issued were a direct obligation upon the taxpayers.

A citizens committee defended the proposal and joined with members of the commission in sponsoring a campaign in favor of the plant. They said payment of the plant would be made out of the net earnings and in no way would be an obligation upon the taxpayers or their property.

Minnesota's Highway Help Is Double National Average

With allotment of Federal highway funds, Minnesota has put more than twice as many men to work as has the average state, according to a tabulation of national figures in Washington by the American Road Builders Association.

This tabulation, based on figures of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads as of November 25, shows 133,058 men at work on state highway projects paid out of emergency Federal funds in the 48 states. This is an average of approximately 2,784 men to each state. Minnesota, however, is credited with 7,084 men employed, or considerably more than twice the average.

Employment reports of the Minnesota highway department show that the department provided work in November for 22,500 men and 2,000 horses. There were 7,500 employed on construction, 5,000 on maintenance and 10,000 employed temporarily on the Civil Works Administration program.

CONGRESSMAN LUNDEEN WILL SPONSOR CODE FOR JOBLESS

Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Labor Congressman from Minnesota, will sponsor a bill embodying the Unemployed Code formulated by the Illinois section of the Contental Congress of Workers and Farmers. The Legal Board of the Illinois section of Congress is studying the legal form of the measure which in its final form will be introduced to the coming session of the Federal Congrees.

The code calls for strict observance of union standards on relief work where union rates are prevailing and a minimum wage of 50c per hour for unskilled labor, express right of collective bargaining for the organized unemployed and placing of unemployee relief on a permanent basis with worker representation on administrative boards pending the adoption of unemployment insurance.

The code was formulated by the Continental Congress last August and presented to the Federal Relief authorities, by the Illinois, Iowa and other state sections of the Congress. After a Long period of "buck-passing" at Washington where officiale refered it back to state authorities, the special Chicago meeting of the National Committee of the Continental Congress in late October adopted the code and again made demand on Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins for its adoption. Instead, the Civil Works Administration was called into being in November, which altho superficially looking like a concession to the demands of the unemployed code, actully is another temporary expedient but one which could be made a tool for the establishment of the Unemployed Code.

Accordingly, an attempt will be made to get past the Roosevelt admintration officials' checker playing by Congressman Lundeen asking adoption of the code as law by the forthcoming session of the national legislature. Lundeen, one of the six Farmer-Labor Congressmen, has been a staunch supporter of the Continentol Congress of Workers and Farmers since its organization last May when its proceedings were franked out thru the mails under his name.

THE MONEY CHANGERS ARE STILL IN THE TEMPLE

Three news items of particular significance has appeared in the daily press the past week.

First; on December 7th the dailies carried a story to the effect that the Senate Investigating committee uncovered the fact that Harvey Couch, a director in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, connected with and indebted to, the Chase National bank of New York city secured loans to railways from the RFC all of which found its way back to the Chase National bank in payment of loans owed the bank by those railroads. The figures totsled upward of $11,416,000.00.

Second; on the same day, the dailies carried a story from Washington to the effect that the treasury department is issuing one year securities to meet interest obligation now maturing to the sum of $950,000,000 at 2 1-4 per cent. The same item also stated that this will shove the government's debt up to $23,500,000,000.

Third; the dailies of December 8th, tells us that the RFC is buying prefered stock in the Northwest Bancorporation chain banks and effiliates in this state and neighboring states, in the sum of $22,900,000.00.

The first item represent one of the major sins of the Hoover regime and for which he was relegated to the ashcan by the voters, in the last general election with such enthusiasm and alacrity. It represents the presence of the "Money Changers in the Temple" which President Roosevelt so deplored and castigated in his campaign speeches. It was second only to the "Forgotten Man" in the attention it received from Candidate Roosevelt.

The third item vindicates the position taken, by the Independent Bankers' association of this state, who maintain that the "chaingang bankers" still control the destinies of the Treasury Department, Federal Reserve Bank and the RFC. After months of loose talk about helping the depositors of the closed banks, and of assisting the closed banks to reopen, the government pours $22,900,000.00 into chain institutions of the Northwest thus aiding them in tightening the death grip they have secured on this section of the country thru fleecing the gullible investors with holding company stocks. Sold at from $50 to $108 per share and now worth about $4.00 to $6.00 on the market. But our own First National Bank remains closed as do a great number of other independent National banks throughout the country.

On November 20th the Independent Bankers' association addressed a letter to the banks and newspapers of the state protesting the appointment of chain bankers to all important positions in the Federal Reserve Bank and Treasury Department from which we quote the following:

> "Mr. Morgenthau apparently pays little attention to the sane counsel of the liberal Democratic leaders of this state. Some believe that Commissioner Peck, a relative of Andy Rahn, makes the recommendations that are accepted. Others are of the opinion that the group bankers, through their long-continued lobbing at Washington, are rather close to the Treasury Department. Again one hears talk of liberal contributions to the Democratic National Treasury to help clean up the deficit of the last election. The press has reported that R. C. Lilly, President of the First National Bank of St. Paul, contributed $10,000; that Schreve Archer, director of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, handed in $5,000; that J. B. Baird, President, and N. Paul DeLander, Vice President of the First Securities Corporation, turned in $1,000 each to the Democratic National treasury. These organizations are all subsidiaries or members of the two large bank groups. Perhaps the officers of these institutions expect something in return for their generous gifts, and if they did, they should be well satisfied."

Well, evidently they were not satisfied, as this latest steam shovelling of federal funds into their instructions would indicate. Nor will they ever be satisfied. Their gluttenous appetites have no bounds— no limits They are like the bottomless pit.

Item number two, completes the vicious circle. It tells us how and where the government is securing these $22,900,000 as well as the untold millions that is being poured into PWA, the CWA, and other frenzled activities with which the government expects to bring us back to prosperity, but which will with this system of financing only bring us to absolute ruin. The government's credit, the resources of the entire country and future generations are being pledged, with inteest, to the capitalists and the chain bankers. The interest on the present National debt totals the staggering sum of almost $800,000,000 per year, almost a billion dollars. The interest on other public debt exceeds this probably many times. A speaker we heard the other day stated that at the rate of gold production in the United States it would take 90 years to mine enough gold to pay our interest bill for one year.

Thinking Men and Women, where will this end?

The recognition of Russia with the attending hoisting of the red flag of that country over its consular headquarters in this country, remind us of the battles that raged against displaying such a flag in this state a few years ago.

S. A. Stockwell, of Minneapolis, a veteran liberal, and a member of the House of the Representatives, who entered that body for the first time in 1891, consistently opposed such a law. But last winter at the regular session he would have his little joke. A bill was under rollcall that would make it mandatory upon truckers to diplay a red flag from the rear of their truck when parked on a highway. Every member was voting "yea" until Mr. Stockwell's name was called. He voted "no" very decisively and loud enough for every one in the chamber to hear. After the vote was announced he arose and gravely addressing the speaker he said. "Mr. Speaker, I want to explain my vote. I voted no, because I don't believe in legalizing the red flag in Minnesota." He sat down smiling amid the roar of laughter.

When the incident was recalled and smiled over in the corridors later, one of the members said, "Well, I've changed my opinion considerably about the red flag, because I've noticed lately that every time I see a red flag displayed somewhere there is a sign nearby saying, "Men Working!"

The Week In The LEGISLATURE

By Hon. Hjalmer Petersen
Member Legislature, Pine Co.

The extraordinary session of the Minnesota Legislature—the seventh in the history of the state—called together by Governor Floyd B. Olson, convened at noon on Tuesday, December 5, 1933.

The House session was opened by Secretary of State Mike Holm and the members were sworn in by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Representative F. R. Atwood of Winona, nominated Charles Munn of Osseo, for speaker and this was seconded by Rep. Geo. W. Rodenberg of St. Paul, who related precedence taken in special sessions of the Legislature in the history of Minnesota. Special sessions have been held on an average of about every ten years and it has been customary to elect the same officials at those special sessions as served at the preceding regular session. Mr. Munn received 112 votes, Rep. R. E. Dunn, one; those not voting on speakership numbered 15, and two members of the 131 have died since the regular session began last January.

Harry L. Allen of Mankato, first assistant chief clerk in the regular session, was selected chief clerk to take the place of Frank T. Starkey, who is now a member of the State Industrial Commission. Inasmuch as many of the regular committees will likely not be functioning in the special session the membership on some of the more important committees has been increased. The rules committee will have 19 instead of 11 members; appropriations, 39 instead of 35: taxes and tax laws, 37 instead of 31 and a special relief committee of 35 members has also been set up in the House. Rep. Finstnen is the chairman of the latter committee.

In the Senate there is naturally no dispute amongst the members over who is to preside and wield the gavel as that is always a matter for the voters to decide—the electing of the lieutenant governor. Therefore, K. K. Solberg is chairman of that body, the same as in the regular session of 1933.

The Governor's Message

On Wednesday afternoon Governor Olson delivered his message to the Legislature in a clear and distinct manner, before a crowded chamber. The senators occupied seats around the speaker's rostrum with the representatives in their regular seats. The governor's message showed breadth, vision and study of problems confronting the commonwealth of Minnesota.

The chief executive advocated receivership action against tax delinquents having actual or potential value in property, the receiver to operate the business and collect unpaid taxes as soon as possible.

To Strengthen Tax Laws

To further advance tax collection and clarify the laws, the governor proposed to give the State Tax Commission power to abate penalities for those unable to pay, and advocated—

Progressive increase in interest and penality on unpaid taxes based on amount of delinquency.

Eliminate all defenses for nonpayment except the defense that the property is appraised at a higher basis than similar property in the same district.

Terminate the period for redemption from nonpayment of taxes. Lodge title to delinquent lands in the state and pay counties for such transfer.

For State Dispensary

Governor Olson is for a state dispensary system of liquor control, like many members of the Legislature. But, if this should not be made law, he suggested that meanwhile a private system, in charge of a State Commissioner of Liquor, with control over licenses for on-sale or package sale in stores be substituted. The Governor also asked that the proposition of a state dispensary system for liquor, if not enacted in this special session, be submitted to the voters at the next general election.

Meanwhile he sugests that:

Municipalities license liquor stores (drug stores or grocery stores) subject to the State Commissioner's veto, and the locality to keep the license fee. Municipalities to operate their own liquor stores if they wish.

On-sale, by the drink, to be under exclusive control of local governing bodies, and licenses to be issued to bona fide hotels, restaurants and clubs.

Upholds Local Option

Local option— no liquor sales in counties which showed majority for prohibition in repeal election, until they voted otherwise.

Only one license to a person or firm; no makers or wholesalers to be interested in a retail store.

A state tax on all intoxicating liquors.

A state tax of $1 a barrel on 3.2 beer.

Heavy penalties for violations and right to close premises after licenses are revoked. Right to limit off-sale profits.

It was plainly evident in the governor's message that he seeks, together with the Legislature, to control liquor as much as possible and to further the cause of temperance. The big question, of course is, "How can liquor best be controlled?" That is the problem for the Legislature to work out. No system will be perfect. While a majority of Minnesota citizens voted against the 18th amendment, it is believed that the overwhelming majority of all the citizens are anxious and eager that the best use of liquor and temperance be promoted.

Relief Money Asked For.

Governor Olson stated in his address that the care of the destitute is public and not a private affair; and inasmuch as there is still much unemployment and some destitution, he asked the Legislature to provide for more money to be used by the State Executive Council in the alleviation of want.

Several public hearings have already been held before the Senate and House Temperance committees concerning the various bills introduced for liquor control. Senator Spindler of Buffalo, and Rep. Samec of St. Paul, veteran members, are chairmen of the respective committees.

Revenue Producers

A bill has been introduced for a one-cent a gallon increase in the tax on gasoline, estimated to raise $2,000,000 to be used for work relief by the State Highway Department to match the fedeal aid. Another bill is for a 60-cents a gallon tax on liquor, which the governor estimated would raise for in excess of $2,000,000 annually. And still another bill would place $1 a barrel tax on beer, estimated to raise more than $1,000,000.

There are many ideas on how to best control liquor and how further public relief so it may be doubtful that the special session will do its work in 15 days as proposed.

Kindness During Life

I would rather have one little rose
From the garden of a friend,
Than to have the choicest flowers
When my stay on earth must end.

I would rather have one pleasant word
In kindness said to me,
Than flattery when my heart is still
And life has ceased to be.

I would rather have a loving smile
From friends I know are true,
Than tears shed round my casket
When this world I've bid adieu.

Bring me all your flowers today—
Whether pink, or white, or red;
I'd rather have one blossom now
Than a truckload when I'm dead.

MONEY! MONEY! MONEY!

(By Morris Kaplan)

(In view of the fact that the money question is coming in for a great deal of discussion, and the Presidents's gold buying policy is being so severely criticised by the so-called "sound money" adherants, we feel that the following discussion of money by Morris Kaplan, well-known socialist lecturer and writer should be of interest to our readers.

Mr. Kaplan presents the orthodox Marxian view, and his article dispels the charge of "red," "socialistic" and so on that is being hurled at those who favor inflation in some form or another.—Editor.)

News reports advises us that Canada has instructed all its postoffices to refuse to accept United States money at par. My what a come down. It is only recently that we in the U. S. A., charged as much as 25% to change Canadian currency and now lo, and behold, the tables seem to have been turned and Canada is taking its revenge.

Nor is it necessary to call names or to be aggrieved because such action has been taken by them. The fact is, that we have been dabbling so much with the money question during the last few months that it will require more than the financial experts and the "Brain Trust" to lead us out of the maize.

What and why is money? Some of us know that it is a medium of exchange, and a measure of values. But, altho as a medium of exchange anything that government decrees can be made to function, yet when it is to become likewise the measure of values, especially in international trading, then at least until such time as there is international agreement, there can only be one basic method by which to measure values, and that measure must under capitalism be, a commodity which possesses within itself two factors; 1st, Labor Power, and 2nd, Convenience of Exchange. It is because of this that the capitalistic nations during its periods of experiences have evolved and finally decided upon gold as the logical standard by which to maintain values of all other commodities. What many of our conventional economists who are now tinkering with the money question have overlooked is that intrinsically and fundamentally Labor creates all economic values, and that labor power is the determining factor that enters into the price of all commodities— that there are times when commodity prices may sell below the cost of production, and then again there are other times when there will be appreciation of commodity prices, but as a general average the labor cost of one commodity equals and sells for the labor cost of another commodity— thus prices are ever secondary and are basically dependent upon inherent social labor power embodied in such commodities.

The above statement may not be comprehensive to the average layman but every student of scientific economics and of Marxism knows that the basis of capitalistic government hinges upon a currency that is not elastic, but is stringent in its adherence to the labor value inherent in the money commodity. Marxists and adherents of so-called "sound money" altho bitter foes as to ownership of industries are nevertheless a unit in the recognition of the soundness of what money fundamentally represents. Capitalism may term that commodity gold, or silver. Socialists term it Labor Power.

That is why in a debate held many years ago between "Coin" Harvey, the author of Coins Financial School, and Congressman Roswell G. Horr, on the money question, Mr. Horr, who was looked upon as the most eminent authority on the money question and altho a Republican in politics, used as his text books, extracts from Karl Marx's "Capital," and H. G. Hyndman's book entitled "Economics of Socialism."

To sum it up briefly— no Socialist who understands what Socialism is, can be an inflationist, because inflation is only another term for bubble, and bubbles always burst. And that also is why the present administration, no matter how honest its intentions, and no matter how hard it may strive to bring about a betterment of the "forgotten man" will find its efforts futile and wasteful because everything that it has so far attempted is based upon fiat— merely another name for credit. Thus we find on every hand our debts mounting to the skies until the very heavens will open up and cry out "Enough of this tomfoolery, get back to your own mother earth and settle your problems down there instead of coming up here with your foolishness."

Those of us who know something about economics, know that the present indebtedness of the government of the country, Federal, State, County, and Municipal, is so great that our combined income will not begin to pay the interest on such indebtedness, let alone the principal, which is sunk and will remain sunk: We have become torpid and dare not face the facts. Our debts are climbing and the present program of the R.F.C., altho it is alive to the necessity of doing something for the down and outs and the unemployed, and is doing all it can, nevertheless has very little of constructive work to its credit. Perhaps through these experiences it may learn, but the enormous cost is a very sad experience, and in great part could have been avoided had these men the perspicuity of Marx, and Ricardo and of Adam Smith. But we have developed very few statesmen in this country and these few are not politically minded and therefore have no standing in official Washington.

According to the 1930 U. S. census, Minnesota has over 4,500,000 acres in woodland area, or an average of 26 acres per farm, bringing in a value of farm timber amounting to $10,756,988.

CALIFORNIA'S HOODLUM GOVERNOR

(The Minnesota Union Advocate)

If anyone has wondered why the present governor of California has steadfastly refused to pardon Tom Mooney despite the fact that 98 per cent of the people of the nation are convinced of Mooney's innocence, there should be no further reason for wonderment. Justice is not an element in the mental makeup of a hoodlum.

No one can defend the two men who brutally murdered the Hart boy and then attempted to extort a ransom for his return "alive" to his wealthy parents. But no one can defend the crazy mob, led by an 18-year-old hoodlum, which battered down the jail doors and took these two killers to a park across the street for a Roman holiday. The details of this lynching are nauseating and revolting. That mothers, with babes in their arms, stood by and watched the banging and mutilation of two helpless men, while thousands of men and boys howled like blood-crazed fiends—these events challenge understanding.

But the greatest infamy of all is the attitude assumed by James Rolph, Jr., governor of California, and sworn to uphold the laws of the state. Instead of demanding an investigation, Rolph praised the lynchers for their "fine work" and promised to pardon anyone indicted and convicted for taking part in the San Jose anarchy. He gloried in the "fine spirit" of the hoodlums recruited by an illiterate cowboy, who boasted of the fact that he rounded up his gang from the speakeasies of San Jose; he voiced the opinion that he would be willing to turn any convicted kidnapper over to the "good people" of San Jose, and allow these God-fearing citizens to repeat the events of last Sunday night.

If there is any decency in California it will be crystallized into action to remove this hoodlum from the governorship and retire him to the social and political oblivion he merits.

IT MAKES BRANCH BANKERS QUAKE

(Minneapolis Labor Review)

There is something about the working farmers and the city workers clasping hands as they are in the Upholsterers' strike and the Holiday Farmers' Strike that causes the branch bankers and the rest of the chisellers to quake in their boots.

It is the biggest story that has broken for years in the agricultural-industrial world, this sending of food by the striking farmers to the striking Upholsterers of Minneapolis.

Do you see it headlined in any daily paper? Do you see it on the front page of any daily paper? Hardly! The grip of the banks on the press is too strong.

They see in this happening the portent of great things to come for the working farmers and the city workers. They see in this the shattering of the bunk of the branch bank propaganda that attempted to separate the city workers and the working farmers.

It is a most generous and splendid thing that these striking farmers are doing in aiding their brothers on strike in the cities. What they have they are willing to share. And what they are doing is arousing the deepest gratitude in the hearts of the city workers for the working farmers and will cement these two elements of society as nothing has before.

Anyone who had brains would commence to see what this joining of hands of city workers and working farmers means. But branch bankers see in it only something that can be destroyed if it only is not headlined or put on the front page of the bank controlled press.

If the shade of King Canute ever walks abroad in the world it might step over and greet its descendants who are for the very immediate present in control of the finances of the city thru ownership of the branch banks.

COST OF OUR DRAINAGE CRAZE

Detroit Lakes Record

The Benson Monitor, in Swift county, gives some interesting data on the aftermath of the ditch costs of that county by pointing out the tax on land in some parts of the county run as high as $50 per acre.

The county as a whole spent $1,000,000 on eight judicial and ten county ditches during the drainage craze, and at the begining of 1933 the total sum of $1,261,503 was still owing on the principal. By the close of 1934 more than a million dollars will have been paid in interest and less than $250,000 on the principal. At this rate, by the time the principal has been paid in full, the interest charges will have been five times the sum of the principal.

Two of the judicial ditches cost $1,092,000; and of this only $29,000 has been paid—after a lapse of ten or fifteen years.

Truly, we were paying high for the cost of our folly in draining off our natural reservoirs, for this year the drought hit Swift county with unusual severity, and the people there would be willing to bond themselves for another million and a half if they could have their water back again.

ONE ACT PLAY CONTEST NEW STATE FARM EVENT

Footlights will be the battleground for some of the future's most "dramatic" struggles of Minnesota farm people, predicts the University Department of Agriculture, which has just launched a statewide one-act play contest, the finals of which will be held each year at Farmers and Homemakers Week, University Farm.

L. A. Churchill of the agricultural extension staff says this contest has been established in recognition of the keen and growing interest rural groups have shown in dramatics, especially one-act plays. Five counties have held countywide one-act play contests this year, these being North St. Louis, Itasca, Sherburne, Scott and Lyon. The champion groups from these counties have been invited to compete for state honors at the agricultural college, during the Farmers and Homemakers short course, January 15 to 20. W. D. Stegner, in general charge of the short course, says a suitable trophy will be provided for the winning players.

Only groups composed of strictly farm people will be eligible to compete in the statewide contest, and only adults may enter. 4-H groups will be barred. Rules and regulations are still in the making, but full details will be announced at the short course in January.

Farm bureau units and other community groups interested in entering the 1934 contest are urged to send representatives to Farmers and Homemakers Week to enroll in a special training course in leadership, recreation and dramatics. A series of lessons on one-act play production will be part of this new short course feature.

The Nov. 15 figure is for 1932 taxes due and payable in 1933, while the Jan. 1 figure is for 1931 taxes, due in 1932.

St. Paul—The following grants and loans in Minnesota have been made by the U. It was believed that the new line will open a new epoch in aviation for the Twin Cities and the northwest states.

RAILROADER HEADS NEW ACTION COMMITTEE OF CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Clear indication of the fact that the Continental Congress movement has proven itself to Chicago labor was seen when 60 organizations paid affiliation fees and sent delegates to the meeting of the Cook county (Chicago) section to elect a new action committee.

Organizations represented included 15 trade unions, 21 labor political organizations, 11 fraternal (labor) groups and 7 unemployed unions. George Meade of the Brotherhood Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen was chosen chairman, M. Barkan of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union Vice-Chairman and Ethel Watson Secretary.

The labor disputes committee of the old action committee reported active aid in picketing and literature distribution rendered six main trade union groups and many individual locals. The same unions were furnished legal aid through the Congress legal board. The new action committee of thirty members broadly representative of the organizations making up the Congress will carry on even more vigorously than in the past due to the official support of nearly three score of affiliated labor groups.

AG. COLLEGE WILL AID ON LAND USE PROBLEM

The land-use problem is one of the vital problems confronting the nation; the agricultural emergency program is forcing it right out into the forefront of affairs, and the agricultural colleges will be relied on for aid in its solution, declared Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, in a recent address in Chicago.

Citing President Roosevelt's announced policy—that as fast as good new lands were brought into cultivation by drainage and irrigation projects, a corresponding productive unit of marginal or submarginal land would be taken out of cultivation, and kept out unless and until there was need for it—Mr. Wallace said:

"Some new machinery is necessary to carry out the president's land policy and several of us have been preparing plans for it. Exactly what form it will take, how soon it will be ready, and how rapidly and extensively it will be able to operate, no one can say as yet. Before long I hope we will have solved the legal and administrative phases involved, and can then complete our plans and make them public.

"In all our activites in connection with land utilization, both the activities now under way and those under consideration, we shall rely heavily upon the Association of Land Grant Colleges and the individuel state agricural colleges and experiment stations."

For this, he added there is good precedent, "inasmuch as the Land Grant Colleges and the Federal Dept. of Agriculture have always interworked in close harmony in the development of land-use studies and policies."

Springfield—Springfield will have a well equipped landing field if the plans of the city council and the Boosters Club materialize. Option has been taken on a small tract adjoining the city on Highway No. 7 for this purpose. Negotiations are under way with the CWA for the expenditure of $5,000 for improvements. Most of this expenditure will be for labor for unemployed.

St. Paul—With an estimated 45,000 unemployed already put to work under the federal civil works program the state board of control announced the full quota for Minnesota of 56,000 men and women would be put to work this week. Mrs. Blance La Du, chairman of the board of control, which has charge of the federal civil works projects in the state, stated that the board has approved 1,650 civil works projects throughout the state.

St. Paul—In the face of a rush by wets to get their liquor control plans before the state legislature, Farmer-Labor senators opened a fight to delay a vote on liquor until Governor Olson's $5,000,000 public relief plan has been adopted. Despite the fact that both houses agreed on immediate hearings on the liquor measures and went so far as to hold a joint hearing, the Farmer-Labor senators met with Governor Olson and mapped out their maneuvers for state relief.

EROSION

Hordes of gullies now remind us
We should build our lands to stay,
And, departing, leave behind us
Fields that have not washed away;
When our boys assume the mortgage
On the land that's had our toil,
They'll not have to ask the question
"Here's the farm, but WHERE'S the Soil"

Where Orchid Thrives

To many people, the word "orchid" suggests something strange and exotic; yet these plants find their habitat not only in the steaming jungles of the tropics, but Far North and throughout the temperate zone.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

YOUTH IN THE SADDLE

Just what is going to happen in regard to the liquor problem in the United States after the twenty-first amendment comes into effect next week is very difficult to say. But one point which is absolutely indisputable is the fact that the working out of the tangle is largely in the hands of youth. And therein lies a ray of hope.

That gleam is especially bright when youth makes such pronouncements as the fraternity members of the University of North Dakota have just laid down in their mandate against the serving of beer in the frat houses of that great educational institution.

The young people themselves took the action after a complete and free-will vote by each organization separately—thirteen different groups. There was no coercion from the authorities. The students made the decision and the ballot was unanimous.

Now that the battle is over there are almost as many attitudes as to why repeal happened, and as varying, as the are views on the NRA, but undoubtedly one of the reasons was the idea in the minds of many elderly, European-bred voters, that there might be what a delightful old German professor at the University of Chicago described as "de gemutliche Deutsche wein stenbe"—that is, the informal, unpretentious, wineroom such as was in his home town, where he was wont to gather with his comrades and in most leisurely fashion dawdle hours away with discussion and sipping a glass of wine.

But that type of thing America never knew and that pace of life has gone forever in Europe. The twenty-first amendment cannot bring back leisurely living except perhaps to the few whose incomes will be swelled with the liquor profits.

Life is speeded up to the pace of the automobile, air travel, instantaneous transmission of news by radio and thousands of machines that must be kept humming for mass production. Such is the life that youth knows and that is the life for which youth realizes that the body and the mind must be attuned and trained.

Jobs are scarce and they are now only for the best equipped. Even the young university professor has no leisure to loiter an afternoon away. Every university, every factory, every business, every office has taken up all possible slack in the number of employees. The man or women who would rather ruin health and mind through drinking than keep fit for the job, won't stay long on the payroll these days.

Despite all the loud and raucous wailing about "drinking youth," the very attitude of youth on the liquor question no doubt is one of the reasons why hundreds of beer parlors that were opened last spring, have completely folded up for lack of patronage.

The young people know life from the viewpoint of speed and fitness. They have seen the failure of their elders in enforcing the law that was to keep liquor under control and, true to youth, they want to try something else. Of course some of them will, unfortunately, become tragic victims of the liquor traffic, but as a whole, youth, especially if they are really informed as to the scientific effects of alcohol, are almost sure to resist a return to such domination by liquor on the human body and on the body politic as existed before they were old enough to understand.

From the wailing of the wets it might have seemed as if the modern fraternity house had become a veritable grog shop, but with such young people as the Greek letter students in North Dakota setting the fashions, it may be that the liquor interests are in for a great and disappointing surprise.

PROWLERS DRUB CROOKSTON A. C., 38-15

Snapping out of their slump the high school basket ball team drubed the Crookston A. C. 38 to 15 last Friday night at Crookston. The Prowlers have shown increased improvesince their game with Greenbush two weeks ago.

According to Coach Dooley the boys seemed to tire a little on the large A. C. floor. This is not the result of poor training because the boys are used to working on a small floor as they have no large practice gym.

Kielty played outstanding ball running up 14 points for the Prowlers. Dahl, Battleson and Korstad tied for second place with 0 points each.

SUPPORT THE RINK

It is generally conceeded that the community skating rink is a very fine and wholesome form of recreation. Under the supervision it has enjoyed the last two years no one has had any fear of letting youngsters go there for their entertainment.

People have praised it, said they wouldn't be without it, and yet that is exactly what they are headed for. If these people people do not get behind the project, do not respond by supporting the rink by buying a ticket, donating a little if they can afford it, there is just one conclusion, we will be without a rink.

Some people using the rink countless times during the season take it for granted, they don't consider that it costs them a great deal more for other forms of entertainment from which they, in many instances, do not get the enjoyment nor recreational benefits.

Be fair to yourself and to the rink sponsors, if you want a rink, support it, if you don't, then do not expect the other fellow to support it for you.

The rink is now closed. Let's support it, let's buy that ticket, a donation will help, anything, but let's make a raise and open it. Let's act now.

LEGISLATURE MAY CONTINUE IN EXTRA SESSION TILL FEBRUARY

Getting nowhere in their struggles to find the proper method of legalizing liquor in Minnesota, state legislators today were looking for statutory approval for a recess to go home over the holidays. Despite preparations of what is reported to be a compromise liquor control bill the legislature would recess next week and resume its work immediately after January 1st. It is very probable that it will continue beyond the 15th of next month.

The reported compromize bill for liquor control may be introduced into the house late today. The measure which follows to a certain extent the recommendations of Governor Olson's liquor control commission is being drafted as follows:

The appointment of a liquor commissioner.

License fees of $250 a year for off-sale places.

Annual wholesaler and distiller license of $15,000.

Local option.

Granting of on-sale licenses only to hotels of 50 or more rooms in cities of the first class, graded down to 10 rooms in cities of the fourth class; to restaurants which can serve 20 persons at a time.

ROOSEVELT BACKS PLAN TO DISCONTINUE PAY CUTS

President Roosevelt is preparing to restore a third of the 15 per cent government pay cut as soon as possible and indications are that he might effect it soon.

This was learned after a discussion by the house appropriations subcommittee considering the house offices appropriations bill which will be the first of the large supply measures to be reported to congress in January and will provide funds sufficient to cover salaries at the basic rates governed by the classification act. These were the rates which were cut 15 per cent under the economy act by presidential order but it is not expected that the full amount will be put back at one time.

Members of the subcommittee learned informally of the President's support of the five per cent plan.

COMMITTEE GETS REPORT ON NAZIS' U.S. ACTIVITIES TUES.

Chairman Dickstein of the house Immigration Tuesday made public a report on alleged Nazi propaganda activities in the United States, prepared for him by Maximillian Bader, New York lawyer and former teacher of German.

The report, hitherto kept secret, was read into the record of the committee's informal investigation of Nazi activities.

The report charged that the Nazi machine in this country was seeking to arouse "hatred and bigotry" not only against Jewry but also against Catholicism.

This charge was based on an article last January in America's Deutsche Post, which the report described as a Nazi publication. The article dealt with the Pope's encyclical. The article "regretted" that many German Catholics let themselves "be influenced by alien-spirited Rome."

TUBERCULIN TEST GIVEN STUDENTS AFTER CHRISTMAS

Test Will be Given Only to Students With Parents Consent

Testing of high school students for tuberculosis, in cases where parents consent is given only, by the Mantoux Tuberculin Skin Test will be started shortly after the Christmas holidays, according to Miss Eunice Lindgren, school nurse.

The Mantoux Tuberculin test is a simple harmless test by which it is determined whether or not any person has ever received tuberculosis into his body, according to the Minnesota Public Health Association bulletin which states:

"Tests among many children of school age in many places show that 25 out of every 100 children have tuberculosis in their bodys. There are no means of detecting whether or not children are infected by the disease except by the Mantoux test. The test is made by applying a drop of liquid called tuberculin in the upper surface of the skin, usually of the forearm. If the spot where the drop was applied becomes red and slightly swollen within two or three days, it means that there are live tuberculosis germs somewhere in the childs body. The small red spot soon disappears leaving no scar and no bad effects whatever, upon the child.

"The tuberculin used is a colorless, entirely harmless liquid. It is thoroughly sterilized by heat and by filtration and contains no living or dead germs. Do not confuse tuberculin with injections or serums of any sort."

"The test will be given by Dr. Bernard of the Oakland Park Sanatorium free of charge," Miss Lindgren, school nurse, said, "and in the case of a student having a positive reaction the X-ray examination will be paid for out of the Christmas seal fund."

About half the parents have sent in consent slips according to Miss Lindgren, who says, "parents must give their consent before any child will receive the test."

Lincoln high school's alumni will hold their annual reunion at the Sons of Norway hall next Thursday, December 28, according to Fred Wengeler, chairman of the committee in charge.

The program will consist of dancing, begining at 9 o'clock, and during the course of the evening a business meeting will be conducted. "At this time officers for the coming year will be elected and all old and new business will be brought up," Mr. Wengeler said. Following the meeting dancing will continue. Refreshments will be served continuously after the business meeting until the close of the reunion.

"Invitations are being sent out to all alumni on the mailing list," Mr. Wengeler said. "but as the list is incomplete, we urge every alumni and members of the Senior class to plan on attending. In the past many of our alumni have kept away from the reunion because they were under the impression that it was a formal affair. The reunion this year is to be informal and every one should arrange to be present."

Skating Rink Fund Reachs $260; Public Response Good

The response to the American Legion Skating Rink Committee's drive for funds has been splendid, Alex Campbell, committe chairman announced this morning. "Up to date," Mr. Campbell said, "$260 has been received from a canvass of the business district."

The rink was reopened last Sunday night following its closing one week ago yesterday because of shortage of funds.

Fred C. Proehl Addresses Farmer-Labor Meeting Fr.

Fred C. Proehl of Bronson, a member of the State Banking Department staff spoke at the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Association club last Friday evening. Mr. Eric Kittelson of St. Hilaire, who also was scheduled to speak was unable to attend because of the heavy snowfall which blocked the highway from his home.

Mr. Proehl devoted his time to a discussion of the monetery and banking system of the country and traced the history of interest from biblical times until the present. "Only three hundred years ago interest on money in any degree, no matter how small was considered usury," Mr. Proehl said, "and was punished, in some countries with death." He traced the history of the Federal Reserve Act, from its first draft and until its adoption by the Congress and signature of President Wilson. The bill had been put up to President Taft earlier, Mr. Proehl stated, but Taft refused to have any thing to do with it because as he said, " It would tend to centralize wealth in the hands of a few people." His thumbs down policy on this bill turned the financiers from him and resulted in his defeat in the next election," Mr. Proehl stated.

Only a small crowd attended the meeting due to the severe cold and heavy snowfall.

County Board Votes $1,000 To Maintain County Agent

Lively Debate Features Public Hearing Held in Courtroom Monday Afternoon

About three hundred farmers packed the court rooms and corridors of the court house last Monday during the public hearing held by the board of commissioners on the county agent appropriation question. Both sides were well represented, tho it appeared that those who favored the appropriation was in the majority. A spirited debate took place wherein some personalities were indulged in. Both sides of the argument were given unlimited opportunity to be heard. J. W. Erlandson, Mr. Bjerke, Gordon Olson, Mr. Forslund and Mr. Funnesdahl, speaking in behalf of the Taxpayers' Economy League, in opposition to the appropriation cited the fact that the question has been voted upon by the farmers in three township elections and an overwhelming vote had been cast against the appropriation. "I have nothing against the County Agent Mr. Douglass personally," said Mr. Erlandson, "but I believe that the will of the majority should prevail."

"Let those who benefit from his services pay for him, "Mr. Forslund said, "those who do not use him should not be forced to pay for him. We should pay for our own hired men."

Mr. McNelly of the Agricultural Extention Department urged that the county agent be kept on, maintaining that he is needed now more than ever because of the fact that he takes care of the work of organizing the farmers under the Agricultural adjustment Act. Several women present spoke in favor of retaining the agent pointing out the educational work carried on thru his office. Citing specifically the 4-H club work and the Women's Home Clothing projects. Several farmers spoke, favoring the retentions of the agent and urged the board to make the appropriation.

In executive session later in the afternoon, the board voted to make the usual $1500 appropriation, with the understanding that the county agent must so budget his expenditures that not more than $1000 is used from the funds appropriated.

Payment of Old Age pensions was postponed until the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1st, because of a ruling of the District court that appropriation must be made before warrants can be drawn for this purpose.

A request for an appropriation of $125 for the Red River Valley Winter Shows was refused.

The current poor aid bills were allowed in the amount of $1,950.

BURSTED FLUE IS CAUSE OF DIESEL UNIT SHUTDOWN

Service Is Resumed After The Crew Works Twenty Hour Shift

A leaking flue in the exhaust boiler of the McIntosh-Seymour unit caused an interruption in the A. C. light service in the city Tuesday evening. A boiler which is used for the double purpose of muffler and heating the building sprung a leak and the water seeping into the exhaust manifold almost filling the outlet caused excessive back pressure. The resulting heating of the engine produced a steam pressure in the exhaust manifold waterjacket causing it to burst. A crack almost two feet long developed, which was welded by Phillip Hawkins with the electric welder. The bursted flue in the boiler was plugged and the unit was started again Wednesday forenoon, but had to be shut down again while the valves, which had been injured by the excessive heat, were reconditioned.

The unit was put back into operation Wednesday afternoon, after the engineers had put in a twenty hour shift making the repairs. Stores, which have only the A. C. current installed, were in the dark for about two hours during Tuesday evening, and hastily gathered lamps, lanterns and candles to serve in the emergency.

Pennington Ties For Sixth Place At R. R. Valley Shows Contest

Spelling contestants at the Red River Valley Winter Shows this year made poorer showings than have been recorded for a number of years. The cause of the low winning percentages Mr. Matheson, county superintendent of county schools, believes, was due to the advancement of the contest date which gave the students much less time to prepare for the test.

Pennington county ranked in a tie for sixth place this year. Following are the first six winners. First place, Margaret Mair of Terham, Ottertail county, 78 per cent; and tied for sixth Nordling, Hallock, Kittson county, 91 percent; third, Beata Yange, Twin Valley, Norman county, 88 per cent fourth Fern Adolphson, Argule, Marshall county, 81 percent; fifth, Geneva Senstad, Clearbrook, Clearwater county, 76 per cent and Evelyn Nelplace Adlien Olson of Lengby, Polk county, 7E6 percent and Evelyn Nelson of Hazel, Pennington county, 76 percent.

Nine counties out of thirteen in the valley were represented.

RED LAKE FALLS RAILWAY SECTION FOREMAN KILLED

Alfonse Guerin Is Instantly Killed In G. N. Yards

There were no witnesses to the accident, but it is believed that Mr. Guerin, having followed a freight train into this city from St. Hilaire on an inspection tour, left his speeder near the city and walked into the yards on the tracks, inspecting rails and switches. Whether he was walking backwards, was cleaning a switch or occupied in some other manner so that he was not aware of the approching train is not known. His shovel was found near the body.

At the time a blizzard was blowing from the northwest, and with poor vissbility Guerin was apparently unaware of the approaching engine until it hit him.

Mr. Guerin was 49 years old and had been in the service for approximately twenty-eight years. The body was removed to Erickson and Lund Funeral home and was taken to Red Lake Falls later in the day.

THIEF RIVER AREA PRODUCE CREDIT ASS'N. IS FORMED

Co-operative Association Will Give Farmers Chattel Loans

Organization of a Production Credit Association was begun Tuesday at a meeting of farmers with County Agent R. M. Douglass. The object of the corporation, Mr. Douglass said,"is to set up in different parts of the state, association to care for produce loans to farmers on chattle mortgages. This will eventually replace the Barnyard loans and furnish the farmer with a intermediate credit source."

D. C. Devorchec, economist from the University farm, was here to help with the organization and draw up the articles of the corporation, which are submitted to the Produce Credit Bank established in St. Paul, for approval. "We expect to be in operation here shortly after the first of the year if approval is granted," Mr. Douglass said.

This district will be known as the Thief River Falls Production Credit Association and will include Red Lake County, Pennington, Roseau, eastern Marshall, Lake of the Woods, and north western Beltrami. The Association Board is composed of L. A. Nelson and S. E. Hunt, of Pennington county, F. S. Erdmann of Red Lake county, and Fred Voth and O. H. Norhre of Marshall county.

This cooperative credit association will be under the supervision of the state bank at St. Paul. The borrowers will be able to obtain chattle loans, but will have to take five per cent of the loan in the association's stock on his first loan. After he once has obtained stock in the corporation he will not have to buy stock to get a second loan if it does not exceed the first loan in principal.

150 Cars Drouth Hay To Be Shipped; Soon

This can be done because the federal government is using its funds, under the relief administration, for purchasing grain and feeds, leaving the state money to be spent for buying hay.

Up to the present time Pennington county has shipped a total of 130 car loads of hay to drough areas for which nearly $12,000 has been paid by the state, through Mr. Lundgren's office.

Trovaton Takes Caplan to Task For Stand on Money Question

FUNDAMENTAL REQUIREMENTS OF A SCIENTIFIC MONEY SYSTEM

In the last issue of the Thief River Falls Forum there is an article on money which is about as good propaganda for our deflationists as any put out by the American Bankers Association, and the editors comments on it were very timely, because currency inflation now is the only possible way to avoid repudiation and bankruptcy.

This article was written by Morris Kaplan, the great Socialist exponent, and thus shows one of the main reasons why the Sosialist party in the United States never could make much headway. Therefore, it behoove us Farmer-Laborites to be on guard when the National Farmer-Labor or "New Third Party" National Convention shall be called by the L. I. P. A. (which is practically a Socialist organization) so that we get control of its Platform Committee and see that the same money and banking planks go into our 1934 platform that were included in our 1932 National Farmer-Labor and Liberty Party platform.

Mr. Kaplan says "some of us know that it (money) is a medium of exchange and a measure of values." Every intelligent person knows money is a medium of exchange, but "some of us" know that money is not a measure of value any more than the words "foot, inch" and so forth are measures of length before they are clearly and correctly marked on a rule. So it is with money when disassociated with commodities. So this idea comes down from the age of barter, when the preious metals were used in barter. Originally they were in no way money—that is legal tender, but simply used for barter purposes on account of being the handiest. When governments were more fully organized it naturally came to pass that money—fiat—was imprinted on the metals, or articles then most commonly used for carrying on trade. The U. S. Attorney General in arguing the legal tender cases said: "We repeat, money is not a substance, but an impression of legal authority, a printed legal decree," and the Supreme Court made its decision on this same basis, and said: "It cannot therefore be maintained that the legal tender acts impair the obligation of contracts" (Wallace's Reports, vol. 12. page 548).

The only values money has is its purchasing power and its debt paying power. The first mentioned is solely regulated by "law of supply and demand" same as any other commodity, except when monopalized, and the latters value is given by Congress and generally printed on the money.

Why, then, do the big financiers put out so much propaganda to make people believe money should be redeemable in metal, or any other valuable commodities? It is plain enough that by getting the people to believe thus they, the financial interests usurp one of the principal sovereign powers of government, and can thus control the economic conditions in such a way as to legally steal wealth. How do you like their rule? Why should Socialist leaders allow themselves to peddle the usurers propaganda against inflation? Well, you you can guess the reason as well as I can, but keep your eyes on Congress.

Again Mr. Kaplan says, "Marxists and adherents of so-called "sound-money," although bitter foes as to ownership of industries are, nevertheless, a unit in the recognition of of the soundness of what money fundamentally represents. Captilists may term that commodity gold or silver. Socialists term it "Labor Power." Wonderfully progressive idea for Socialism to think and talk in terms discarded by all worthwhile economists hundreds of years ago! Just think, a Socialist sticking up for a monotary system based on superstition, ignorance, mistrust, greed and rapacity! Socialists, watch your leaders watch to see who they serve!

Finally Mr. Kaplan says no Socialist can be an inflationist, because all inflation means credit.

Now, which is better for the government to print greenbacks to meet the running expenses than to print bonds drawing interest? And which is better for the creditor class to get 100% payment with dollars of half the present average purchasing power, than to have 100% repudiation and get nothing? Also what better is it for labor to be out of income half the time, than to get work all the time at double pay and shorter day?

It is disgusting to see how many supposedly "big men" will fall for this usurers' propaganda against the only scientific money, and still more disgusting to notice the bulk of our dailies and many weeklies peddle this nefarious hypocritical stuff for the big financial interests.

I believe papers should let both sides of public questions get enough space to argue each their side, in order that the public may be able to judge fairly as to the merits of either side of the question.

Even just the enactment of the Frazier Bill and the Patman Bonus Bill only would put the county back on a fairly prosperous basis, on account of the inflation without cost to the government and the low interest rate and immediate and direct circulation of the money involved in these measures. Then if Labor would keep up their demands for more pay and shorter days, they would have a good chance to win, but now, with 10,000,000 jobless, they have no chance.

CONGRESS MOVEMENT GATHERS STRENGTH

Secretary Dan Doven of the Continental Congress of Workers and Farmers reported a growing symaphy with the Continental Congress idea. Speaking engagements and direct contact with the trade union movement, particularly in Cleveland Buffalo and Syracuse, declared Donovan, showed a rise in interest in the possibilities of the producing class unity which the Congress offers.

Workers and Farmers Call a Second Convention Dec. 5

The Wyoming Congrese of Workers and Farmers called its second convention for December 5-7 simultaneously with the Special Session of the State Legislature, in an effort to checkmate a well organized plan of the state's industrial interests to put over a series of sales and other obnoxious taxes and in an effort to lighten their privileged class burden. Each organization sent five regular delegates and addition fraternal delegates to help in the mass lobbying which may be necessary in farmer and labor interest.

Interest in Continental Congress is increaseing

Successful regional Congresses of Workers and Farmers has been held under the direction of the State Executive of the California Congress. The results in terms of increased morale and strength thru unity to the farm and labor movements have been so marked that the Pomona Valley called a second conference to consider further steps. This second Ponmona Valley Congress met December 9th. Seattle Congress

Nearly 300 delegates attended the Puget Sound Convention of the continentle Congress at Seattle, Wash. Oganizations ranged from the Building Trades Council, Newsboys, Cooperative and unemployed to the Seattle Council of Churches. The Farmer section was but weakly represented due to the fact that the strong supporters of the Congrese such as the Farmers' Union, Holiday Association, and Coops are not represented among the farmers of that section. A. Fenner Brockway of the British Independent Labor Party, George Kirkpatrick of California and A. Sumner Thompson of Seattle Labor College were the featured speakers.

Seattle Congress

Nearly 300 delegates attended the Puget Sound Convention of the continentle Congress at Seattle, Wash. Organizations ranged from the Building Trades Council, Newsboys, Cooperative and unemployed to the Seattle Council of Churches. The Farmer section was but weakly represented due to the fact that the strong supporters of the Congress such as the Farmers' Union, Holiday Association, and Coops are not represented among the farmers of that section. A. Fenner Brockway of the British Independent Labor Party, George Kirkpatrick of California and A. Sumner Thompson of Seattle Labor College were the featured speakers.

TRUCK LENGTH LIMIT ON HIGHWAYS IS FORTY FEET

Orders have gone out to State Highway department patrolmen to limit lengths of all truck, or truck combinations of trucks and trailers, to 40 feet. John P. Arnoldy, chief of the Highway patrol, said trucks and trailers are classed as one vehicle under the law and that Chapter 225, Section 35, Hgihway laws of 1933, sets the maximum length. This section supersedes all other legislation and settles disputes on the subject in various parts of the state, Chief Arnaldy said. Lengths of trucks or truck combinations, vary in adjoining states. In Iowa the maximum length is 45 feet, in Wisconsin 60 feet until 1935 when it will become 40 feet; North Dakota, 50 feet, and South Dakcta, 38 feet.

THE INEVITABLE HAS HAPPENED

And steel and iron, no matter how tough and wel constructed could not stand up under the continual hammering to which it is subjected without some time out for adjustments, cleaning and repair. Consequently some of our merchants were forced to revert to the primitive Tuesday evening and do business by candle light in true Yuletide spirit, when the McIntosh-Seymour diesel at the light plant "busted a lung" and had to be shut down. Fortunately the breaks could be repaired and no new parts were needed, and thanks to a hardworking crew of mechanics, who put in a twenty hour shift without rest, the engine was funtioning again Wednesday afternoon.

If the city council could have had its way last summer there would have been another unit which could have taken up the load so that there would have been no cessation of service when this break occured. Now we have no such other unit, nor is there any prospect of there being one in the very near future to guarantee against a recurrence of the shut down. Next time the break may be worse.

We suggest that the city provide itself with a few servicable cranks so that next time the diesel breaks down the twelve hundred and eighty voters who voted for this sort of thing could step manfully into the breach and keep the generators turning until the engine is repaired.

IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE

Last week we spoke of the fact that the government is about to invest $22,900,000 in preferred stock of the Northwest Bancorporation. The present market value of the corporation's stock; from $4.00 to $6.00 per share for a total of 1,600,000 shares, figures the total value of the whole outfit at $6,400,000 to $7,000,000 Yet the government would invest in it almost four times its value. One would assume that in the face of such generosity that the Banco and all its affiliates would show some consideration of the government and those whom it is trying so hard to relieve of distress. But they evidently feel that it is more blessed to give than receive and are willing for others to have all the blessing, for Saturday when we entered the local affiliate of the Northwest Bankcorporation we witnesses them charging ten cents exchange on the checks of the Treasurer of the United States issued to laborers on the CWA projects here.

We have heard it said that private bankers are opposed to the government going into banking business thru its post offices, but we are sure that we must be misinformed on that matter for they are certainly doing all in their power to bring about such an arrangement

WE MUST LEARN TO HANDLE THE MACHINE

During a discussion of economic conditions and the depression, now entering its fifth winter, a friend said the other day, "It seems strange to me. that the American people who have shown such aptitude in the handling of all other machines, should fall down so lamentably when it comes to mastering the intricacies of the machine of self government."

There is much food for thought in that statement. Altho the machine is a century and a half old, it leaves very little to be desired as an instrument of self government. In setting up a democracy the founding fathers did their work well; and yet, when one considers the want in the midst of plenty that we are experiencing at the present time, have experienced for several years, and at varying intervals in the past, one must inevitably come to the conclusion that there is something wrong. We know of course that there are a great many who maintain that the machine is outmoded, yes there are some who even maintain that it never was any good. But we differ with them on those points. We believe that the machine is absolutely A-1, we will admit that perhaps there are appendages of various kinds that have been stuck on by "Tommy Tinker" politicians which if removed would make the machine function smoother, but we believe that the whole, it's a "pretty good old wagon" if we only learn how to use it.

When one considers how little thought and study the average citizen gives to government, it is a wonder that it functions at all. Certain it is that if we gave no more thought to our machines of production and transportation we would all have starved to death long ago. Enter a streetcar and observe the passengers reading the newspapers and you will find them reading the latest abduction, the stock market, the sports page and the comics. But one in a hundred reads the editorials and news of the legislature, congress and administration. Attend a social function and listen to the conversation; it pertains to kidnapping, baseball, golf, bridge, stock markets and everything else trivial and inconsequential. Seldom that which is a life and death matter to every citizen, the affairs of government.

Very few citizens cast an intelligent vote before they reach the age of forty. Hundreds of thousands never vote intelligently as anyone who has watched the ballots being tabulated after an election can testify. Almost every boy, or girl of twelve can drive a car and knows something of its inner workings. Every farmer's boy of thirteen of fourteen can run a tractor, the reaper, yes, most of them could run the grain separator and do a creditable job of it. And these same people will grow up and vote; for Hoover for President, for Shoemaker for Congress. The vast majority of our young people, go to the polls and vote according to the reactions of the last political speech that they heard, knowing nothing of neither facts, figures nor political and economic philosophy. They go through life; get married; raise a family; meet adversity and misfortune and develop a complex against the ins and for the outs keeping the machinery of government continually out of adjustment, keeping the whole economic structure out of balance through lack of knowledge of that which affects them most vitally; the instrument of self government.

If the depression teaches our people how to think and study economics and political philosophy the privation and suffering it entailed will not have been in vain.

The Week In The LEGISLATURE

By Hon. Hjalmer Petersen
Member Legislature, Pine Co.

Governor Olson appeared before the Relief committee of the House on Thursday afternoon, and outlined the direct and public works relief needs of the satte of Minnesota.

The Governor stated that there is at present 44,000 families in the state receiving direct relief of which 1,000 families are given relief, wholly or in part, by the federal government through the Federal Emergency Relief. Multiplied by 4½ it means 08,000 individuals—adults and children—in the state who are receiving direct relief. He stated there are no exact figures on unemployment but that 150,000 individuals have registered with public employment agencies this year. Public relief was at the peak last March, declined during the summer, but increased again last fall.

Thus far the state of Minnesota has not contributed much direct relief, said the governor. Formerly the Executive Council which comprises all the state elective officers but Railroad and Warehouse commissioners could expend $500,000 annually if a calamity arose, such as flood or drought.

The governor anticipates that the federal government may spend $7,-00,000 in Minnesota during 1934 but the state must show its willingness and also give a helping hand. So far the federal government has contributed over $4,000,000 for direct relief in Minnesota—far more than spent by the state, counties, cities and smaller sub-divisions. The chief executive estimated that the state would have to spend about $450,000 in buying sites for lake and river diversions, flood control and the like.

The state can do as the federal government—delegate power to the governor as was delegated to the president—power to act between sessions of the Legislature—but this plan was not advocated by the chief executive. He asked that the power remain in the hands of state treasurer, state auditor and attorney general.

A resolution ratifying the proposed child labor amendment to the U. S. constitution has passed both houses. In the regular 1933 session it passed the House but was held up in the more conservative Senate. Sponsored by Rep. Bennett of Minneapolis, it was the first bill to pass the House in this special session.

Bills aimed to stop tax strikes of mining companies on the Iron Range have been introduced by Representatives Wangensteen, Nolan, Anderson and Hitchcock. They would prevent the removal of minerals until taxes have been paid. Another bill eminating from the Iron Range, in which also Senators Lommen and Farnand are active, would give any municipality the right to intervene to compel payment of taxes where the valuation is $500,000 or more and where more than 10% of the tax is unpaid. The law now reads that the county only can intervene. The bill originally called for valuations of $1,500,000, but was amended in the committe of taxes and tax laws to be $500,000.

Various tax bills would give discounts on current taxes. For instance, if the 1933 tax which is due January 1, 1934, was paid at that time, there would be a discount of from 3¾% to 5%. In February the discount would be less. Likewise graduated down in March, April and May. The law now reads that the first half of real estate taxes must be paid before June 1st and the last half before November 1st; otherwise a penalty attaches. The new bills also provide for penalities after June 1st and November 1st, but discounts if paid earlier.

Bills providing for increase in inheritance taxes will also have been introduced when this letter is read. Other states are collecting more inheritance than is Minnesota, and it is a tax that will hamper no one but will help to provide relief at a time when it is difficult for many to pay real estate and personal property taxes. The inheritance tax is sometimes referred to as a belated income tax and is money that should have been paid to the government for the public welfare sooner. More will likely be written on this subject in the next letter.

Senator Rockne of Goodhue county, one of the veteran conservative and reactionary leaders of the Legislature attempted another tilt with Governor Olson Friday. It occurred in the Senate Finance committee of which Rockne is chairman. The senator opposes the governor's $5,000,000 public relief and public works program, maintaining it is unconstitutional.

During the course of the dispute the governor said: "I am so certain that the Supreme Court will uphold the legality of the bill for the reasons of public health, safety or other reasons, that, in all facetiousness, I wish to state that I would be willing to resign from office if it is not upheld by the Supreme Court, if the people do not retire me from office before then."

"I wish I could make a similar offer, but it seems as though I am through," Senator Rockne rejoined, smiling.

Game laws could be ignored by farmers in Minnesota and they would be permitted to kill game destroying their crops under a proposal in the House by the militant Iron Range representative, Charles Wangensteen of Chisholm. Killing of game in or out of season would be confined to farmers and condoned only when their crops were threatened or being destroyed.

MEN, MONEY, AND MONKEYS

Oscar Ameringer in the American Guardian

You can fool all people some of the time and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time—unless you change the gag.

The latest gag is the ballyhoo about the sound dollar. It isn't such a heluva new gag at that. Back in the nineties we heard very much the same voice. Folks without a copper on their patched jeans would get het up about the relative value of silver and gold. Fellows who impaired their eyesight for snipes in the gutter got into fist fights over fiat money with fellows who had lost their eyesight looking for jobs. Then as now, times were hard. Then as now, there was more than enough to drink, eat and wear, but no money in pockets. But instead of trying to find out why empty bellies and full cupboards do not meet, the blame was laid on the kind of money some folks had and most folks didn't have. Sure, our monetary system is crazy and always was. There is no question that it can be manipulated to the profit of the few and the discomfort of the many. Credit expands when credit is needed the least and contracts when needed the most. True also that the same amount of gold buys one bushel of wheat one year and four bushels another, while the food value of a bushel of wheat is the same today as it was when Joseph filled the granaries of Pharaoh. Finally, how silly, unspeakable, that money the yardstick of value, measures three feet in gold, six feet in silver, ten feet in nickel, a rod in copper, and all of them with the fixity of rubber bands.

But men do not eat money, wear money, sleep between money, or toast their shins with money. They lived, loved and begot millions of years before money was dreamed of. Nor is any other living thing ever prevented from pursuing the even tenor of its life by lack of money or the kind of money in circulation.

Surely, surely, there must be other reasons for the miseries of our age than the want of money or the substance from which it is made, and foremost among them is the private ownership of the means by which men live on this earth, permitting an ever-decreasing few to deny access to its wherewiths of subsistence to the ever-increasing many.

Turn a muzzled mule out in a 1,000 acre pasture of knee high clover and he will starve to death. Stake a cow on a 10-foot rope in the same pasture and it will starve to death. Place men on the richest soil on earth, surround them with every conceivable tool for tillage, yet deny them the use of the soil and tools and they will starve as millions are starving now, in this, the richest country on earth.

On the seventh day the Lord rested, beheld His work and called it good. There is room for all, food for all, clothes for all, shelter for all. There is life, love, laughter, peace and beauty for all. The morning sun smiles in the eastern sky. The rains of heaven descend upon the thirsty soil. The seed the sowers buried in the holy womb of Mother Earth is reborn a thousand fold and every day is resurrection day.

Buried in the depths of the same womb is the frozen sunshine of the eons—coal. Down there are the lakes of power, heat and light, called oil. Beneath the austere face of barren mountains lies the wealth of metals from which the tools that make puny man more powerful than mastodon and dinosaur, swifter than the swiftest bird, permits him to see with the eyes of crystal into the farthest recesses of the constellations, yea, see the unseen, hear the voiceless, speak around the earth; mine the silent air of precious sounds, fathom the hidden sources of life and death.

What a wondrous earth! What a wondrous thing this man! Son of God. Crown of creation. Creator himself, carrying on, refining and ennobling the work of Him who saw His work and called it good.

And yet—and yet, by some strange perversion, this heir and helpmate of the All-Father allows some of his own kind to hog heaven and earth, joy and beauty, and all the acquisitions of creative man from cartwheel to airplane, from dugout to floating palace, from burdened ass to churning turbine— hog it with instruments written on rags, sanctioned by club, spear, dungeon, faggot, gallows, blunderbuss and lead-spitting machine gun in water jacket.

What else is your history, oh man, but the struggle between robber and robbed, tiller and thief, maker and taker? What else but the endless refrain, "You work; I eat. You delve; I enjoy. You create; I appropriate," and beneath it all, always and everywhere, "I own."

I own this man; therefore the fruit of his labor is mine. Slavery.

I own this soil; therefore the bread and meat wrested from its depths by this husbandman are mine. Feudalism.

I own this mine, this factory, shop, steel rod, or mechine; therefore the golden harvest gathered by their creators and tenders are mine. Capitalism.

The root of your evils, oh man, is not money, be it made of gold or tin, silver or rag, plentiful or scarse. It is—

THE PRIVATE OWNERSHIP BY THE FEW OF THE MEANS AND SUBSTANCES UPON WHICH LIFE ON EARTH DEPENDS.

The shabby furtive mortals that haunt the city streets for work are the fruit of private ownership.

The babies whimpering on withered breasts are the fruit of private ownership.

The gnawing pain in childrens' tummies is the fruit of private ownership.

The pallid gray on the cheek of youth is the fruit of private ownership.

The dispair in the heart of workless millions is the fruit of private ownership.

The fear of almshouse and paupers field that haunts the graying head is the fruit of private ownership.

Abolish the private ownership in the means of life! Make the earth and its riches and the achievements of science and invention the common property of mankind and you will abolish nine-tenths of the spectres that are troubling man! Do that and you will not abolish all the wrongs, woes and pains of mankind, but you will establish peace and security the rock foundation of Life, Liberty and Happiness.

Monkey with money and money will make monkeys of thee.

Imitation Eyes

A British naturalist has studied the ringed circles resembling eyes that are found in some moths, on beetle wings and notably on the peacock's tail, and he concludes that they are imitation eyes to frighten enemies.

Lily in New Environment

A rare species of Amazon river water lily, the Victoria Regia, has been made to thrive under a 300-watt electric light in a nursery in Ohio.

IRON PROTESTS

Said the great machine of iron and wood;
'Lo, I'm a creature meant for good,
But the criminal clutch of stupid greed
Has made me a monster that scatters need
And want and hunger wherever I go.
I could lift men's burdens and lighten their woe
I could give them leisure to laugh in the sun,
If owned by the many instead of the one.
If owned by the people, the whole wide earth
Should learn my purpose and know my worth.
I would close the chasm that yawns in our soil
Twixt unearned riches and ill-paid toil.
No man should hunger, and no man labor
To fill the purse of an idle neighbor;
And each man would know when his work was done,
Were I shared by the many, not owned by one.
I am forced by the few with their greed for gain,
To forge for the many new fetters of pain.
Yet this is my purpose, and ever will be
To set slaves of the workshops really free.
And brave men hasten that day, when overjoyed
The desperate host of the unemployed
Shall learn my purpose and understand
And hail me friend in a gracious land.

—Claire.

WHO REALLY WANTS TEMPERANCE?

Farmer-Labor Leader

As the Legislature considers liquor control one fact is blazingly clear—opponents and advocates of a state-owned, state-operated dispensary system agree that under it there would be less drinking and more temperance than under private sale.

The two widely-seperated camps, taking the same facts, arrive at the same conclusion. But because of the private profit involved whiskey interests and certain newspapers lead the attack on dispensaries.

Distillers and wholesalers KNOW there will be less drinking, if sale is through dispensaries only. Newspapers KNOW they will lose tremendous advertising revenue if dispensaries are adopted. And so the forces of greed and corruption prate in the public press of legislators that "graft" will flourish if their shameful profits are diminished.

The fact that whiskey interests oppose dispensaries should be enough to clarify the issue in anybody's mind. The duty of the Legislature is clear.

THE POWER TRUST AND POLITICS

The Union Advocate

Less than a year ago, following the election of President Roosevelt, the National Electric Light Association announced to the world that it was somewhat ashamed of its past. This was about the time of the Insull crash, when Sam Insull fled to Europe a few jumps ahead of a United States marshal. The National Electric Light Association had been organized by the Insulls as a propaganda machine as well as a lobby to bribe, intimidate, corrupt and debauch city councils, state legislatures and the national Congress.

The National Electric Light Association spent millions to influence courts, utility commissions and politicians in places of high authority. It rewrote text books on economics. It subsidized newspapers, chautauqua lecturers, college professors and civic bodies. It spent with lavish hand and charged it all up to management costs and overhead.

The election of Roosevelt sent a chill through the marrow bones of the utility magnetes. They resolved to clean house by renaming their association. As a result the Edison Electric Institute came into being.

But the only housecleaning noticeable was the ousting of the Insulls, both of whom were then—as now—fugitives from justice. The same old officers (minus the Insulls) are in charge of the Edison Electric Institute; the same highly-paid counsel acts for the group; the same propagandists who used to poison the press and the pulpit with prepared editorials and sermons are still on the job. And now the power trust is ready to take up the old cudgels to oppose the spread of municipal ownership and governmental control of all public utilities.

The leading editorial in the current issue of the Electrical World, official organ of the Edison Electric Institute, comes out openly to urge the utility magnates to take political action and to make politics their major concern.

"This does not mean," declares the power-industry organ, "Potshotting at agitators, at radical politicians, placing definite facts in pamphlets for public distribution, an advertising campaign, or a lobbying contact with legislative bodies these are incomplete, incorrect and amateurish. It means a complete and thoughtfully prepared political program in each community served. as well as in the state and national political forums. It means a strong organization based upon political action in the political arena."

In other words, the old methods were a trifle crude. Bribing politicians, buying editors and subsidizing college professors smacked too much of the methods of gangsters and other low characters. The proper thing to do is to use the politicians who have personality, glib tongues and itching palms. And then, if these men go wrong the Edison Electric Institute can seek refuge in the fact that the dear people elected the politicians and can blame themselves.

LIQUOR PRICES

St. Paul Daily News.

There is a general sentiment in the country in favor of outlawing illicit liquor now that the legal beverage is obtainable.

But this sentiment is not apt to translate itself into action unless legal liquor can be obtained at fair prices. The day of high-priced boot-leg liquor is gone. During the months immediately preceding repeal it became not only plentiful but very cheap. It is against this cheap liquor that the legal product must compete.

Obviously effective competition would be impossible if the government were unwise enough to lay down a prohibitive tax. Some months ago there was danger of this. Lately, however, officials in Washington seem fairly well agreed that a high tax would be a mistake. The president speaks of a "reasonable" tax.

But even a reasonable tax can not keep legal liquor down to a reasonable price for the consumer if there is profiteering either by the producer or the middleman. If they are so foolish as to try to gouge the public, much of the business will turn back to the bootlegger and the cheaper product.

Therefore the initial prices charged for repeal liquor are very disquieting. For instance, posted prices for whisky range from $2.75 to $7.50 a quart.

This has brought a threat from the federal alcohol control administration to act under the NRA codes to force down prices unless there is a speedy change in the situation. Already members of the congress are talking of an official investigation of liquor profiteering.

The liquor industry by its abuses brought prohibition upon this country. Hasn't it learned its lesson yet?

Let the liquor not make the mistake of supposing that it is the only alternative to prohibition, and that since the voters are through with national prohibition the liquor industry is therefore free to do as it pleases. There is another alternative. That is abolition of the private liquor industry and creation of an absolute federal-state monoply.

The tremendous vote for repeal was a vote to get rid of the illegal liquor racket and crime. If the legal industry, with which the voters have now replaced bootlegging, foolishly profiteers to the point of reviving bootlegging, the public soon will demand that government take over the industry.

They're telling of a U. S. appraiser who had never seen a goat, and who after visiting a farm reported to the head office that he didn't know how to appraise an animal with a bear rump and a beard he had seen there. In due time the answer came back: "No need to appraise, that's the farmer."

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME TWO THIEF RIVER FALLS, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1933. NUMBER 39

Farmer-Labor Press Service

(By H. G. Teigan)

This week will probably tell the story as to relief and liquor control legislation.

The outlook on the public relief bills is quite favorable. The house by an overwhelming vote last Thursday, voted approval of Governor Olson's $5,000,000 relief appropriation to be used by the state Executive Council during the year 1934. That the measure will run into trouble in the senate is obvious. Relief legislation has not been popular there. That was true a year ago, and it is true now.

Even so it is more than likely that a fairly large appropriation will be voted. Even the most dyed-in-the-wool reactionaries will find themselves compelled to suppot legislation to take care of the tens of thousands of needy in Minnesota during the next year. Moreover, as the Governor stated in his message to the legislature on December 6, it is unreasonable to expect the federal government to continue to finance all relief work undertaken in our state. The legislature should at least be willing to show a semblance of appreciation of the efforts of Mr. Roosevelt and other federal officials in attempting to alleviate conditions here and elsewhere.

Liquor Bill "N. G."

As for liquor control legislation the prospects are not so good. The extreme wets backed by distilleries and prospective whiskey vendors, are planning to set up a system for coining millions out of the hard liquor consumers of this state. Their plan in brief is as follows:

Permit wholesale of hard liquors by private concerns upon orders through the state liquor commissioner; dispense liquors to the consumer through drug stores, hotels and restaurants.

To be sure it will be contended that the above is not a correct statement of the facts. It will be argued that the plan provides for municipal dispensaries for off-sale liquors through municipally owned and operated stores. But before these stores can be established a vote of the people in each municipality will be required.

Such a plan is unworkable. This is especially true in the larger cities. Where municipal stores are to be established no private sale, either by the bottle (off-sale) or by the drink (on-sale) will be permitted under the bill. Any man possessing intelligence and honesty will admit that no municipal stores can be established in the larger cities under the plan.

If the whiskey men prove to possess a majority in each of the two houses of the legislature and foist their scheme upon the people of the state, a return to prohibition in Minnesota seems quite likely within the next three of four years.

N. D. Wants State Industries

A thing of more than passing interest to progressives of Minnesota is the North Dakota scheme for setting up state owned industies in that state. Headed by A. C. Townley, president of the National Non-partisan League, Governor Wm. Langer, and entire state congressional delagation the North Dakota state government has appealed to the Federal Public Works Administration for a loan of five million dollars for the immediate establishment of such a state owned industies in that state.

Mr. Townley is author of the plan. His contention is that the people of that state should be able through state-owned factories to resolve their raw products into finished form. "why should we ship our hides to Massachusetts to be made into shoes and other leather goods when they might as well be made into such things right in North Dakota?" asks Mr. Townley.

The outlook for securing the loan is most promising according to newspaper reports and also from statements made by members of the delegation upon their return from Washington.

The following news item published in last Sunday's Minneapolis Journal should prove of interest to light and power users now being supplied with current by pivately owned public utility companies in the state:

"Owatonna:— The municipal plant of Owatonna, through the public utilities commission, helped make Christmas a merry one this year. Statements totaling more than $12,000 were farwarded to electrical energy users of Owatonna by the commission, with each statement cancelled as paid, a gift believed the first of its kind ever issued by a power plant in Minnesota to its consumers."

"Reports covered topics ranging from demonstrations on how to make breakfast food to demonstrations on soap making, from making clothes to planting gardens, from raising children to raising chicks." says Mr. Anderson. DISPENSARY PLAN GAINS STRENGTH IN LEGISLATURE

Drug Store Sale Plan Is Killed. To Revamp Dispensary Plan

Advocates of the state dispensaries at the state legislature Wednesday moved forward toward control of the lawmaking body in a series of sweeping moves that indicated an issue once regarded lost had recovered amazing strength during the three-day shut-down of the law mill.

Early in the day both houses took up the vexing problem of turning out a liquor control law. The dispensary leaders made one gain after another finally routing the faction seeking sale of liquor by the bottle in drug stores, one of the principal points of the group demanding private handling.

The drug-store-sale group led by Senator Marshall of Minneapolis proposed an amendment to the measure under consideration to include the pharmacists in a sales system that would meet public demand for bottle purchases. Following the arguments this plan enticed only 20 votes, 4 members casting ballots against it Later in the afternoon dispensary advocates collected 45 votes to kill the drug store sales proposal.

The senate voted to license restaurants in the smaller cities to sell liquor by the glass; to provide the proposed state liquor warehouse with $300,000 for equipment and stock giving the state liquor commissioner authority to pass on the purity of beverages sold the state, and a $2 annual license fee for railroads to sell liquor aboard trains.

While dispensary advocates felt that the holidays had changed the minds of enough senators to bring them over to the plan already rejected, advocates of the private sale and distribution declared that not until a conference of both houses has revamped the two measures now under way will it be possible to determine which system is to be adopted.

$15,000,000 in Corn Loans to Minnesota Farmers by the Federal Government, Soon

Approximately $15,000,000 in corn loans will be disbursed among farmers of Minnesota by the Federal government within a few months, it was announced last week by Frank W. Matson, C. J. Laurisch and Knud Wefal, members of the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission, who will approve the appointment of the sealers that are to grade and seal the corn on which loans are to be made, and will act as an appeal board to which all complaints as to grades on the part of the farmers, will be referred.

The Fedeal government will loan 45 cents per bushel on all corn that grades number 4 or higher. The grading will be done by sealers selected from among local farmers and grain men, who will be chosen by a committee of seven in each county, composed of one member of the county board, one representative business man, one member of some farm organization and four representative farmers. The Railroad and Warehouse Commission will confirm appointments of all sealers.

A state committee of all three, made up of Professor Andrew Boss of the University Farm School, chairman, and Harry S. Muir, a farmer of Winnebago and Henry C. Bolstad, a farmer of Dawson, will select the different caunty committees and serve as direct representatives of the Federal government.

It is expected that all county committees will have been chosen within a week, but they will serve only temporarily and will be succeeded by committees chosen by the farmers in each county to whom loans are granted.

The sealers will grade the farmers' corn; will seal the cribs, and will issue certificates giving the grade and the number of bushels in each crib. On the basis of these certificates, the farmers will receive loans from the government to the amount of 45 cents per bushel. The corn will remain in the farmers' cribs till ordered sold by the government. Copies of all certificates issued will be filed with the Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

Professor Boss estimates the corn in the state at 150,000,000 bushels and is of the opinion that from twenty to thirty per cent of the corn producers will apply for loans. In Iowa, $10,000,000 in loans have already been granted.

Judge Olson Issues Permanent Order Restraining City From Entering Into Diesel Contract

Decision Will Automatically Revoke $15,000 Federal PWA Grant

NEW COUNCIL PLANS NEW APPLICATION

Request Will Specify Improvments in Present Equipment And Transmission Lines

Judge Julius J. Olson of the District Court handed down his decision in the injunction suit brought to restrain the city officials from entering into contract with Fairbanks-Morse and company for 1050 H. P. diesel, on Saturday, Dec. 23. In finding for the plaintiffs, Judge Olson holds that while it not beyond the powers of the city to enter into a conditional sales contract as such, it can not be done without the approval of the voters. It has been generally believed that the question of such a contract could not be legally submitted to the voters, that under the charter only the question of a bond issue could be so submitted. In summing up his opinion Judge Olson finds that any obligation which would draw from a fund that would ordinarily go into the general expense fund of the city and thus tend to reduce taxes, the obligation would be similar in fact to an obligation payable with funds raised by taxation. Judge Olson says in summing up the case:

"Since our Supreme Court has so strongly indicated its intention to hold obligations to be debts, where the fund on which they are drawn is fed by revenue which would otherwise reduce taxes, and since such rule appears economically sound, I think the conditional sales contract involved in this case is a debt of the city of Thief River Falls. Having cancluded that it is a debt of the city secured by the pledge of income which would otherwise reduce taxes, it is equivalent to a debt payable out of moneys raised or to be raised by taxation. The conclusion appears to follow that it is within the term "obligation" as used in section 4 of Chapter 131, Laws of 1927, and cannot be validly incurred without the approval of the electors."

The need for the additional unit is admitted, the court says, and the council was clearly within its power in so declaring and in taking steps to supply that need.

The defendant council's terms expires on January 2, and the new council, some of the members of which brought the restraining order involved take office. It is therefore not likely that the case will be appealed to a higher court. Questioned on the matter of the federal grant of $15,000 which has been allotted for tha purpose of defraying a part of the purchase of the additional diesel unit, City Attorney H. O. Berve stated it as his opinion that with the killing of the contract with the Fairbanks-Morse and Company the city will forfeit the federal grant because the specifications and the contract were a part of the application for the grant, and was in fact a basis upon which the grant was allocated. He stated that he thought it would be necessary for tha city to make a new application for a grant, if one is desired for other purposes, such as making change over in the transmission lines or adding miscellaneous equipment to the light plant, in line with this, Mr. Peter Myhrom a member of the incoming council states that they are preparing a new application which will be submitted to the Federal Public Works Committee immediately after the first of the year. This new application will be for a grant to be used for the purpose of making changes in transmission lines and improvements in the present epuipment, he said. He stated that they have had assurance from the authorities at St. Paul that an application will be considered regardless of the reports printed in the daily press some time ago that no futher applications for grants will be considered after January first.

No definite plans have been announced as to how the new administration will meet the federal grant with city funds, the prevalent opinion seems to be that it will have to be done with a bond issue.

Present Council Holds Last Regular Meeting

Holding their last regular official meeting the present council met Tuesday and went through routine business.

Milk permits were granted to Arthur Bartelson, C. F. Thompson and Waldie Christenson.

Mrs. Anna Olson's application for the abatement of the accumulated taxes on Lot 22, block 9, Porter's addition, from $114.70 to $25 was cut to $75.00 and approved.

The finish to be used on the new auditorium floor was changed from "Permatect" to "Seal-O-San." Specifications called for a maple floor with a permatect finish but this was changed because of the stain resisting ability of seal-o-san that was absent in the permatect finish. The new finish also has better weaing qualities it is said.

CONGRESS WILL CONVENE JAN. 3

Speaker of House Says President's Annual Message Will Be Read by Clerk.

Washington—President Roosevelt's first annual message to congress will be delivered on January 3—the first day of the session—for reading by a house clerk. Speaker Rainey said that contrary to reports, the President did not plan to deliver the message in person but some of Mr. Roosevelt's advisors are still urging him to appear in person to deliver the message to a joint session of the senate and house. Democrats are contending that the country is more solidly back of the President than a few months ago and that all are prepared to follow him in his recommendations. Republicans generally are saying little and awaiting developments. Speaker Rainey said he expected the ordinary and extraordinary budgets to call for appropriations in excess of $6,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1934. This includes the budget estimates of $2,500,000,000 for ordinary expenses of the government. Of the balance, about $1,700,000,000 is to be asked for continuation of the public works employment program; about $500,000,000 for federal relief ;additional capital for the Reconstruction corporation for business stimulation, and varying sums for other government enterprises. First on the legislative calendar, Rainey said would be a bill for the repeal of the Volstead act as it applies to the District of Columbia, territories and possessions. This is to be followed by the liquor revenue act to be introduced by Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee on the first day. It will call for a $2 a gallon levy on spirits, $5 a barrel on beer, retain present import duties on wines, spirits and brew, all the revenue from these sources, estimated at more than $500,000,000, to go into the federal treasury.

RAILROADS OFFER FURTHER INDUCEMENTS FOR PEOPLE TO TRAVEL VIA THE RAILS

The western railways are out with another inducement to lure some of their strayed passengers back to the Iron Horse. The third cut in railway fares west of Chicago in less than a half year will go into effect January 2. Round-trip coach fares are to be cut ten per cent, which drops the rate per mile to one and eight-tenths of a cent. The present 2-cent-a-mile rate which was adopted August 1 for both one-way and round-trip coach travel was said to be the lowest standard rate ever offered by American railways.

On December 1 the western lines discarded their basic rate of three and six-tenths cent a mile, which has been in effect since the war, and adopted a 3 cent fare on one-way travel in Pullman and parlor cars and 2 cents on round-trips with a 10-day return limit. A longer return limit was provided for at a fare of 2½ cents a mile.

The new round-trip coach fares will be limited to 10 days and include stopover privileges.

CONGRESS WILL CONVENE JAN. 3

Speaker of House Says President's Annual Message Will Be Read by Clerk.

Washington—President Roosevelt's first annual message to congress will be delivered on January 3—the first day of the session—for reading by a house clerk. Speaker Rainey said that contrary to reports, the President did not plan to deliver the message in person but some of Mr. Roosevelt's advisors are still urging him to appear in person to deliver the message to a joint session of the senate and house. Democrats are contending that the country is more solidly back of the President than a few months ago and that all are prepared to follow him in his recommendations. Republicans generally are saying little and awaiting developments. Speaker Rainey said he expected the ordinary and extraordinary budgets to call for appropriations in excess of $6,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1934. This includes the budget estimates of $2,600,000,000 for ordinary expenses of the government. Of the balance, about $1,700,000,000 is to be asked for continuation of the public works employment program; about $500,000,000 for federal relief; additional capital for the Reconstruction corporation for business stimulation, and varying sums for other government enterprises. First on the legislative calendor, Rainey said would be a bill for the repeal of the Volstead act as it applies to the District of Columbia, territories and possessions. This is to be followed by the liquor revenue act to be introduced by Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee on the first day. It will call for a $2 a gallon levy on spirits, $5 a barrel on beer, retain present import duties on wines, spirits and brew, all the revenue from these sources, estimated at more than $500,000,000, to go into the federal treasury.

RAILROADS OFFER FURTHER INDUCEMENTS FOR PEOPLE TO TRAVEL VIA THE RAILS

The western railways are out with another inducement to lure some of their strayed passengers back to the Iron Horse. The third cut in railway fares west of Chicago in less than a half year will go into effect January 2. Round-trip coach fares are to be cut ten per cent, which drops the rate per mile to one and eight-tenths of a cent. The present 2-cent-a-mile rate which was adopted August 1 for both one-way and round-trip coach travel was said to be the lowest standard rate ever offered by American railways.

On December 1 the western lines discarded their basic rate of three and six-tenths cent a mile, which has been in effect since the war, and adopted a 3 cent fare on one-way travel in Pullman and parlor cars and 2 cents on round-trips with a 10-day return limit. A longer return limit was provided for at a fare of 2½ cents a mile.

The new round-trip coach fares will be limited to 10 days and include stopover privileges.

AN ACE IN THE HOLE

What a whale of a difference one short year makes—and yet how little, in spite of Herculean efforts, do we progress in that period. 1933—born in the deepest misery that the American nation has yet found itself, and culminating in those dark days of the bank holiday.— Dark? did we say dark? In those first two days of the bank holiday the American people had a glimpse of the Promised Land. The whole system of usury, interest, graft, greed and corruption had crumbled beneath the weight of its own infamy. Would to God it had been left there rather than to be bolstered up again with government bonds, certificates of indebtedness—mortgages on an unborn generation that was not there to protest. Liens upon consumers and producers already overburdened with the weight of a cancerous economic system. Here was the opporunity to build a new economic order, free of graft and usury, free of the domination of the money barons, free of the rule of those who gamble and trade in the necessities of life and in the nations resources and credit. But it was only a glimse; and few recognized what they saw. Most of us were too concerned with the immediate present and saw only the terrors of anarchy and chaos. And who shall criticize the man who taking office in those days when the epoch of "rugged individualism" had run its sated, selfsatisfied course and went down to oblivion with its last official representative in the White House, if he heeded the cry of the multitude and hastened with all the strength and sagacity at his command to save a banking and monetary system which we have learned to believe we could not do without?

With only a shining idealism to guide him; with no charted course; frankly admitting that he does not know whither we are headed, but determined to find the way out of the depression. He has kept us off the shoals. He has placed millions in employment. He has thrown the entire resources of the government into the breach to relieve distress. And he has no doubt learned a lot that wil serve him to good advantage in carrying his campaign to a successful conclusion.

He has probably learned that the financial interests, altho they are cringing and meek when they feel themselves going down, are overbearing and domineering when they think they have solid ground under them once more. He has learned that the industrialists who were willing to promise anything that was asked of them when their whole world was toppling about their heads, can be recalcitrant and rebellious when they believe that they have the power once more. If the NRA has failed of its purpose it is because the big employers have double crossed the president, for the labor organizations have cooperated wholeheartedly. If the AAA has failed to bring relief to the farmers, it is because the processors and dealers in farm commodities have passed the taxes back to the producers, and on to the consumers, cutting down the price of the raw products and raising the price of the finished products. The farmers have rallied to the president and his program and its failure will not be of their doing. If the government is being forced into heavy debt burden it is because entrenched capital has refused to yield to any other method of financing the national projects than with bonds and certificates of indebtedness. They are asking for that which the president saved them from last March, and they will probably get it. But when it comes the people will have "an ace in the hole." That is, a man in the White House who is honest with himself, honest with the people, determined to do the right and experienced in the affairs of the government. When he changes his course, as he will have to do, it will be "sharply to the left" and the barnacles will be scraped off and left on the sands to rot.

SMART FARMERS SUPPORT THEIR COOPERATIVES

A buttermaker for a cooperative creamery came in the other day and took us to task for not printing the "news" of a cream buyer who had been haled into court and fined for "making a mistake" in his test. The man may have been guilty of a deliberate theft and yet he may have made an honest mistake. Having had about three months experience at cream testing we know that it is possible to err unintentionally, as a deduction from our pay check testified to our sorrow.

We have made it a policy not to splatter our pages with official records of drunken and disorderly conduct, children being sent to the reformatory, or other matters which really concern only the parties involved, entailing no jury trial. We have always felt that anyone can get into a scrape at one time or another and see no particular news value in such petty cases.

The party that took us to task seemed to feel that by publishing an account of the particular case he had in mind we would be doing the farmer patrons a favor that they would be forewarned so to speak. While his argument may have some merit, the fact that we might be doing someone an injury should also be considered. We suppose that this was one of those cases where an editor would use his best judgment. Our reaction to the affair in question is that if a farmer sells his cream to the centralizers when he has a good cooperative creamery in his town is too dumb to benefit by being forewarned. Cooperation is the only solution to the farmers' problems. Political action can only be for the purpose of strengthening cooperation; a means to an end, and those who refuse to support their cooperatives are only delaying the eventual solution of their own difficulties.

Union labor found many years ago that they must support their own economic organizations and in their militancy they have coined a harsh term for those who refuse to "stick". When the farmers get to that point their problems will be very easy to solve. What they must have first of all is solidarity. "All for One and One for All" is a mighty good motto for them to adopt.

The St. Paul Daily News has figured out that the seven laws passed in the first seventeen days of the special session of the Legislature has cost about $3,400 apiece and deplores the high price of lawmaking.

We know of some laws that passed the regular session last winter quite smartly and consequently didn't cost us very much in the making, but which were not worth even the cost of printing to the people of the state. We believe that fewer laws, well considered would perhaps be worth more than the first cost even though that is higher than $3,400.

War Gas Old Stuff

The earliest recorded use of suffocating gases in military operations was at the siege of the cities of Plateo and Belium, in the war between the Athenians and the Spartans, about 431 B. C. Sulphur was burned and the fumes used to harass the enemy.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The president formally announces the repeal of national prohibition in one breath, and in the next he pleads for temperance.

"The noble experiment is just starting," said Will Rogers, on the day after repeal became effective. "States are going to have scandals over the sale of liquor, and politicians will fight over the taxes of it."

Scandals? Politicians mixed up with the liquor business?

Surely, somebody has been fooled! This new Utopia, described by the mighty forces which brought about the repeal of prohibition, wasn't supposed to have any scandals. Repeal was supposed to have wiped out all of the politician's chances at corruption in the liquor business, wasn't it? Or did we misunderstand the promises made by the wets.

And then there was something about the bootlegger...Prohibition repeal was supposed to wipe him out, too. And yet, on the morning after repeal, in our morning newspapers, we read such headings as:

PAIR BOOKED AFTER AGENTS FIND STILL.

TWO ARRESTED UNDER NEW STATE LIQUOR ACT.

RUM RUNNERS LAND CARGO.

ENLARGED FORCE TO COMBAT BOOTLEGGERS.

What is criminal in one state, is encouraged by the law in an adjoining state.

There must be no saloons, the President says in announcing repeal. Yet there were perhaps a thousand establishments in Los Angeles, where whiskey could be purchased over the counter this week, in drug stores, hot dog stands, and wayside vegetable markets.

No saloons, yet there were thousands of restaurants, cafes and lunch rooms, which had no "hard liquors" available, but where "light wines" up to 25 per cent could be purchased over the counter.

Confusion worse confounded. The boose band wagon is rolling noisily along. But the clatter and clamor will soon tire the fickle public fancy.

The taste of wines and beers, which today may be to the mouth "sweet as honey", will tomorrow become bitter nauseating.

We have only to wait a few brief months. The Twenty-first Amendment and all of the evils attendant upon it, will destroy themselves.

Who Makes War?

(Heywood Broun).

(Condensed from The New York World-Telegram, May 17, 1933.)

Any man would be a fool to declare that there cannot be another war. But we can say, "There must not be." War is possible. War is probable. But why is it "inevitable?" You who have sons, are going to say "It is inevitable that they shall be ripped by machine guns and shattered under shells"? Are you going to give the flesh of your flesh to be burned?

The air is filled with fumes. Lathes turn. Metal sizzles in its molds. When the wind is right you hear the distant roll of drums, the tramping of feet. Men in high office rattle sabres and talk of blood and iron. But, worst of all, we sit at home on porches and back rooms and say: —It's bound to happen. There's no getting away from it. Of course it's terrible, but what can I do about it?"

Well, what can we do? One of the simplest things is to stop doing here and now many things of which we have all been guilty. The man or woman who sat in a little group last Thursday, let us say, and remarked, "Of course, there's going to be another war, for all the signs point to it," will probably not be stigmatized as the sole author of the conflict. But when millions take the same attitude it does mass things up to the making of a world psychology for the preservation of war.

The cynic and the realist and the man who has read history have all done their little bit to break down resistance to the coming of the next great folly. We must rid our mind of the notion that wars are made by a few old men sitting upon the seats of the mighty. They have done their evil in the past and would again, but not one of them wears the armor of inevitability. We can tear them down from their high places.

A boy lies in the wheat field, with his chest torn away. He is groaning. He will not die till nightfall. And do you mean to say that nothing can be done about it?

"Still, history says—," objects a realist. But who is the man that can skip ahead through the pages of the great book and read us chapter ten before it has been written down? History says what we tell it to. We make it. You can't make a war without men and women and orators and "my country right or wrong" boys and radio broadcasters and editorial writers and cartoonists and farmers and machine workers. It needs the acceptance of millions upon millions. We will not accept.

One generation made the world war. A new generation can abolish war. If there is to be blood upon the clean page it will be our blood. "Slower, driver! Slower! That soldier with the bullet in his groin screams out each time you jolt us." It lies within our hands whether or not we spill the ink of existence upon those chapters of history yet to happen.

PEACE BE TO THEE, OH RACE OF CHRIST!

Oscar Ameringer in
The American Guardian

While filled with the lofty and loving emotions of the Yuletide, let me say something about the race that gave us Christmas—the Jews.

For Christ was a Jew, Mary and Joseph were Jews. The shepherds who came to see the Child in the manger were Jews. The three wise men from the East were Jews. I know the Good Book does not say so, but only Jews could have afforded that long journey; could have brought those expensive gifts; could have followed a star for so long a way.

A wonderful race, these Jews. A race of prophets, dreamers, and doers. Think of a people whose number never exceeded twelve million giving the world Moses, Solomon, Isaiah, David and Christ. Singers of mighty songs. Thinkers who searched the firmament for the light that would tell the reason for being. Dreamers who dreamed of law and love in a world of tumult and strife. Builders of temples on the ruins of temples. Prophets who hurled in the face of mighty kings their crimes against the weak and lowly.

Think of Moses, a foundling raised in the palace of Pharaoh, renouncing power and wealth to lead a tribe of working slaves to the promised land and freedom, never afraid of striking a blow for the cause of toil—but let the record speak:

"And it came to pass that when Moses was grown up he went out unto his brothers and looked on their burdens. And he saw an Egyptian smiting a Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way and when he saw there was no man, he smote the Egyptian and hid him in the sand."

Bold, brave and yet cautious as Moses was, it was only natural that he would become the leader of the first and greatest walk-out in history—the Exodus. It lasted forty years without either strike benefits or commissary and yet was a complete success.

Of course, Moses never reaped the fruit of his victory. He died in sight of his goal, but that is the lot of all great leaders. Their goal is always so far advanced that a lifetime is too short to catch up with it.

Besides Moses there were many other Jewish leaders who took upon themselves the burdens of oppressed and exploited. I could quote from them by the yard. But I won't. You can find it all in the Bible. There is one in your house somewhere. Look it up. Perhaps you even lug one around on Sunday. Well, why don't you read it? It's a great book.

The Bible contains some of the finest stories ever written. It also is a pretty good history of the class struggle in ancient times. In fact, its mostly taken up with troubles of that sort. And the Hebrew prophets, whom so many admire, so few read and none follow, were for the most part labor agitators, railing against the nice, respectable people who got their living by the sweat of others.

And, by the way, did you ever wonder why the men we honor, or even worship now, usually died under a pile of rocks, heaved by respectable citizens, or were hung, roasted or crucified? Well, think it over, and it will give you a little better opinion of agitators, rebels and undesirable citizens in general.

But I'm getting off my text. What I'm trying to get at is that the prophets of the Bible were all Jews, every mother's son of them, and that the Bible, itself, was written by Jews, and that if it were not for the Jews the chances are that we would still be praying to cast-iron bulls, brass monkeys and porcelain tomcats.

And instead of celebrating Christmas and trying to make folks happy, we'd be celebrating Solstice by cutting the throat of some poor baby boy as a bribe to keep the sun on the job for another year.

Oh, yes, the Jews have given the world much more than junk-yards, hand-me-down clothes, and shops with golden balls above the door.

Sure, they're sharp traders. How could they help it? For thousands of years, they were not permitted to till the soil or practice a trade outside of trading. So, when, in the course of time, trading for profit and its twin brother, loaning money for interest, became more respectable than piracy and bi-jacking, the Jews found themselves on the ground floor with coats off and sleeves rolled up for business.

But with all their money-making proclivities, the Jews are also great idealists, seekers for truth, soldiers of freedom, and lovers of beauty, so that the percentage of Jews in the fields of science and art greatly exceeds that of any other race or people. And this same virility, this same what shall I call it?—aliveness—which marks the Jew in every sphere of life, they also brought into the labor movement, which explains why the Jewish needle trades have waged more hard fought battles and won more glorious victories than perhaps any other labor union, with the possible exception of the coal miners. It may also help us to explain and understand why the man who left the deepest imprint on the mind of labor, the world over, was a Jew.

So here's a happy Christmas to the Jews, the folks who fought the first big strike, who licked the thugs of Pharaoh, who beat the sluggers of Ninavah, who struck from Babylon to Boston and never yet cried "quit."

More power to your arms, my Hebrew brethren, more cunning to your nimble wits, more fire to your burning hearts. You've done your bit on the long, long march from brute to semi-God. You gave us more and suffered more than any race on earth. You gave us Jehovah, Moses Christ and Marx.

And you gave us Christmas, too so here's a happy one to you! And may the day soon come when the love of Christ, your noblest son, conquers the heart of—Christianity.

THE DOLLAR YOU SPEND

The dollar you spend is helping a friend
The same time 'tis working for you.
Puts shoes on the feet of the man on the street
By giving him something to do.
The dollar you spend is helping to mend
Hearts that are burdened with care,
Pays for food kiddies eat—milk, bread and meat
And the clothes they are needing to wear.
The dollar you spend is helping to fend
Off the specter of worry and woe.
At the end of his rope, brings a small ray of hope
To the man who will reap what you sow.
The dollar you spend will pay in the end
In interest that comes from within;
When you're helping another, a friend or a brother
To fare forth with courage to win.

CHRISTMAS BROWSINGS

By Dr. Crawford Grays

CHRISTMAS is a season when we have magnificent obsession to do something for others from whom we expect no return. Such an obsession is sure to bless.

* * * * *

CHRISTMAS is the season of cheerfulness. Disappointment, envy, hurts are buried under smiles. We are cheerful not for the sake of those physically present, but also for the sake of those whom we have loved, "and lost awhile." They are especially near on Christmas Day and would not have us sad or unhappy.

* * * * *

CHRISTMAS is the season of hope that we are moving towards the fulfillment of the angels song, "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

* * * * *

Imperialists have apparently defeated the pacifists but war will become as obsolete as medieval torture chambers.

* * * * *

The "drys" apparently defeated, but soon each state in the Union will be working harder for a sober nation than at any time during the past fifteen years.

* * * * *

Present economic changes may have the cynic's scoff as "a noble experiment" but we are headed toward a humane industrialism which though checked now and again by the powers of Greed will ultimately reach its goal of the Golden Rule.

* * * * *

Ecclesiastical councils may freeze every move towards the Unity of Christendom but the growing independent thinking concerning Jesus and Christianity will ultimately unite the people who are more interested in His teachings and authority and in unity for the common good than in ecclesiastical authority and divisions for denominational gratification.

* * * * *

CHRISTMAS challenges us to take up the torch that fell from the hands of three first disciples who so devotedly and unfalteringly labored for the idealisms of their Lord and Master. The hope of society lies in our acceptance of this challenge.

SHOULD BE A CODE FOR THE FARMERS

The Country Press (Moorhead)

"Agriculture like any other industry of the United States, must be given a code," said Governor Floyd B. Olson at the conference of governors recently. "Agriculture, the basic industry of the United States and the direct source of livelihood of 32,000,000 people in the United States, has suffered more than any other group by reason of the present depression. In fact the depression of agriculture commenced in 1920, and has continued since that time. The virtual destruction of its buying power has not only impoverished it, but has also jeopardized the security of all other groups within the United States. Unless drastic steps are taken at once to relieve its conditions, its members will not only become entirely pauperized, but they will drag down into poverty other groups who are dependent upon their buying power for their security and prosperity. We believe that certain immediate action, supplementary to action taken by the National Administration is imperative."

A code that would apply to the farming industry and be of help in lifting agriculture out of the mire of the depression was devised by the governors' conference as follows:

A, Apply only to farmers.

B, Be administered by representatives of their own choosing in cooperation with the representatives of the federal government and of consumers.

C, Authorize the fixing of minimum prices to the producers for basic commodities sold on the domestic market, which prices must, in equality with the rates allowed public utilities under laws long existing, and prices allowed other industries under the NRA, equal the cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

D, Regulate the marketing of raw food products so as to encourage the ultimate ownership and control of the markets for farm products by cooperative organizations of producers and eliminate the speculative sale of farm commodities.

E, Determine the amount of such products to be sold from time to time on the domestic market so as to prevent any surplus which may exist from flooding the domestic market, and thereby interfere with the enforcement of fixed price regulations.

F, License producers, processors and dealers of, and in farm commodities to insure code compliance and prevent unfair practices.

Pending the adoption of an agricultural code, and pursuant to authority already granted by the agricultural adjustment act to the federal government, such government should immediately:

A, Fix minimum prices for basic farm commodities for sale on the domestic market which said prices shall equal the cost of production plus a reasonable profit to the producer, which shall be fixed in co-operation with representatives of producers of agricultural products of the United States who have or may hereafter prepare surveys showing such costs of production.

B, Determine and fix the proportion of all commodities which may be marketed during fixed periods by the producers thereof.

C, Insure compliance with the foregoing price and marketing regulations by licensing producers, processors and dealers of, and in, such basic farm commodities.

TEACHERS REFUSE TO FIGHT

The World Tomorrow

A recent convention of public and high school teachers in Kindersley, Saskatchewan, by a vote of 115 to 10 passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, (1) That we, the teachers of the Kindersley Inspectorate, hereby declare our opposition to war and to the policies that lead to war; (2) That we will under no circumstances support the nation in any war; (3) That in our schools we will do our best to prepare the children's minds for peace and for the support of peaceful policies."

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME TWO THIEF RIVER FALLS, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1934 NUMBER 40

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

An aviation patrol for Northern Minnesota has long been a dream of the state forest service. Such a patrol would be of tremendous aid in detecting and locating forest fires, observing their progress and the extent they are being checked. With a first class aviation field now being constructed at Itasca State Park from C. W. A. funds and emergency field to be built in each of the new thirteen state forests next spring, this dream is close to realization. The work is all to be done under the supervision of Grover Conzet, State Forester.

Those who would replace democracy by dictatorship point to the conduct of legislative bodies such as the special session of our Legislature as proof that dictatorship is the superior. But these people seem to forget that dictatorships are a throwback to the days when the lives of people depended upon the whims of monarchs and that subjects were thrown to the lions to satisfy sadistic impulses of kings. The experience of ages is against dictatorships. Democracy is still an infant. It reaches out to bring some of the spiritual and material comforts of life to the masses. To believe that democracy is a failure is to believe that the human being is capable only to live the life of a serf. To believe in its ultimate success is to have faith in the character and and ability of the human race to reach the heights.

The Minnesota Highway Department, which has taken a leading part in supplying jobs for the unemployed throughout the state during the past year, will have practically no state funds for new construction in 1934, according to present indications Highway Commissioner, N. W. Elsberg is planning to streach the balance of 1933 emergency federal highway funds as far as possible during coming year, however. So far as state funds are concerned, a preliminary budget estimate by Mr. Elsberg shows that highway department receipts in 1934 will be only $110,558 more than bond charges, maintenance of the enlarged trunk system, right-of-way costs, state expenses incurred in taking advantage of federal grants, and similar obligations.

For the first time, an effort is being made to aid the needy transient and eliminate the perpetual beggar and pan-handler from the streets. The federal emergency relief administration has set up a transient relief department in the state which will make a complete survey of Minnesota's homeless population and plan care and adjustment for those falling in the transient class. Individual care will be given women and families on a social basis, while work camps are now operating for the men. There are ten in the state, with nine more ready to swing into action as needed. The campaign is directed by the State Board of Control. The entire experimental project is coordinated with similar ones throughout the country.

The bank stock hearing, which has been very revealing up to date, has been continued to January 10 to allow the investigators of the State Commerce Commission to futher examine books and records of the corporations involved.

Those who listened to the radio "battle" between Governor Olson and Senator Rockne witnessed a clash not only between two distinct types of men but between two irreconcilable systems of social and economic thought. Rockne is the defender of property rights—of palaces and of slums. The society he champions extends the protecting arm of the government to those who have amassed wealth and permits the great mass of unfortunates to shift as best they can, even to starve and to die. The supremacy of human rights is the doctrine of the school of thought the Governor represents. This school holds that the happiness of the race, the common welfare of all the people, is the ultimate goal of government and of all social, economic and political institutions.

The bill to appropriate money to the Securities Commission to continue investigation of chain bank stock-selling activities was like a stick of dynamite to solons on both the House and Senate. Here was a case where those opposed to it were afraid to speak out boldly; they were afraid of the folks back home. When the bill came out on the floor, negative votes in committee became affirmative votes. In committe for example, Albert Pfaender, chairman of the House Approbriaions committe, found reasons for opposing it, but on the floor he voted "yes."

Five members in the House opposed the Governor's relief bill they were: R. W. Hitchcock of Hibbing, Val Imm of Mankato, A. Kueffner of St. Paul, and Hannah J. Kempfer of Otter Tail.

Following a short session of the retiring council, during which they approved the bills of the month, President Porter thanked them for the fine spirit of cooperation that prevailed among them the past two years, and voiced his appreciation of their loyalty and goodwill, a motion to adjourn Sine Die was made by Alderman Larson. More marriage licenses were issued last year than at any other time in the history of Thief River Falls except in 1902, as nuptual knot seekers failed to be scared out by the depression.

H. H. KELLY BUYS WILLIAM'S BLDG. COR. MAIN & 3D

Plans Addition of Another Story and Stock Room. Consideration is $10,000.

Harry H. Kelly, proprietor of the Kelly Hardware, last night announced that he had purchased the building on Main and Third Street where his business is now located from the George William's estate, for $10,000.

The deal was completed Wednesday morning according to Mr. Kelly, who stated that he intends to add another story to the building and also extend the present structure to the fall length of the lot. "The Frank's Hamburger Stand, which was included in the deal, will be wrecked to make room for a stock room," Mr. Kelly said. Faith in Thief River Falls and its future, prompted him to purchase the building and make tentative plans for enlarging it, Mr. Kelly coneinued. "With the enlargement of the building we will carry a larger stock and add to our services," Mr. Kelly said.

RENUMBERING OF STATE ROADS TO SIMPLIFY SYSTEM

National and State Numbers to Correspond on National Routings

Engineers of the Minnesota highway department have just pieced together the state's biggest jig-saw puzzle.

Handed 140 new state trunk routes covering 4,500 miles of roads, the Highway Department undertook the task of co-ordinating and consolidating the new mileage with 6,800 miles of the original trunk system made up of 71 state routes and 16 U. S. routes.

Out of this total of 227 different routes, the department has laid out a consolidated state trunk system of 125 routes covering 11,300 miles of highways. The result is a radically changed state highway map which will go into effect in the early spring of 1934 when the new route signs have been put in place.

In announcing completion of the renumbering plan for the enlarged trunk system, the Highway department announced that the entire 4,500 miles of new routes were officially taken into the state system in the last week of December. Addition of the roads to the trunk system was authorized by the regular session of the 1933 legislature, but lack of funds prevented the Highway department from taking over the routes until now, it was explained by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner.

"From now on," said Mr. Elsberg, "the entire 11,300 miles of trunk routes will be maintained and improved by the state from the proceeds of motor vehicle license fees and the state gas tax. No real estate or personal property taxes are levied for state roads. The increase of approximately 65 per cent in trunk mileage which the highway department must maintain in the future will mean that more money must be spent for maintenance, leaving less for construction.

"In renambering the system we endeavored to keep the total number of routes as low as possible, to extend

Forum Becomes Official Paper After Deliberation by Co. Board

The county taxpayers got a break for the first time in many years last Tuesday, when competitive bids were entered by the Thief River Falls Times and Thief River Falls Forum for the official printing. At other times the newspapers of the county have combined and the county has been forced to pay the full legal rate of 90 cents per folio for the financial statement and the official proceedings and notices etc. A ten cents reduction has been granted by the "Times" the last two years, their price having been 80 cents. Due to the fact that a newspaper must be a year old before it can be classified as a legal newspaper and qualified to bid on this work, the Forum could not enter a bid last year.

The Thief River Falls Times entered a bid of 35 cents per folio for the financial statement and 40 cents per folio for the proceedings, notices and other official matter with an additional charge of 15 cents per folio on all tabular matter. The Forum bid 25 cents per folio on the financial statement and on the proceedings with an addition of 9 cents per folio on tabular matter. The St. Hilaire Spectator entered a bid of 75 cents per follo for the second publication of the fincial statement. The new law as amended by the last session of the legislature provides that there shall be two publications of the county financial statement and that the second publication must be made by a newspaper in a different part of the county from that which is allotted the first publication.

Addresing the board after the opening of the bids, W. E. Dahlquist, editor of the Times urged them to let the printing to the Times in spite of the fact that the Forum was the lower bidder. He cited that the Times has always given good service; that they have a larger circulation than the Forum and that they are heavy taxpayers and therefore should be therefore given preferrence. Pennington and Marshall Combine Poultry Shows

Pennington county's poultry show will be held this year in connection with the Marshall county show at Warren, January 4, 5 and 6, combined show being held in this city next year some time in September.

The two shows were combined because the state appropriation was cut in half this year, and officials believe by combining the exhibitions they could uphold the quality and excellence of the show rather than suffer from inadequate financing of two individual exhibitions.

FIRED!

About 60 years old, but spry and as hale and hearty as many men 20 years his junior, and 26 years in the service of the city, during which time he had served faithfully and efficiently. The power plant was only and old fashioned little water wheel when Charley Krause went in there. He has seen it grow and helped it grow to a half a million dollar institution. He seen the Busch-Sulzer engines added and become too small, the building of the new dam and installation of the new water wheels, the installation of the 750 h. p. McIntosh-Seymour engine. He knows his way about the plant, Charley does. He knows every switch and connection and could probably go blindfolded thru thet maize of high voltage wires be hind the switchboard without getting burnt.

"I had a chance to get another job, not so very long ago," says Charley, "but I didn't take it. I've been here 26 years. I've got my home here, I've raised my children here and kind of liked the old town best." Had faith in his home town and the integrity of its citizens, Charley did. He done his worked and earned his money and spent his money here. But now he is let out to make room for a young man. An outsider who is a graduate of the University of Minnesota electrical department.

"I didn't know anything about it," Charley said, "until he came in and told me he had to do the dirty work and that I was done.". Been here 26 years, but I didn't get 26 minutes notice."

No Intention of Forcing the City To Purchase Says VicePres.

A. C. Thomason, vice president of the Fairbanks-Morse company was in the city Friday to interview the new councilmen and other citizens, in regard to the contract for another diesel unit which the old council proposed entering into with his company but which was outlawed by Judge Olson's decision in the injunction suit. In discussing the judge's decision with a Forum representative, Mr. Thompson stated that he was disappointed with the decision rendered. Mainly, he said, because of the fact that his firm is selling a great many of their engines under such contract as the one proposed with this city. "Such a contract has been upheld in the courts of the state in many instances," he said, "and I am inclined to believe that our firm will feel it necessary to appeal the case for a review by the Supreme Court. Not for the purpose of forcing the city of Thief River Falls to enter the contract, but for the purpose of clarifying the law. It must be remembered that we ae selling our product all over the state under just this kind of a contract and it is necessary for us to know just whot the law in the matter is for our own protection."

"Our company has thrown the services of our entire staff open and at the disposal of Thief River Falls," Mr. Thompson stated, "and we rendered, what I believe was invaluable service in assisting the city to get the grant. However it appears from the sentiment in the city that this fact has been against us rather than in our favor."

Corn-Hog Plan Will Be Considered Here Jan.12

The preliminary steps towards the organization of the farmers under the corn-hog curtailment of production plan will be taken on Friday morning Jan. 12, when the temporary committee will meet at the American Legion club rooms in this city. This committee which is composed of L. A. Nelson Carl Beiswenger, Hans Anton, Ed. Herien, Wm. McCrom and V. C. Noper will discuss the organization set-up with C. L. McNelly of the U of M Farm, St. Paul and lay the foundation for the permanent organization. A meeting of the corn-hog producers of the county will be held in the afternoon of the same day at the club rooms at which time Mr. McNelly will explain the workings of the plan to them.

OVER TWO MILLION DOLLARS IN TAXES PAID IN 4 STATES BY FEDERAL LAND BANK

Paying of taxes by the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul on farms on which it holds mortgages has poured $2,375,000 into county treasuries of many counties in all 4 states of the 7 Farm Credit District, eliciting many letters of thanks from county treasurers, who in some cases stated this was the first cash they had seen for months.

It is believed this will enable many schools that had closed to reopen and others to remain open, and thot it may pay the salaries of many teachers, whose warrants have been difficult to cash in recent months. Loans are being reamortized and taxes paid only in cases approved by National Farm Loan associations.

In Minnesota there were 2,839 farmers whose loans were being reamortized, who had been unable to pay their taxes because of low prices and the recent depression and who were saved payment of approximately $30,000 in penalties because the Land Bank paid these taxes before the end of the year. Scores of letters have come from grateful borrowers expressing their appreciation. In all Minnesota tax payments were approximately $312,000.

North Dakota mortgagors numbering 5,346, whose loans are being reamortized are having $1,094,00 in taxes paid by the bank, it is announced, the tax payments in this state having been heavier than in any other state. All of these taxes are being paid in time to avoid futher penalties.

Wisconsin farmers to the number of 2,104 have been relieved of immediate payment of $267,000 in taxes on farms which are having their loans reamortized, and of penalties by the bank's prompt action.

In Michigan similor action was taken in October and Michigen borrowers were saved about $20,000 in penalties, the total taxes on reamortized loans in that state having amounted to $175,000. These payments were made within a period of 2 days, when it was learned this would be necessary in order to save heavy additional cost to the farmer borrowers.

The $2,375,000 in tax payments advanced by the bank in the 4 states has benefited 10,544 borrowers who will later repay the amount. Meantime this total sum would not have reached county treasuries in many instances for months to come, while futher penalties would have accrued against the already overburdened farmers.

LIVING COSTS RISE TEN PER CENT SINCE MAY

The cost of living in Minnesota and St. Paul has had a sharp rise since last spring and is also above the leve of November 1932, from which time to May, 1933, there had been futher decline. An index prepared by professor Richard F. Kozelka of the School of Business Administration University of Minnesota, shows that prices are 4.2 percent higher than in November 1932 and 10.4 percent higher than they were last May, in Minneapolis.

Rise in the cost of obtaining food and clothing is somwhat greater than the figures given, but is partially offset by a continued decline in rents, the index shows.

Difference in price can be compared exactly with last fall, but only partially with last spring because of the difference in commodities purchased in the fall and spring.

"Contrary to common belief, prices paid by consumers this fall have not 'sky-rocketed'" the report said. "Early orders by retailers enabled them to keep the increase in clothing and furniture to approximately 20 percent but they refuse to forcast the spring price-level, when present stocks must be replaced. Rents continued their decline of the last three years, the spring to fall decline being 5.4 percent."

In all compilations the types of commodities and residences used, and the relative importance of different items, are based on a typical workingman's budget.

AMERICAN FARMER HAS BIG STAKE IN EXPORTS

What do exports mean to the American farmer? This question is discussed in Special Bulletin 164 of the Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service, just published at University Farm. One answer given by the author, Dr. O. B. Jesness, chief of the agricultural economics division, is that during the 10 years from 1920 to 1930, 60 million acres of crop land in the United States were farmed to supply foreign markets. This means, he says, that one out of every six acres of crop land depended on foreign outlets.

Naturally, Dr. Jesness points out, the farmers who produce cotton, wheat, pork and other products exported in large amounts are very much interested in exports. But the question is almost equally important to producers of butter, cattle, poultry and other commodities consumed mainly at home. That is because, if exports fall off, farmers who have been producing export products that are domestically consumed. Such competition quickly demoralizes the home markets.

Tariffs, though levied on imports, have much to do with export trade, says Dr. Jesness, because imports are the goods with which other countries pay for our exports to them. Furthermore our expots become imports to the countries where they are sent, and the import restrictions of those countries interfere with their purchases of our goods. By putting tariff restrictions on imports in our own country we may lead other countries to raise similar barriers against our exports.

International debts are definitely a part of the international trade problem, also, says, Dr. Jesness, and his bulletin makes this point clear. Dr Jesness suggests that every farmer should take an active interest in these questions and demand consideration ways and means of reviving foreign trade. Anyone wanting a copy of Dr. Jesness' bulletin, may have it by asking their county agent, high school ag. man, or writing the Bulletin Room, University Farm, St Paul.

Problems to be dealt with in these talks include what to do about the child that doesn't want to go to school, the child who borrows trouble, the boy who torments his sister, getting children to appreciate the importance of good manners, children that won't play alone, and similar perplexities of parenthood. The schedule, as outlined, runs up to and including Friday, March 23.

U FARM PLANS DAIRY JUDGING FOR FARMERS

A dairy cattle judging contest, having as an added feature a guessing contest on the actual butterfat production of the cows placed, will be open to all farmers attending the thirty-fourth annual Farmers and Homemakers Short Course at University Farm, January 15 to 20. The contest will be held Thursday af er noon, January 18, under the direction of E. A. Hanson, extension dairy specialits, and N. N. Allen of the dairy division staff.

A demonstration in judging, given by Hanson and Allen, will start the contest off. Then the farmers will place three or four rings of cows, representing Holsteins, Jerseys and Guernseys. Following this, the farmers will give reasons and the placings will be discussed by both farmers and instructors.

Each contestant will be asked to estimate the butterfat production of the different cows, all of whose records have been kept by the dairy division. This innovation in short course judging contests is intended to show the relation of breed type to producing ability.

December 3, a total of $114,986,740.40 in payments for making required adjustments in production under agreements. A total of 1,012,290 checks representing $109,686,526.03 had been sent to cotton growers. Tobacco farmers had received 16,381 checks totaling $1,007,978.15. Are You Ready?

Many indications are seen on every hand that we are rapidly nearing the corner behind which prosperity has hidden for some years.

Many concerns and employers are beginning to plan to add new workers when times improve. Are you ready?

It is an "ill wind that blows no one any good", and the depression has tended to "shufle up" many employees. Hundreds of people are trying to earn more about their present trade or occupation, or how they can learn a new trade or occupation.

Dunwoody Institute with its five million dollar endowment was given to the residents of the State to train those interested in industrial and mechanical lines. It is conducted without profit.

The Institute is ready to be of service to those residents of the State who wish to secure training in their present line or wish to enter a new line. To carry out these objectives, it has set up a policy of "anyone, anytime, any course, and any length of course."

During the dull season winter months hundreds of boys and men from the 87 counties of the State avail themselves of this Institute which was built by a man who made his money in the Northwest and who made available the major part of his wealth so that the Institute may be of service to the successive generations that follow in his footsteps by making their living in this territory.

A new muskmelon disease which recently hit the Twin City area has led University Farm plant disease specialists to undertake developing resistant varities.

REORGANIZE FARM ADMINISTRATION

Abandonment of Eight Sections is Announced by Farm Administrator.

Washington — Drastic reorganization of the farm adjustment administration with abandonment of eight sections was announced by Chester C. Davis, farm administrator. Davis, who was appointed to succeed George N. Peck, said the purpose was to coordinate the work of the administration and concentrate its efforts on the problems most immediately concerned with the welfare of farmers. He announced the appointment of three assistant administrators. Victor A. Christgau, former congressman from Minnesota, and Davis' assistant when he was in charge of the production control section; H. R. Tolley of Berkeley, Calif., also a former assistant of Davis in the old organization; and Alfred D. Stedman, of St. Paul, former director of information, who will become head of the division of information and records with control over the consumers' counsel, the press section, and correspondence and printing. Through the merging of many old sections and incorporation of their duties under new heads the food products, fisheries, beverages, foreign trade, imports, code analysis, special commodities, and the office of the administrative officer will be abandoned. In addition the processing and marketing division will be merged with the production division in the new commodities division under Christgau. The pending transfer to the national recovery administration of many codes for industries of remote interest to the former will enable the agricultural administration henceforth to concentrate its efforts intensively upon problems of the most pressing and most immediate concern to agriculture. Most essential of these are adjustments in production needed to attain and maintain increased farm income, according to Davis. In this program, the new organization will, first of all, tackle the dairy problem. This will involve a program of production control or reduction.

BOOK ON MINNESOTA LIFE IS INTRODUCED IN MANY SCHOOLS

A newly-published grammar school textbook entitled, "Community Life in Minnesota" is now being introduced in schools throughout the country, according to George H. Bradley, director of the Minnesota Tourist Bureau, whose office is credited, in the book's preface, with giving material aid toward its preparation.

Authored by Maude L. Lindquist, instructor in history at the Washington Junior high school at Duluth, and James W. Clark, former instructor in history at the St. Cloud Teachers' college, the book, published by Charles Scribner's Sons of New York, sells for 96 cents.

Beginning with the history of Minnesota as a frontier region, the book pictures the life of the state's early inhabitants and explorers, reciting many of the colorful developments which contributed to the state's rich lore. Describing the Chippewas as "Children of the forest," the book goes on: "They were fierce and constantly on the warpath against the Sioux. They liked to tell stories of great hunting expeditions, and to boast of the deeds of their warriors.

"Red men seldom met their enemy in the open, but carefully concealed themselves for a surprise. The signal for attack was followed by piercing yells of the war-whoop. Scalping their victims, men or women, was an act of bravery."

Local and state government is treated in plain, understandable fashion; agricultural and industrial pursuits are also fully covered. Beginning with the genesis of life in Minnesota, the book ends with a modern flourish, describing air transportation health, and recreation in Minnesota, and present-day leaders in contemporary American life whose home was originally the Gopher state.

Practically every community in the book, either by direct mention or through the mention of one of its better-known citizens, or by illustration, of which there are 100 in its 300 pages.

With the passing of the old council on Tuesday evening there is again unity in our city government—at least for the time being. Knowing the men of the new council as we believe we do— and having observed the mayor for the past two years, we are not at all certain that it is going to last very long. The new council are men of decided opinions, fully as much so as the council that passed into history Tuesday evening. They are men too, who have been in business for many years and are in the habit of giving orders rather than to take them. We believe that the mayor will have to "reef in his sails" considerably or he will get "stepped on" a good deal harder than he did by the old council.. Be that as it may; if the mayor is short on some things, he is long on good looks and will be an ornamental welcome speaker when the convention season rolls around again.

The old council served the city during the depth of the depression and they have a lot of constructive work to their credit. They served faithfully and with honor and their work and the problems with which they had to contend will be more fully appreciated with the passing of the years. The new council will never have to face the criticism, the lack of cooperation and the lack of appreciation that the old council faced. Mainly because the depression is passing. CWA and PWA projects are solving the unemployment situation, spirits are rising, want and destitution is no longer quite so poignantly near at hand, the sun is on its way towards us again. What a world of difference those things make. Years hence the citizens of Thief River Falls will look back to the "Depression Council" and say; "Those men sure had their troubles. But, they were mighty fine men. They were a fine council. They took it on the chin—and they never whimpered."

WE EXTEND A BOUQUET— ALSO A BRICKBAT

If the despatch with which the new council went thru their organization work and the setting up of the city government for the next two years is a criterion of the manner in which they will expedite their work as city fathers, it augurs well for the future. It bespoke of caucuses and a plan of action. Procrastination and bickering is worse than the wrong action and we believe they should be commended for setting about their program without hesitation.

While we do not profess to agree with them in all their actions, we feel that they are right in placing the operation and the control of personnel of the Water and Light department under one trained expert. Centralized authority and responsibility is proper for efficient operation. It should have been done long ago.

Our light and power plant represents an investment of a half million dollars and we concede that it should have a man of technical education as its directing head. However, we also feel that a half million dollar investment is too large to entrust to the hands of a man so recently out of college as the man they have appointed. Technical education is a very necessary thing. So is practical experience. What we should have is a man who has both. If it must be a choice between the two, then practical experience is the most necessary for day in and day out service. An experienced consulting engineer can always be secured when special occasion demands it.

The city has a man in Ole Legvold who has grown up in the service of this department. He is experienced and well qualified to serve the city as "the main spring and stem-winder" of the light and water department. He has been a faithful servant and we do not believe that it will sit very well with the majority of our citizens if he is to be demoted and replaced by a young man but two years out of school. An outsider brought in here under the circumstances under which he was retained by the mayor. It seems to us that the council is accepting an unnecessarily heavy liability in so doing.

With this issue the Forum becomes the official paper of Pennington county. Incidentally we have redeemed one part of a pledge we made to those workingmen, property-owners and farmers who entrusted us with their hard-earned dollars in return for a word of honor when this newspaper was founded; that we would treat the taxpayers with the same consideration as we would the private citizen and enter a competetive bid for the public printing. We ask no particular credit for having done so. Neither do we expect anyone to pour incense on our lily-white morals. The splendid support that our friends have given us has proved the lie to the oft repeated statement that it is a thankless task to attempt to publish a newspaper in the interest of the public. We have not found it so.

We confess that the smug complacency of individuals who pose as civic leaders, leading citizens and big taxpayers, when they have collected from the public, far more in excess charges than they have paid in taxes, has irked us somewhat and the opportunity to show them up has not been particularly unpleasant. We admit too, that the weeping and gnashing of teeth we witnessed when our bid was found to be the lowest failed to touch our stony hearts. Furthermore, the pressure that was brought to bear on the county board to force them to let the contract to the other bidder did not increase our respect for our contemporary. We have taken our share of lickings, but we take satisfaction in the fact that we have taken them like men.

It is to the county board's credit that they passed on the bids on their merits, in spite of the camouflage, and discounted the plea that the contract should be let to the higher bidder because they have delivered a fine service in the past, a fact which we did not dispute, but for which they have been paid far in excess of its value. The Forum will endeavor to give equally good service, and we shall ask no extra concession in the future for so doing—we are getting paid for it—at our own price.

The consumption of dairy products, notably milk and ice cream has dropped over 20 per cent since beer was legalized. The dairy farmers who voted for repeal were not even intelligently selfish.

WORKING HOURS AND THE NRA
Union Advocate

With all due respect to the honesty of those who pass upon the various industrial codes and with respectful regard for President Roosevelt's interest in solving the unemployment problem, it must be admitted that the blue eagle has been a dismal flop for millions who once believed it would be a godsend. It has failed in its purpose because selfish industrial interests, dominated by even more selfish banking interests, have insisted on low wage scales, long hours and countless exemptions. In a few industries wages have actually been increased, but in the vast majority of cases, wages have been lowered.

The case of the packing house workers is well to the point. In that industry, under the NRA code, wages were reduced to such a level that American standards of living were impossible. And in all too many cases the NRA has failed to serve its own ends. These ends were (1) to increase employment, (2) to increase the purchasing power of the workers through increased wages, and (3) to guarantee collective bargaining through recognition of legitimate unions.

Instead of increasing employment the indutrialiats have insisted that the NRA is a "share the misery" plan by lowering wage scales to give other workers a chance to get half way out of the pauper class. By so doing they have reduced those who had jobs prior to the NRA to become half pauperized. And, furthermore, in all too many cases the minimum wage scale established by the blue eagle codes have become the maximum wage, a wage far below the wage paid prior to the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

It is true that the cotton and textile codes increased wages, but it also made possible a 300% raise in the selling price of textile goods, an increase certainly not justified. The industrialists will be the winners in the long run, and the workers in other lines will be penalized through inflated prices.

Working hours have been decreased, but to many the decrease in working hours means a decrease in earning.

Purchasing power cannot be built up through this method, and the NRA can only redeem itself by an adjustment and reconsideration of many of the codes under which only the industrialists gain. It cannot solve the problem of unemployment and poverty by utilizing a plan wrich legalizes the robbery of Peter in order to pay Paul.

CALLING FOR THE IMPOSSIBLE
Stephen Messenger

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, in his address at Muncie, Ind., declared:

"We need a new type of business man who is willing to devote all his talents to bringing about a fair, workable relation between the income of labor, the income of agriculture, and at the same time receive only a small return on capital and a modest salary."

Mr. Wallace is liable to be branded either as a dreamer, a socialist or a bolshevik. When the salary and dividend interests are touched that "rugged individualism" which has been one of the most cherished idols of the American business creed, is utterly ruined. Million dollar bonuses in steel and tobacco, great salaries to railroad presidents and a couple of dozen vice presidents when their roads are begging aid from the government millions of bank deposits used to pyramid gambling pools by taking advantage of public confidence to filch from innocent people—all a part and parcel of the "rugged individualism" but within the law.

So, when Mr. Wallace calls for a leadership that will be content with modest monetory reward, he is calling for the impossible under our educational and spiritual systems. He is calling for a finer type of business leadership than the United States has yet known to any alarming extent.

THE CORNER SALOON—IN DISGUISE
Farmer-Labor Leader

Every Legislative vote against a state-owned liquor dispensary system is a vote for the return of the corner saloon—in disguise. The kimono-clad hussy parades before House and Senate in the makeup of tavern, drugstore, grocery, exclusive club, or what have you. But under the mask is the old-time bar. Every man and women in Minnesota knows it —Especially the legislators.

The return of the ginshop, even in temporary disguise, would be bad enough. But the scheme is much deeper than that. Here are the facts:

In states which have adopted private sale for private profit, the retail price of legal liquor has mounted to prohibitive heigths. In one state where the distillers' cost, including federal tax, is 40 cents per quart, the retail price is $3 per quart—and advancing. In another, "good" whiskey costing but 50 cents a gallon to produce sells for $12 to $20 per gallon.

Nor is it "good" when the consumer gets it. Congressman O'Connor of New York declares that a single quart of genuine whiskey is being cut, blended, adulterated and rectified at the rate of ten to one. That is, one quart of 40-cent whiskey is "streched" to ten quarts and sold at $5 apiece, a total of $50. Thats on an investment of forty cents, plus nine bottles. And it's legal sale.

Into that market steps the bootlegger with illicit whiskey, but better by far than the legal rot. Not only better, but cheaper. Therefore, in such states the bootlegging industry is doing better business and making larger profits than before repeal.

The LEADER has received uncounted letters, running into hundreds, from Republicans, Democrats and Farmer-Laborites, wet and dry. They are agreed upon this: If Minnesota legislators for any reason whatsoever, or for no reason at all take action that will plunge this state into a bootlegging morass such as obtains in some other states they will be held to stricter account by constituents than ever before in the history of the commonwealth. And leading in that state-wide purging will be the combined membership of several hundred solidly organized Farmer-Labor Clubs.

THE ROLE OF EVE
The American Spectator

We still suspect that the best equipment for an intelligent woman is a full-length mirror in her bathroom and a smaller one in her vanity case.

For the women who have inspired poetry, overthrown kings and ampires, and made their names in history, were never distinguished either for learning or virtue. If they are remembered it is either because they supplied in their lifetime that element which no man, however brilliant, can supply— the element of femininity,, without which the world would be as dull as the Garden of Eden before the Serpent instructed Eve as to her true role.

M. KAPLAN REPLIES TO A. TROVATON

To the Editor:

It is quite evident to me that Mr. Trovaton's criticism of my article on "money" which your newspaper culled from my occasional publication "The Bemidji Advertiser," and his comments thereon shows him to be an advocate of the "Coin Harvey" school of theorists which politically expresses itself under the name of the Liberty Party.

Every man has a right to express his honest opinion—and we should all be afforded the privilege of stating our position without necessarily having it intimated that such difference of opinion places us in the category of defenders of the "American Bankers Association" or advocates of "Usury."

Mr. Trovaton, takes me to task for saying that "money is a medium of exchange and also a measure of value." He agrees that it is a medium of exchange but cannot quite see the relation when I merely state a fact admitted by all scientific economists that it is the measure of value accepted by all capitalistic nations thru an agreement made necessary for the exchange and interchange of commodities between Nations.

I would suggest to Mr. Trovaton to try and get a copy of "Value, Price, and Profit," written by Karl Marx, many years ago and made necessary to explain the theory of how "Surplus Values" are created.

We must also bear in mind that we are dealing with the money question as it now exists, and its general bearing and relation under a system of Private Profit, where production is carried on primarily for exchange and not for direct use.

Money cannot exist "disassociated from commodities." Because money under capitalism must perforce be representative of "commodities" and therefore have a commodity base. It may be gold, it may be silver, it may be platinum, it may be cattle, but it must be, somehow, something, in Social Labor Power is concretly expressed in the most convenient exchangable form.

What we socialists have been trying to explain is that not until the exchange value of one mans labor equals that of other mens labor in all socially productive industries, will it be possible to approximate a condition of economic equality where production will not foster the perpetuation of a parasitical class.

I am being accused of "sticking up for the monetary system based on superstitution, ignorance, mistrust, greed, and rapacity," because forsooth I am trying to point out that the system as is, necessitates commodity money, and I will go a step further and say that any and every attempt to tinker with commodity money under private capitalism will only have the effect of aggravating the evils resultant from economic servitude, as witness the situation today with reference to the plight of the real producers in practically all the basic industries.

It would also be suggestive for Mr. Trovaton, to recognize that the real tinkerers in the first instance with commodity money have been the "money changers of Wall street." Every issue of stocks and bonds sold thru the Stock Exchanges, and the big bankers, and unloaded upon the credulous public for many times their actual economic worth, is an evidence of the chaos that a departure from Sound Value based upon actual potential equity investment, in such industries has brought about.

Taking it all in all, I venture to make the statement that there is fully sixty per cent of watered capitalization in most of the public utility carporations, and many similar industrial organizations that have been pushed onto the markets of the world exchanges. Surely these actions should have proven to men like Mr. Trovaton that playing the game that capitalism has developed into a science for their own ends and purposes, will only lead us further into economic capitivity.

He suggests that "it is better for the goverment to print greenbacks to meet the runing expenses, etc., and is better for the creditor class who will get payment, though it will only have half the purchasing power, than to have 100% repudiation and get nothing." Then he asks "what better is it, for labor to be out of income half the time or to get work all the time at double pay and a shorter work day?" This really is quite a statement and prophesy, but the facts as we now have them give the lie to any assumption that an inflated currency will make work as is hoped for.

The writer speaks from personal knowledge when I make the statement that there are as many men out of work in the basic industries today as there were a year ago. It is true that the government has created artificial jobs for millions of men all over the country. I can truthfully say that I have seen with my own eyes last week while driving between Minneapolis and Chicago fully twenty thousand men with brand new shovels doing a lot of hand shoveling along the highways and by no-ways real productive work, but doing just something to show good intentions in return for meager relief compensation that we are paying them to provide maintenace of their families. Is this kind of work constructive? is it intelligent? and what is its purpose if not merely to prove the governments contention that it has put millions of men back to work. But really is not that kind of work purposeless? Does it not have the tendency to further the down and outs who are forced into this vast army of make shifts?

The trouble with some of us is that we are still striving and hoping to bolster up the system of private ownership, and hoping against hope that individualism, perse; will somehow be able to unravel itself from its present meshes and snags, therefore we talk in terms of "creditor class" and bonds, and credits, and interest. Those of us who have given thought to the study of economics know, or should know, that the bonded indebtedness for all purposes of governments, and also other sources of so called interest income, has become so great that the income cannot begin to pay the outgo. Therefore we have enolved diplomatic terms such as "refunding" "refinancing," etc. We seldom meet obligations, what we do is to forstall the day of reckoning by new issues so that the day of maturity can be retarded another fifty or a hundred years. Thus we are in that way trying to saddle upon future generations a debt that will never be paid and must sooner or later be repudiated.

Hypnotizing ourselves into the belief that "credit money" is going to lead us out of bondage is a vain delusion—why not face the facts and admit this is our problem, and that it is up to us to settle it? That which society in its ignorance has brought about and which is now our bane, society in its collective intelligence can abolish once we get wise to the facts.

And in conclusion, because the Socialist Party has not made much headway in the United States, does not necessarily imply that Socialism has not influenced most constructive legislation in recent years. The fact is that nearly every constructive reform measure that Victor L. Berger and Meyer London advocated when they were in Congress as out and out socialists have now become legalized doctrines in many states of the country. The seed has been sown and the harvest is slowly but surely caming into fruition.

Real socialists would much prefer to be true to their convictions than to follow blindly every will o' the wisp movement that sees the light for a day, and then passes on, into oblivion.

The Liberal Digest

A DISCOURSE ON LIBERTY
By Andrew Trovaton

Liberty may be divided into many classes. In this treatise the division will be political, religious and economic. I doubt if there is any other country where political and religious liberty is so strongly protected by law—both constitutional and statutory—as in our country. Of course there are in some states laws which indirectly infringes; such as poll-tax payments as a requirement for voting rights, compulsory school attendance etc. But any direct attempt to limit these liberties has not yet been tolerated by the American people.

Economic liberty is not so easy to protect by law, but, to the extent of their potential ability to make just laws to protect it as much as possible, the american people have been grossly negligent, so that at the present time only a small percentage of the people enjoy reasonable economic liberty.

Being that we still have political liberty, which is the requisite for the other classes of liberty, the people have no excuse whatever for not having the full amount of economic liberty that can be had through just legislation.

Now, why is it that when niether infidels, agnastics nor Christians (misguided) have failed so far to take away our religious liberties to any great extent, that the international usurers and selfish big business corporation can have succeeded in nearly wiping out our economic liberty?

I believe the principal reason is that political, religious and other educational leaders rave not had the courage to speak forcibly and truthfully against corruption in "higher places," and that means the government particularly, but also private corporations.

I have no inclination to have ministers of the Gospel to mix party politics, but I do think it their duty to admonish the people—especially here where the final resonsibility for legislation lies witr the people, to attend to their plain duty to pass up as much as they can and not miss voting. Politicians who do not come out clear for what they stand for and speak against all injust legislation, as best they know how, I have no excuse for at all because they are either moral cowards or too anxious to get office.

THE ARKANSAS FARMER TALKS TO HIS MULE
Author Unknown

OVER THE HILL trailed a man behind a mule drawing a plow. Said the man to the mule:

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man in the image of God; yet here we work, hitched up together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me, or if I work for you. Verily, I think it is a partnership between a mule and a fool, for surely I work as hard as you, if not harder. Plowing or cultivating we cover the same distance, but you do it on four legs and I on two; I therefore, do twice as much work per leg as you do.

"Soon, we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one-third to the landlord for being so kind as to let me use this small speck of God's universe. One-third goes to you and the balance is mine. You consume all of your portion with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine between six children, seven hounds, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes, YOU get 'em. Mule, you are getting the best of me, and I ask you, is it fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle a man—a lord of creation—out of his substance?

"Why, you only help to plow and cultivate the ground, and I alone must cut, shock and husk the corn while you look over the pasture fence and hee-haw at me.

"All fall and most of the winter the whole family, from Grany to the baby, pick cotton to help us raise money to pay taxes, and buy new harness and pay the interest on the mortgage on you. And what do you care about the mortgage? You ornery cuss, I even have to do the worrying about the mortgage on your tough, ungrateful hide.

"About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't. And after election I realize that I was fully as great a jackass as your papa.

"Tell me, Mule, considering these things, how can you keep a straight face when you look at me and seem so dumb and solemn?"

ONE CENT SALE

ing the board in reply to Mr. Dahlquist, R. M. Aalbu, editor of the Forum called attention to the fact that the Forum competition has brought the Times down from 80 cents to 35 cents. He stated that the Forum would guarantee 100 percent circuletion of the financial statement to the taxpayers if the county would furnish the list. "If it were not for the fact that the Forum has entered the competition you would be paying 80 cents again this year. If the Forum should pass out of exsistence you will pay 80 or 90 cents again next year." he said "The Forum was conceived, and being operated on the proposition that the taxpayers' money is as good as the private businessman's money. Our bid is based on a scientific figuring of space cost, plus cost of composition when set in the small type. The Times speak of the taxes they pay but if this is a reasonable bid which they have submitted today, and I assume that they will admit that it is, then they have collected their taxes and more from the county in an excess charge. Taking money out of the county's pocket with one hand and putting a part of it back with the other."

The board decided to mull the matter over for a time and laid it on the table until Wednesday. The matter was taken up again the next day and Mr. Dahlquist renewed his plea on behalf of the Times, stressing the fact that his paper has a larger circulation. Mr. Aalbu suggested that if it was intended that it should go to the paper having the largest circulation, the lawmakers would have so specified. The law states that the board shall call for bids and under the spirit of the law it should go to the lowest bidder unless the discrepency in the circulation of the papers should be so vast that it was quite apparently proper to give it to the larger paper. Twenty months ago the Times claimed 3400 subscribers" Mr. Aalbu said, "today they claim only 3000. Twenty months ago the Forum didn't have a subscriber today we have 1100, and almost entirely within the county."

The board went into closed session and a short time afterwards they announced that the Forum has been allotted the financial statement and official proceedings, notices etc., becoming the official paper of the county. The Times were awarded the publishing of the delinquent tax list. The new contract will take effect immediately and the official proceedings of this meeting will appear in next week's issue of the Forum.

existing routes where practical and to eliminate the confusion caused by the former practice of having some routes carry different state and U. S. numbers.

"U. S. routes in the renumbering system will carry only their U. S. number, which is a great convenience to tourists and in line with national practice."

Under the new numbering, Trunk highway number one starts at Little Marrais on the shore of Lake Superior and goes northwest to Ely, then almost straight west along the south shore of lower Red Lake, around the lake shore following the new Roseau-Bemidji road which is number 89 until the intersection of the Elwell road and then to Thief River Falls, thence to Warren over 33 which become number one and west from Warren to the North Dakota line.

The new trunk highway from Erskine becomes number 30, a continuation of the highway from Detroit Lakes to Erskine, and will enter Thief River Falls via the Angle road. From here it will follow 32 which retains its old number until it reaches a point straight east of Newfolden, when it turns west, thru the latter village, west about 4 miles and then north, thru Strandquist to Karlstad.

Highway 65 from Red Lake Falls to Bagley becomes number 92 under the new numbering and will continue thru Bagley to Mallard, then to Itasca State Park where it joins the 71. 32 will continue straight south from Red Lake Falls intersecting 34 east of Barnsville.

Waterways Series To Show Benefits of 9 Foot Channel

With the completion of the nine-foot channel in the Upper Missisippi during the next two years, a new era will begin for agriculture and industry in the orthwest. The "land-locked empire" will have a direct and open public highway to the sea and to world markets, a necessity foreseen and urged by the late President Theodore Roosevelt, approved by Presidents Coolidge and Hoover and finally ordered constructed by President Franklin Roosevelt.

Minnesota now is preparing to reap the benefits of this new and cheap transportation route, and in order that the public generally may know what it means, the Forum will next week begin publication of a series of articlea prepared by the Up tion. -
per Mississippi Waterway Associa

The articles have been designed to describe construction and operation of the locks and dams, show the benefits of the new water highway to agriculture, business and industry, explain the extent and importance of transportation costs and list tonnage of freight available for river shipment at savings to Minnesota farmers and other producers and consumers.

In making this huge job a part of the federal public works progrm, President Roosevelt ordered it completed in not more than three years. There will be 27 dams between the Twin Cities and St.Louis. Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota has fought the Northwest's battle for transportation equality for eighteen years and led the fight for the deep channel at every session of Congress.

Tha State Department of Conservation and the United States Forestry Service will co-operate in their management program in Northern Minnesota. Both the Federal and the State forestry service are to undertake land acquisition programs to consolidate their holdings.

A House member at the special session was delivering quite an oration. Just as he reached his stirring climax (the hungry mouths at home and what not) we glanced over his legislative audience. One of the representatives was having a hard time of it over a cross word puzzle; a number of heads were buried in the home newspapers; some dozed and made noises doing it, while the doomed ceiling engaged th attention of not a few. What oratory! What a waste of effort!

The Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension is fast establishing a reputation for "getting its man." The latest man-hunt victim is Cyril Woolridge, bank bandit, captured in Minneapolis by Operative William Conley after a six-month chase. Woolridge confessed to Melvin Passolt, Bureau Chief, to bank robberies at Russel, Ihlen, Chandler, Hampden, Atwater and Sauk Center, all during 1933.

Senator Rockne has added a new one to social and economic doctrine. Attackting Governor Olson's human rights philosophy of government, the veteran state senator says in effect there is no such animal—that there can be no protection of human rights without first protecting of propery rights. And that brings us again to the doctrine of property rights being supreme, of which Senator Rockne is a staunch defender. Of course, a fifth grade child can detect its specious reasoning—sophistry. But why do these defenders of property rights always, in their public utterances, concern themselves with the plight of the little fellow when in reality they are playing the game, unwittingly or not, of the big fellow?

A total of 441 banks in Minnesota which applied for deposit insurance through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation have been accepted. This means that deposits in this state totalling $175,000,000 are now fully insured. The big banks are not so "hot" for the insurance, but Commissioner of Banks Elmer Benson is strong for it, because it protects the little fellow. Deposits up to $2,500 are insured against all losses up to July 1, when this sum is increased to $10,000.

The Temperance Educational bill was the first liquor measure to pass both houses. Most of the legislators agreed that a system of instruction relating to temperance be taught in our pubic schools. By impressing upon fertile young minds the dangers of liquor, we will be doing much for the cause of temperance.

After all this talk and hullabaloo about diversion of funds in the division of Game and Fish, five state public examiners working over the books and records of the Division for several weeks, failed to discover any evidence to substantiate these loose allegations. The entire period of the present Administration was covered in the intensive audit.

The State Teachers' college at St. Cloud will receive several thousand dollars in C. W. A. funds as the result of a legislative bill passed during the special session permitting the immediate release of $4,000 from the school's 1934-35 appropriation for necessary repairs. A number of local residents will obtain employment. The "Big Three" sponsored the bill.

"The dairy department will be under the able management of Edgar Longren, formerly of the Thief River Falls Cooperative Creamery," Mr. Hoel said. Arrangements are being made to open this branch next week.

The dairy department will be in the Christo building next door to the one now housing the firm's retail store. The rear of this building will be used in connection with the Seed House and will enable us to give our customers better service," Mr. Hoel said.

Senator Naplin 'Hews to the Line Let the Chips Fall Where They May' With Principles at Stake

SENATOR LAURA E. NAPLIN

Senator Laura Naplin of this district won a neche in the Legislative Hall of Fame last week for her vote on the "Mileage Bill" when it came up before the Senate. She voted against the Senate resolution to pay members additional milage, up to $150. When the resolution was adopted in spite of her vote, she presented her bill, representing 364 miles of travel home and back. When the matter of aproving the expenditure came before the senate, she voted against it.

"Every candidate for the Legislature knows when they file for the office that there is no extra pay for extra sessions," Senstor Naplin said, "and takes that chance when they run for office. I do not hold it against those that voted for the mileage bill," she continued, "I will concede that the law may not be entirely fair. Nevertheless, anyone running for office does so with their eyes open knowing that they may he called upon to serve some extra time without extra pay."

Senator Naplin supported and voted for the state dispensary bill, but she voted against the bill that was passed. "I am dry," Senator Naplin said,"but I realize that the liquor question is one that must be faced and solved and the proper way to do it is to cooperate to get the best possible control of the evil." To my mind the temperance educational bill was among the best of the bills passed by the special session. Under its provisions the evil effects of alcohol on the brain, the nervons system, as well as on the digestive organs and the stomach will be tought in school it should do a lot to teach young folks to avoid liquor."

HOURLY NURSING SERVICE STARTED UNDER LINDGREN

Sponsored By Nurses Club; Efficient Economical Service

An hourly nursing service modeled on the best system in vogue in any American City is now available in Thief River Falls. That means that anybody that wants nursing service, even for so short a period as one hour, can get it. This plan is being sponsored by the Nurses' Club of Thief River Falls, under the direction of Eunice Lingren. "The new plan is designed," Miss Lindgen said, "to help anybody confronted by illness to meet the situation adequately at a price they are able to pay. The nursing service is planned to be self supporting and to serve the public in the most efficient manner possible. The fee will be $1.00 for the first hour and fifty cents for each succeeding or fraction of an hour. The regular rates for full time service for nurses of Thief River Falls will be continued."

According to the officials of the Nurses' association that, so far as known, no city in the United States offers a cheaper service then Thief River Falls, "This service will not only give excellent nursing service at reasonable prices but will put our unemployed nurses to work," Miss Lindgren said.

Although this service is sponsored by the Nurses' Club of this city, a voluntary board of advisors has been chosen, which consists of Dr. O. F. Mellby, Dr. Archie Smith, Mr. Carl Christofferson, Mrs. J. N. Nesse, Miss Lois Norlander, Miss Minnie Stonehouse and Miss Eunice Lindgren.

Through the efforts of the local National Reemployment office, a plan has been formed whereby all classes of illness where the patient cannot afford nursing care, will be given free nursing care from the hourly Nursing Service, Miss Lindgren stated

"Anyone deserving this nursing service and who cannot afford to pay for it shall put in their request to the office of the county overseer of the poor telephone number 21. With the approval of this office a nurse will be sent out to the home and she will be paid by the federal funds.

Calls for nurses will be accepted at the School Nurse's office by a C.W.A. worker. Her office hours will be from 8:30 in tha morning to 5:30 p.m. The telephone number is 694-W. All night calls should be sent to one of the hospitals.

200 EMPLOYED ON PROJECTS IN THE CITY

Electric Transmission Lines are Being Placed Under Ground

Changes in the street lighting system and water mains now employs 200 men acording to W.W. Viebahn, City Engineer. "The lighting plan being carried out," Mr. Viebahn said, "will eventually do away with all electric wires on the avenues and streets leaving only the main lines in tha alleys, above ground." In the final plan ornamental lamp posts will be installed."

At the present time, according to Mr. Viebahn, under-ground wires are being installed to connect the present street system to 110 volt A.C. current carried in alley lines, doing away with 220 volt D. C. on thestreets.

There are now 11½ miles of A. C. current line in the city and 10 miles of 220 D.C., which is in poor condition and will be dismantled with the complete change-over from 220 direct to 110 alternating current.

Eight hundred and thirty feet of six inch water main, representing $1000 in material is being dug up and will be installed where it is needed as part of the plan. This piping was laid some years ago and was to have carried water from a city well. However when the well was dug they failed to find water and the main has been unused. The pipe was laid on Knight and some near the old power house.

Continental Congress Activities

SPECIAL SESSION OF WYOMING CONGRESS DEMANDS ABOLITION OF NATIONAL GUARD

Cheyenne, Wy.—The emergency meeting of the Wyoming Congress of Farmers and Workers met in the state capitol simultaneously with the opening of the special session of the state legislature in early December. The Casper Trades Assembly sent renewed pledges of support and the Wyoming Farm Holiday Association, the Unemployed Citizens' League of Wyoming supplied the bulk of the delegates plus a small but representative delegation from the Socialist Party.

The findings of the Congress were embodied in a four page communication to the state legislature. This communication opposed the sales tax and an organization suppression bill under the innocent guise of an anti-racketeering bill, bitterly indicted the profit system asserting the right of the Continental Congress to speak for farmers and labor and demanded the abolition of the National Guard, and the establishment of a state bank, state wholesale and retail distribution of liquor, a farm mortgage moratorium and adequate state unemployment relief.

A lobby committee was appointed which presented the communication to the Republican Senate and Democratic House. It was read in full in the Senate but its reading halted before convention in the House. Reactionaries passed the sales tax and defeated the proposals for any but the meanest appropriations necessary to finance the Governor's committee on Unemployment in a survey, also defeated the proposal for state administration of retail liquor altho state wholesaling was estabilished. The farm moratorium was defeated but the Farmers Holiday Association immediately declared one in their own name which was at once effective in in four out of the twenty-three counties. The Congress looks to see the Holiday Association spread its power to the other counties if evictions start again this spring. The organization suppression bill was fortunately rejected even more overwhelmingly than in previous years. The Wyoming Congress of Farmers and Workers expects to futher progress as fast as organization can be perfected. The Goshen county delegation to the congress was impressive enough to swing their legislative delegation for the Congress program. The state Federation of labor increased its membership 40 per cent since June, school teachers are fighting mad at reactionary attacks and ready for union organization. Farmers are the most aggressive group of workers, speaking little of the old cost of production battle cry and declaring directly for a struggle for the Cooperative Commonwealth and nothing less.

FARM OUTPUT OF STATE LARGER IN DEPRESSION

That Minnesota actually raises and markets more bushels and pounds of farm products than it did before the depression is shown by a series of indexes indicating the volume of agricultural production in Minnesota, prepared by Dr. W. C. Waite of the division of agricultural economics, University Farm, St Paul.

From figures on the quantity of the 16 most important Minnesota farm products sold, Dr. Waite has prepared an index for each year from 1924 to 1933. This index dropped from 102 in 1924 to 94 in 1927, gradually rising to 97 in 1930. In 1931 it was 104; in 1932, 106; and in 1933, 103.

Separate indexes representing the number of livestock on farms, show the same general trend. For example, in 1929 the index of harvested crop acres was 99, raising to 104 in 1931, 103 in 1932, and 102 in 1933. The index of livestock on farms, as of January 1, was 100 in 1929, and it reached 111 for each of the last two years.

Dr. Waite says this expansion in volume of agricultural production since the begining of the depression has probably been largely the result of farmers' efforts to offset lower prices by a larger physical volume of commodities sold.

STATE POULTRY SHOW TO OPEN JANUARY 18

Poultrymen in Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas and other states are manifesting unusual interest in Minnesota's annual poultry show to be held, January 18 to 21, at the West Hotel amusement rooms, in Minneapolis. Backed by the Minnesota State Poultry association, the Ramsey County Poultry association and the Northwest Turkey association, the show will offer premiums totaling 50 per cent more than those for last year, says A. C. Smith, secretary and treasurer, 430 Andrus Bldg., Minneapolis. Mr. Smith will mail premium lists and other information on request.

Competition for prizes will be open to the world says Mr. Smith, and this year the number of birds required in each class to qualify for maximum prizes has been reduced nearly half. Prizes are offered in every variety of poultry listed in the "Standard of Perfection" bandbook and on every variety of established breeding. There will also be the usual auxiliary show in cats, rabbits, pigeons and pet stock.

The annual meeting of the State Poultry association will be held during the show and, in addition, the state meet of the Rhode Island Red Club and the fifth zone meet of the Partridge-Wyandotte Club, meaning that these varieties of birds will also be well represented in the exhibits.

IS LOCAL GOVENMENT ON DOLE? PRESIDENT OF TAXPAYERS ASKS

At a time when many municipalities and some of the states desired to cooperate with the Federal government in instituting programs of public works to relieve unemployment and distress, they were unable to do so because of their own financial distress. They could not finance themselves except upon terms that might be regarded as unreasonable, in the face of their own financial dilemma.

These units, no doubt needed funds to alleviate local suffering, but because of the meagre possibility of floating bonds, eventually they were forced to lay their problems on the doorstep of the federal government and today they are in reality charges of the nation, and are really getting a dole.

"Doesn't it seem clear, then, that the restoration of this self-dependence and this prestige that the local governmenment has lost because of its financial distress, must in future rest upon the ability and the desire of the states and the local units to put their own houses in order? Who is to blame for the financial crisis in the cities? Surely not the federal government. It is the local people themselves. If improvement is to come, it is plain that home government costs must, from now on, meet the ends of sensible and prudent economy," J. P. McDonnell, president of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association, points out.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT COMBATS ICY ROADS

More than forty million pounds of sand and cinders is being used by the State Highway department this winter in making icy roads safer for traffic, according to a department bulletin.

This has been an unusually bad winter for slippery roads in many parts of the state, and the maintenance division of the highway department has done more than the ordinary amount of sanding. Hills and curves on hard surfaced highways have received the greatest attention.

The department has purchased so far this year 184 tons of calcium chloride which is mixed with the sand and tends to hold it on the ice instead of being carried off by traffic.

SENSATION PREDICTED IN BANCO HEARING

More sensational disclosures than have yet been made are promised when the hearing again get under way in the investigation the Securities commission is carrying on of the Bancorporation and First Stock Corporation.

That the swindlers missed no bets in wringing the last penny from their victims it is expected will be clearly demonstrated when the hearings reopen.

Hesitation on the part of the reactionary state Senate to vote necessary funds to continue the investigation has caused the delay in proceeding with the investigation.

Since the appropriation has been voted the auditors for the Securities Commission are again back on the job going over the tangled books of the Bancorporation.

These drab looking account books are becoming more interesting reading than the most sensational novels with their records of wild parties paid for at the expense of stockholders and other goings on that never would have been imagined from the pious public conduct of the labor hating Deckers and others.

RESORT KEEPERS PLAN DRIVE FOR INCREASED TOURIST TRADE

Organized to sell central Minnesota as "Paul Bunyan's Playground," a group of enterprising community leaders, hotel and resort operators in that section of the state is laying the groundwork for a banner crop of out-of-state visitors for 1934.

Cooperating with the Minnesota Tourist Bureau, Paul Bunyan's Play ground, Inc., as the new group calls itself, is representing the territory from Brainerd north to Bemidji, extending west to Park Rapids and east to Crosby, Ironton and Cass Lake. Jack Madden of Brainerd, president, and Merrill Cragun, secretary, are originators of the title and organizers of the group which proposes to sell the merits of Paul Bunyan's famed stamping ground to all prospective vacationists.

The Brainerd Chamber of Commerce has invited the civic organizations of Bemidji, Park Rapida, Cass Lake, Walker, Nisswa, Fequet, Hackensack, Backus, Crosby, Ironton, Deerwood and Jenkins to join in the movement. As an impetus to the project, George H. Bradley, director of the Minnesota Tourist Bureau, gave a radio talk on behalf of the group, regaling his WCCO listeners with tall tales of the north country. So elated was his audience over such fabrications as "the year of the two winters and the great blue snow" that hundreds of letters poured into the Tourist Bureau's state capitol headquarters, asking for copies of the Paul Bunyan talk. Many of the writers were from out of state, including one from California asking for definate vacation information for a family of four for next summer.

Paul Bunyan's Playground plans to promote log rolling contests, fishing contests and general outdoor activities. They plan to introduce Paul Bunyan sports wear, food products, souvenirs and curios all bearing the general design of things associated with Paul Bunyan lore.

The policies and annual budget for the new organization, under its present set-up, is to be determined by the civic organizations and resort and hotel men who are members.

HIGHWAY TREES

"If the government continues its emergency employment work when spring opens we hope crews of men, properly supervised, will be put to work planting suitable trees along ten thousand miles of Minnesota highways." —Fairmont Sentinel.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR FARM LANDS SAYS ARENS

An increase in the value of farm lands during 1934 is forecast by Theo. Arens, state rural credit department conservator.

"The price of ferm land will rise rapidly during the year," the conservator asserted in a statement released today.

"A nationwide survey on 'to and from farm movements during the years from 1920 to 1933' reveals a steadily increasing demand for farm properties.

"This increase was felt in the rural credit department during the last several months. The increase we experienced is 75 per cent greater for the last half of the year over the demand for the similar half of 1932."

A total of 235 farms, comprising 24,200 acres, were sold by the state during the six months' period for $313,00.

America's farm population now is the greatest in history, 3,000,000 persons giving up urban life during 1931 and 1932 to bring the rural population to 32,242,000, according to Mr. Arens. The previous high figure, he said, was in 1910, when the farm population totaled 32,076,960.

FACTORS IN LIVESTOCK MARKET PUZZLE SHIPPERS

Extremely cold weather, coupled with reduced receibts has tended to give firmness to some branches of the livestock market as the year ends, but, underlying factors influencing the market trend reveal a more or less perplexing situation, states the regular weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Co-Operative Association of South St. Paul.

Available supplies of market hogs for 1934 will be much the same as this year, the Government estimate indicating only a three per cent reduction. Reports indicate that farmers plan to breed 8% fewer sows for spring farrowing.

The number of cattle on feed December 1 was reported by the Government to be 8% less than a year ago, and reduction also was reported in lamb feeding.

With the cattle and hog markets in extremely bad condition for the past six weeks, a reduction in feeding operations is logical, but, with sheep and lamb markets behaving rather meritoriously, a reduction in feeding does not seem to be necessary.

Beef stocks in cold storage houses of the United States on the last report were 70 per cent more than a year ago, and 8 per cent more than the five year average.

Pork stocks showed 30 per cent increase over a year ago, and 21 per cent increase over the five year average.

Frozen mutton and lamb stocks continued light, being 28 per cent below the five-year average.

Lard stocks were nearly four times as great as a year ago, and approximately three times as large as the five-year average.

Among other factors having influence on feeding operations are less grain to be fed, and general tendency on the part of the farmers to hold their corn.

With the AAA program to cut hog production 25 per cent being underway, and the slaughter of 6 million pigs this fall, hog packers should show some increase in buying activity.

Farmers all over the corn belt are aroused over the hog situation, protesting to their respective state legislatures as well as to the Secretary of Agriculture in Washington against the practice of direct buying of hogs by packers which is one of the chief factors in maintaining an extremely depressed price condition in the hog market.

Governor Olson of Minnesota, has definitely sided with farmers and hog raisers of the state in their fight to supervise direct buying. In a statement he said, "A very substantial contributing cause of the low prices now paid on the public markets for livestock is the direct buying of livestock by the packers. This practice has grown to such an extent in the past few years as to enable the packers to fix the public market prices of livestock."

One of the best means of advancing cattle prices as well as any other farm commodity price, is to boost the hog market, for cheap pork has long been a keen competitor of other foods.

Decker Gift Is Assailed in Legislature

Not a single voice was raised in opposition to the resolution introduced into the House of Representatives by representatives Dowey Johnson, Wier, Bennett and Nordeen to demand that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation hold up the proposed $23,000,000 gift to Decker and his associates, through handing it to the bancorporation and affiliates, until the Securities Commission has concluded its investigation of the Bancorporation.

Many voices, however, did ring out in angry demand that this outrage of the federal government giving millions of dollars to banks of such dastardly practices as the investigation has already brought forth should not be carried out.

Hundreds of supporters of the resolution gathered in the retiring room back of the House chamber and because of the numbers present it was necessary for all to stand, including the Legislators who were holding the hearing.

DRIVERS LICENSE BRINGS RAZZ FOR BRIDEGROOM

This drivers license business has its complications. In St. Cloud a few day ago, according to the St. Cloud Times, a Brainerd young man appeared e the clerk of court's office and asked for a license. He was advised to apply in Crow Wing county, but on replying that his girl lived in St. Cloud and that it was for her, he was given an application blank to have her sign. A little latter he returned very sheepishly. "Did I ever get the razz!" he exclaimed to the clerk. "I'm after a marriage license, not a drivers license."

CHANGES IN COMMISSION TARIFFS MADE ON JAN. 1

Amendment to tariff No. 8 (commission charges for selling livestock) requested by the Centeral Co-operative Association on December 21, were approved by the Packers and Stockyards Administration officials of the U. S. Department of agriculture, according to a letter received by the Central Co-Operative Association a South Saint Paul. These changes become effective January 1, 1934, and will mean a substantial savings to shippers of light weight carloads or to those who split shipments between two commission firms of between two markets.

Realizing that there were some unjust charges being made on such shipments the Central Co-Operative Association took steps to amend this part of the tariff.

The statement to them from Washington reads:

"This will acknowledge receipt of Supplement No. 2 to your tariff No. 8, in which certain modifications are made in the rates applicable to mixed consignments containing 10 000 lbs or less and in the changes applicable to split shipments. This supplement is accepted effective January 1, 1934. Signed A. W. Miller, Chief Packers and Stockyards Division."

How this will mean savings to shippers is illustrated by examples from actual shipments sold at South Saint Paul.

A Certain shipment contained 131 hogs. This shipment was split between two firms at the stock yards, one receiving 16 hogs and the other 115. According to the old tariff charges, commissions on 115 hogs amounted to $20.50 (85 hogs at $13 and the 30 remaining hogs at 25 cents per head or a total of $7.50). If there had been no split and this shipment had sold through a single firm, the maximum commission would have been. $12.00. Thus, because the shipper accomodated a single farmer back home who wanted his 16 hogs sold through a different agency, it cost the consigner the difference between $12.00 and $20.50, or $8.60.

In the other case commissions on a mixed carload shipment, containing a lot of light weight stock (the total weight being 10,000 lbs. or less) upon which the drive-in schedule applied according to the old tariff, exceeded the carload maximum. According to the amendment, charges cannot now exceed the carload maximum.

This shipment contained 5 cattle, 7 calves, 52 pigs and 40 light weight lambs, total weight being 9,860 lbs. Commissions according to the old schedule amounted to $20.60, and according to the new rate, commissions cannot exceed $23.00. this being a savings of $3.60 for the car.

VET PAY PLAN IS GIVEN TO SENATE

Legion's Four-Point Plan to Restore Benefits Offered by Senator Reed.

Washington—The American Legion's four-point program for restoring veterans' benefits was put before congress by Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania. He told the senate upon introducing the bill that at no time since the legion was organized has it shown such moderation in its requests, despite reductions in benefits and a lowered purchasing power of the money received. Just before Reed acted, a legislative program of the Disabled American Veterans was submitted to President Roosevelt by J. W. McQueen, national commander. It sought modification of the economy act's application to service-connected cases. McQueen emphasized neither cash payment of the bonus nor pensions to the non-service connected group were being sought at this time. The legion proto the economy act. Restoration of service connection as it existed prior to the economy act. Restoration of the old rates for service connected cases, providing $100 a month for total permanent disability. Free use of veterans' hospital, but only for men who need hospitalization and have not the money. The same pension rate—$15 a month—for widows and orphans of World war veterans, that dependents of the Spanish war get under the economy act. Legion officials said the first two points could not cost omre than $60,000,000 a year and probably less. The third item would cost nothing, they said, while the fourth would cost $9,000,000 for the first year; $15,000,000 for the second; $20,000,000 for the third; and an average of $19,250,000 for the first five.

VET PAY PLAN IS GIVEN TO SENATE

Legion's Four-Point Plan to Restore Benefits Offered by Senator Reed.

Washington—The American Legion's four-point program for restoring veterans' benefits was put before congress by Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania. He told the senate upon introducing the bill that at no time since the legion was organized has it shown such moderation in its requests, despite reductions in benefits and a loweerd purchasing power of the money received. Just before Reed acted, a legislative program of the Disabled American Veterans was submitted to President Roosevelt by J. W. McQueen, national commander. It sought modification of the economy act's application to service-connected cases. McQueen emphasized neither cash payment of the bonus nor pensions to the nonservice connected group were being sought at this time. The legion proto the economy act. Restoration of service connection as it existed prior to the economy act. Restoration of the old rates for service connected cases, providing $100 a month for total permanent disability. Free use of veterans' hospital, but only for men who need hospitalization and have not the money. The same pension rate—$15 a month—for widows and orphans of World war veterans, that dependents of the Spanish war get under the economy act. Legion officials said the first two points could not cost more than $60,000,000 a year and probably less. The third item would cost nothing, they said, while the fourth would cost $9,000,000 for the first year; $15,000,000 for the second; $20,000,000 for the third; and an average of $19,250,000 for the first five.

"Eatered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, a: the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, uade: Act of March 3, 1879."

A CIVIC ENTERPRISE OF HIGHEST CALIBRE

To our mind the presentation of the Orntori "Elijah" by the combined efforts of the choral groups aa musicians of the city at the Tinity church last April 2nd was the outstanding civic achievement of 1933. Endeavors of such truly spiritual quality has been much neglected in the past ond it is a source of much satisfaction to us to know thot the group is about to begin rebearsals for another presentation, this time of the Oratorio "Creation" by Joseph Hoyden. While not as long as the "Messiah" or "Elijah" this composition contain some masterly choruses. The chromatic runs and flourishe which make tho latter two compositions so difficult o rendition by anyone but professional soloists are avoide in "Creation" and will make it possible to use all hom talent in its presentation, Dr. Vistaunet assures us.

Our community is fortunate in having in its mids a man of such high ability in chorol and symphonic direction as Dr. P. L. Vistaunet. He is an untiring worke His sympathetic interpretation of "Elijah" was a revalation to many who had not witnessed his work before We feel sure that every singer and instrumentalist a well as all our civic organizations and churches will cooperate wholeheartedly in making this new presentation even more successful than the last. We would suggest that its presentation as one of the features of th formal opening of the new auditorium would be ver appropriate.

There seems to be a good deal of sentiment develop in the city in favor of a new court house. The new council has started steps to clear away the old buildings between the new auditorium and the court house and to acquie the lots for the purpose of making them into a civi center. The plan is good, and if the plat is seeded down planted with shrubbery, and walks and settees added, i should be a spot that the city can be proud of. It is certainly an eyesore at thepresent time. A new court hous would of course complete the picture if it can be erected without placing an added burden upon the taxpayer We all desire a beautiful city and a court house that i worthy of our county, but we must also lock to the abilit of the taxpayers to meet the costs. Unless something i done soon to relieve the conditions facing our farmer we will not need any court house at all. Nevertheless this talk about a new court house is intriguing.

The court house was only built us a temporary affai the hope being advanced at the time that in a few year at the most we would build a really fine court house! A: a temporary building it has become rather a landmar. It is in bad shape now and a veritable firetrap. It is no worth trying to repsir or rebuild.

The advocates of a new building point out that Mr Frisbie, the government's CWA engineer stationed her has assured the city and the county board that there wil be ample federal funds to be secured for projects tha have merit and it seems to us that no project could hav more merit than the building of a new court house. W believe that if the county can get the labor cost paid b the federal government, a grant of twenty per cent of th materisl cost and a loan at low interest, over a long period from the government to defray the balance, as th proponents of the enterprise maintain, it would be worth while for the county bosrd to call a meeting of the citizen of the county to discuss it. One thing is certain, and tha is that under ordinary methods and if the county mus build by its own means alone it will be mony years before we can hope to construct a new building.

The railroads seem to be doing something whic many people insisted could be done, but which the rail road magnates from the heighs of their experience an wisdom insisted could not be done, and that is to reduce their rates and make more money than they hav been making with high rates.

Since the government coordinator took charge of the tronsportation problems the railroads have reduced thei passenger rates by as much as two thirds in some instances, and the added business it is bringing them, is according to figures released by some of the larger roads in thia territory, more than offsetting the loss caused by the reduction in rates.

D. A. W., writing in his column "Off a Reporter's Cuff" in the Minneapolis Journal suggests a few "service" charges that the banks have evidently overlooked. here they are.

I would like to stste the following: That I have been almost continueously angaged in electrical work for the past twenty-five years. First having completed a corespondence course in electrical engineering. For several years working on telephone work at four different towns. After that I was employed as electrician at the electricial plant at Danbery Ia. in wiring and installing all street wiriag. Thereafter I managed and operated the electrical light plant at Verndale Minn. for two years. Since then I have been in a business of my own in electrical construction in the city of Thief River Falls.

I served in the Army during the World War and was honorably discharged. Some time ogo I made a written application to the present city Council for appointment as Superintendent of the City Water and Light Dept. And while there is no intention whatever to cast any reflection on their judgment to select the man best qualified to fill that position, thera is a question if sufficient time was taken to oquaint themselves with what was stated in the application.

Futhermore, I think that there are homa men qualified to handle the affairs of the city water and light department without hiring n man from outside the city.

PADEREWSKI GREETS A FELLOW ARTIST

Selected

A little Italian street musician had selected the curb in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue to render "The Wearing of the Green." All his notes were off pitch and one or two missed fire completely, but the tune was unmistakable. Worshippers passed in and out of the cathedral but no coin dropped into the little tin cup.

Then up the Avenue approached a serene and compelling figure. Poderowski had just finished a recital where thousands hod sat entranced under the magic of his music. His attention was attracted by the little Italian and his pathetic enterprise. Here was another artist, whose recital was not yet finished. Paderowski extracted from his wallet a bill, which he placed in the tin cup. Then facing the little Italian, the great artist removed his silk hat, bowed slowly, respectfully and with grave dignity, turned silently and resumed his walk. One artist had greeted another.

FARM BUREAU OFFICIALS SOLD OUT TO GRASPING SHIP OWNERS COMBINE

—Farmer-Labor Leader—

That the Farm Bureau Federation stooped to selling its questionable prestige to a group of ship owners for $97,750 in 1930 wos revealed last week before a special Senote committee, investigating certain mail contracts held by certain ship owners. Evidence was introduced and verified which proved beyond all question that the Farm Bureau Federation not only offered to sell out to the ship owners but that it argued its value to the schemes of the moneyed interests seeking huge mail carrying contracts from the government.

The Farm Bureau Federation is practically the only large organization of farmers which has refused to cooperate in the present Farm Holiday strike. It is noted for its reactionary policies and for its scornful indifference toward the embattled farmers banded together in the Farm Holiday movement. Conceived by the bankers and grain traders, the Farm Bureau has had a history of inaction, conservative leadership and no record of accomplishment. It ia generally conceded to be the plaything of the grain gamblers and the few remaining small town bankers.

Treachery Revealed

The following account, written by George L. Knapp, staff writer for Labor, is taken from the current issue of that excellent weekly.

Tha influence of the American farmer, and indirectly, the prestige of the Department of Agriculture, have been hawked and peddled for money to selfish private interests for years by officials and employees of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

This astounding fact was emphasized this week at the hearing before the special Senate committee investigating mail subsides granted to shipping lines. Senator Hugo Black (Dem., Ala.) put into the record a letter which M. S. Winder, executive secretary of the Farm Bureau Federation wrote to the American Ship Owners' Association in 1930.

If the Ship Owners would put up $94,750, wrote Mr. Winder, the whole influence of the Farm Bureau Federation would be thrown into an "educational campaign" for government support for the merchant marine.

An Alluring Offer

"Fortunately," he wrote, "the American Farm Bureau Federation is in a position to make this appeal most effectively—

"With a membership of over 1,250,000 farm families.—

"With 1,937 county farm bureau organization—

"With state organizations completely organized and functioning—

"With 6,000 salaried employees—

"With a national headquarters in Chicago (legislative headquartera in Washington), embracing II special departments' each in charge of a trained specialist and staff."

A Plea of Guilty

Winder admitted his anthorship of this letter on the stand last week.

"Your real program was to put a push behind individual Congressmen in their districts, and see that they voted right?" asked Senator P. A. McCarran (Dem., Nev.).

Winder denied this—and Senator Black read o letter from the records in which the very words were used.

Most of the shipping companies did not agree to the Winder scheme, though some offered to come in; and the prce was reduced, first to $30,000 and then to $15,000; but with no effect. Mr. Winder explained that the money was needed to pay the expenses of an educational campaign."

The Senate committee discovered that Farm Bureau Federation officials engoged in pedding influence found a better market in other quarters.

Collected "Big" Money

In the three years from 1930 to 1932, inclusive, they collected $69,250 for "educational campaigns" from various groups of special interests. The National Electric Light Association, propaganda organ for the Power Trust, was heaviest contributor, putting up $31,000 in the three years. The National Lumber Manufacturers' Association was second, with $15,000, and the copper and cement associations and some private corporations put up smaller sums.

The asphalt industry, however, was the real Sonta Claus. J. A. Van Petten, formerly connected with the "information" service of the Farm Bureau Federation, organized a "Secondary Road Institute," to promote farm-to-market roads; and in three years got about $150,000 from the Asphalt Institute.

The idea was to boost the building of these secondary roads of asphalt. At the time, the aame officials were taking money from the Portland Cement Association for boosting concrete roads.

On Bureau Letterheads

All the letters sent out in behalf of asphalt were on Farm Bureau Federation letterheads. This, of course, gave the impression that a great farm organization was backing the work. Winder atated the the Farm Bureau Federation got about $90,000 of the $150,000 contributed by tha asphalt business and Van Petten thought be personally had got about "20 per cent of it."

Indirectly, as said before, all these efforts were peddling the prestige of the Department of Agriculture. The Federnl government hands the states $6,500,000 a year for agricultural extension work. The county agent is the heart of this work—and he has been made the heart of the county farm bureau as well.

These bureaus are usually joined in a state organization, and the state organizations form the American Farm Bureau Federation. In large measure, the bureaus are built upon work done by a government servant—the county ogent— part of whose pay comes from Washington.

Recalls Old Scandals

The feeling in Washington is that these revelations demand official notice. Unless the Federation itself cleans house in drastic fashion, the Department of Agriculture would seem certain to intervene; and failing this, the matter is sure to come up in Congress.

This is not the first time the American Farm Bureau Federation has been involved in a serious scandal.

Senator Norris of Nebraska denounced the Federntion for helping the effort to turn over Muscle Schoals to the power and fertilizer companies Some of its officials were undoubtedly paid for that work.

Years before the elder La Follette discovered leaders of the Federation conniving with the lobbyists of "Big Business" in a Washington club and told the story with characteristic bluntness on the floor of the Senate.

GOV. OLSON AS A TRAIL BLAZER.

St. Louis County Independent.

In the development of this nation, and especially the west, the work of the trail blazers have always been attributed to those who originated in the east, that portion of the country along the Atlantic seaboard that was first settled by the pilgrim fathers. In fact it was necessary for the east to take the initiative to push tha development of the nation to the west. But the east has always attempted to take all the glory, and has continued to be in the limelight, with but a few exceptions. The west has coatinued to be the home of Indian, coyottes, and Rolphs, elements that have retarded, socially aad economically, the vast empire lying west of Wall street.

BUT— The west is coming tino its own. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor of the state of Pennsylvania, who has been an outstanding advocate of the progressive cause, politically and ecnomically, was introduced to the house of representatives of Minnesota last week, and paid a glowing tribute to the west when she said: "We in the east owe a great tribute to the west. We are trying to achieve the thinga that you have already successfully put over, We in Pennsylvania are following in the footsteps of your Governor, Floyd B. Olson."

This is an outstanding tribute to Governor Olson and the state of Minnesota, and one for which the people of this commonwealth should justly be proud, irrespective of party affiliation. It comes directly from the heart of a woman who has been an outstanding figure in the fight for the rights of the common people, and should not be classed as a lot of hooey that now eminating from those who are playing to the gallery gods.

The people of the State of Minnesota have long recognized Governor Olson as a leader—a trail Blozer—a man who is doing things that is upsetting tbe entira economic structure which is beginning to open the eyes of other sections of this nation to the fact that the west is fearless and is producing men who are fostering and promoting ideals based upon sound theories that must of necessity be adopted if this nation is going to pull itself out of the present chaotic conditions.

GOVERNMENT INTERFERENCE

Union Advocate

Nothing is more pathetic than the antics of those discedited politicians of the past who now give vent to their wounded feelings by making war on President Roosevelt and his reconstruction program.

Former United States Senator James A. Reed is one of these disgruntled bellwethers of yesterday who can see nothing good in the President's efforts to bring order out of the industrial chsos he inherited on the 4th of March this year. The senator laments the fact that the federal government is meddling with private industry. He rails against governmental interference with private business in general, and scorns the fact that many of the federal employees are given authority over old and seasoned executives, i. e., seasoned in the ways of private enterprise.

Mr. Reed has overlooked a few important facts. He failed to take into considerntion that private interests had charge of the industrial state during the years 1930, 1931 and 1932. Their direction and seasoned advice resulted in an unemployed army of 3,216,000 in January of 1930. By August of that year unemployment increased to 4,101,000. By the first of December this number had increased to 5,541,000. One month later there were 7,160,000 jobless hammering the pavements in search of a job. A year later there were 10,197,000 idle workers and on Christmas day of that year the number had increased to 12,124,000. Private industry was in charge. There was no governmental interference with the slow starvation of an army three times greater than all tba American soldiers, sailors and marines recuited, enlisted or drafted for service in the world war. In March, 1933, this army had grown to 13,089,000.

This is the record of private initiative, rugged individualism or whatever term one might employ to designate private capital. This is the record of industrial bankruptcy established by those best minds who once directed the industriul and credit forces of the U. S. A.

Let Mr. Reed face the facts and answer them if ba can.

MELLON VS FARMERS

Pope County Tribune

A news dispatch from Washington n few days ago states that the national government has dismissed a suit against Andrew Mellon to recover $200,000,000.00 that Mellon refunded to steamship companies out of income taxes that they paid. Tbe suit, brought in the name of the government by David A. Olson of New York, charged the department officials had willfully allowed foreign ateamship componies to defraud the United States.

Some people may think thot the government is throwing away money in the relief work that they are doing in Pope County and other ploces. It is true that the money may not be spent as efficiently as it should be, but if the government officials, like Mellon, had done their duty to collect the taxes from the powerful interests in the past there would have been several times tha amount of government money and no one would miss it $220,000,000.00 is a lot of money when we stop to figure it out. It is practically two dollars for every man, woman and child in this country. On the per capita basis this would have allowed Pope County over $20,000. In fact, the amount tbat Mellon gave back to tbe steamship companies alone is a large faction of the sum that the government is giving in relief ever the entire nation, This particular suit of the government against Mellon is just a drop in the bucket of the amount of money that our government has been defrauded of. Men in high offices during the last ten year have used their position to defraud government in the most scandalous manner All the money lost in the acandals from Tea Pot Doma down would have been enough to pay our national debt.

If this country is going to arise out of tha depression it must mean that there must be a separation of graft from our national government. The country cannot climb out of the depression as long as a favorite few can usa the government for their own benefit. A farmer in Pope County will have to pay taxes even if he does not get his aeed back. Steamship companies escaped paying taxes on their profits.

The new administration in Washington brought many of thesa scandals to light and has made the privileged class pay their share of the cost of government. The new administration is the first one in Washington that has actually tried to get out among the people with relief The past administration poured money into the pockets of the favored few and expected that to save the nation. We believe President Roosevelt's idea of getting at the roots is far hetter.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

In winter when sessions of school take up so much of the daylight, it is often difficult to plan the time that children get enough out-of-door exercise. The importance of this exercise in the open air, cannot be overlooked if the youngsters are to keep well and strong during the months when their minds are constantly exercised. The balance of active physical motion is needed to offset the mental strain when the body is inactive.

Little folk are using their mental vigor to grasp the subjects in the progressive steps when they are in the schoolroom, and also when they are doing home work. They should cast aside all brainwork as such, and plunge into their physical work with equal zest. This physical activity probably takes the form of play, but the muscles and limbs are kept busily at work during it, if the play is sufficiently active to be beneficial. Also to reap the fullest benefits the play should be in the sunshine whenever the day is pleasant. If should come just after school.

A Happy Interim.

Children who take music lessons or pursue any outside studies should not be expected to come home and practice right after school, nor do any outside study or homework before they have a good period of playtime. Neither should they be expected to run errands unless they are of imperative need, not until they have an interim of care-free time. It may seem as if the errand being done out-of-doors and actively might supplant the activity of play in affording exercise. The very idiom "run on an errand" indicates its activity, but there lurks in this job a decided element of work. So let the youngster play for a while before running on the errand. Then, if it is possible, instill something of interest into the task.

There are many ways of ridding the errand of its irksome character. A penny will be an inducement. It may be for the child's bank or for him or her to spend before returning. It may be that mother promises to play some game with the child after the errand is done. Or the mother may say she has cooked a dish which the child is particularly fond of, just because she had to ask him to run the errand.

After the child's out-of-door exercise, be it what it may, it is wise to supply some light refreshment, an apple or some fruit, a glass of milk with a cooky, some crackers, etc., and possibly a nibble of candy. With the body in good form, and with appetite appeased, the homework, the practicing, etc., will be entered into with due preparation.

Talent in Children.

Schools have assistants whose work is to help students to follow their bent in studies to fit themselves to succeed in a chosen vocation. Unless the students realize their abilities, and are anxious to make the most of them the assistance given can avail but little. Parents often know best a child's abilities, or talents as fond parents are apt to call them, long before the child does. Parents who help their children to recognize what they have, in themselves, to work with promote the success of their offspring.

Adults frequently find themselves forced to earn money when they have had no special training. Then they must take mental stock of themselves to see what they have to work with. It is well to remember at such a time that they have something in which they excel. It may be in systemizing, in cookery, in management, in needlecraft, in preserving and pickling, in music, in art. Whatever it is, that is the thing to start with. It may be that humble jobs will have to be done along the lines of ability, but whatever fosters the powers one has, should not be looked down upon. Success comes with using the abilities one has.

Live Stock Ruling Helps St. Paul Sale

The decision just handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the so-called "Live Stock Transit Case," ICC 25123 and 25449, is of very great value to the South Saint Paul market. The interests of this market in these cases were handled by the St. Paul Stock Exchange and the St. Paul Union Stock Yards Co. Mr. V. P. Dolsn and L. V. Kube handled the submission of evidence in these cases for the above-named organizations as a hearing at Excelsior Springs, Mo., November, 1932.

The ICC upheld that the maintence by the various western trunk line railroads of less favorable transit arrangements in the mid-western live stock markets than those at country concentration points result in undue projudice to the mid-western markets and in undue preference to the concentration points. The Commission's decision is of great value to the South St. Paul market in that it upholds the position taken by the Stock Exchange and the Stock Yards Co. and others who testified at Excelsior Springs, that the liberal sale in transit arrangements prevailing at the concentration points were attracting live stock away from the St. Paul market. The conditions reacting against the South St. Paul market today are twofold: One with respect to cattle and sheep and the other with respect to slaughter hogs. Under the present rules prevailing at South St. Paul live stock shipped through this market on the thru rates cannot be sorted, consolidated, double-decked, or sold, any one of these conditions requiring the local rate in and out of the market. The rules governing movement through concentration points on cattle, hogs and sheep are that the livestock may be shipped thru these points at the thru rate to ultimate destination and sorted, consolidated, double-decked and sold without effecting the thru rates. As a result of this discriminatory situation the buyers were going to the country and placing orders thru these concentration points where they were permitted to get lower freight rates than would be possible at the terminal market. A great deal of the order buyers' demand on hogs has been divarted from the terminal market as well as large local packer orders because of these conditions. Under the decision just rendered by the Commission the railroads are required to remove the prejudice by having similar privileges at both South St. Paul and competing points.

Non-Party League Chief Scores Useless Work Performed Under CWA

North Dakota Will Ask for Five Million Dollars for Industries

A. C. Townley, organizer of the Farmers' Non-Patisan League which upset the political apple carts thruout the northwest in the period from 1916 to 1920 and left in its wake, the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, addressed an audience which filled the court room at the court house to capacity last Saturday evening. Speaking in the laconic, matter of fact, style which has made him famous thruout the United States as a platform man, he traced the trend of economic events the last 60 years. He told of the so-called panics that have swept this country and passed on while "good times", came back to bless us once more and showed why, in his mind the present depression is not passing as those that have preceeded it have done." It is still getting worse, so far as a permanent remedy is concerned," Mr. Townley said. "This thing will not be settled until the people understand the causes and the remedy." We want to understand why in a country where millions are continually hungry, the government must bribe the farmers to produce less. . . There will be no end until you, the people, know what's the matter and what's to be done about it. Shoveling snow from one ditch to the other solves no problems," Mr. Townley said.

Mayor and Former Officials Clash Over Unpaid Salaries

NEW BEER ORDINANCE ALLOWS SUNDAY SALES

Dog Situation Comes Back to Plague the New Council

A lively tilt between the mayor and former councilman Paul A. Harris and former City Attorney H. O. Berve featured the session of the city council on Tuesday evening. The rumpus got under way when Mr. Harris after having discussed a resolution passed by the League of Minnesota municipalities at their convention last summer asked if the mayor was present. The mayor who had been making himself inconspicuous behind the city clerk's grating came forward and Mr. Harris asked him why his paycheck for the last quarter of 1933 had not been signed so he could get his money. "If there is anything wrong I want to know what it is so I can correct it if it is in my power to correct it." Mr. Harris said.

"You'll get your money in time," the mayor retorted.

Harris: "I need that money, I hava served my term, the bill has been allowed and I want my money. When I accepted the office of alderman I dona so with the understanding that I would be paid. If I am not going to get paid I want to know why."

Mayor: "What's the matter with your job?"

Harris: "I still have my job, but I want you to understand that I have a family to support and the money is due me, I want it."

Mayor: "You'll get it when I get ready to sign it."

Berve: "If the council pleases, I have a communication to the council here in regard to this matter and I would like to know why the mayor has singled out four council men and myself to remain unpaid when all the other officials and employees of the city has been paid."

Mayor: "You'll get your salery in time."

Berve: "May I ask you a question Mr. Mayor? You signed your own paycheck did you not?"

Mayor: "Yes, I did."

Berve: "I thought so. You would not forget yourself. Gentlemen of the

C W A PAYROLL UP, $10,998.29; EMPLOYEES CUT

Work Will Terminate Feb. 15 Unless Funds Are Appropriated

Following a record payroll of $10,998.29 to 515 C.W.A. employees last week the N.R.S. office in this city received instructions from state headquarters to decrease men working on projects to their quota of 210 in this county.

This is the first step in gradual tapering of C.W.A. work to a terminating point by February 15, unless new funds are appropriated for continuance of this work. Working hours have been cut from 30 hours a week in all sections, to 15 hours in communities under 2500 popuation and 24 hours in towns or cities over 250 population. Wage scales stay the same except in the case of a team where the wage was reduced from a $1.00 per hour to 85 cents per hour.

Mony of the projects are nearing completion, county manager Howard Davidson stated, and include the library improvements, school repair jobs in districts 38, 57, and 37 and at the Goodridge school. Plastering in the new auditorium and the downstairs corridors has been finished.

Brushing jobs in the eastern part of the county have been abondoned because of the deep snow and gravel projects substituted to give Hickory and Riener townships their share of the administration's money. However these brushing jobs will be continued in the spring.

No new projects are being approved pending the out come of legislation appropriating funds to carry on this work.

Village of Sherburn Seeking Light on Light Rates Must do so by Candlelight

When the village of Sherburn, Minnesota set out to get light on power and light rates they had to do it with kerosene lamps, according to the Sherburn Advance-Standard, published by Scott Laird our former townsman. The village is served by the Interstate Power company and according to the Advance-Standard, lights do not always light and rates are not always low in towns served by private power companies. On Friday evening January 12 the citizens were to hold a meeting with power company officials in the office of the power company. The purpose was to seek light on the light situation, but an hour before the meeting the town was plunged into darkness and the seeking had to be done with kerosene lamps.

Sherburn pays eleven cents pe kilowatt hour for its current and the citizens had vowed that they were, and are, entitled to a two cents reduction in rates, but, "No reduction was offered residence or store users of electricity, except that rates for heating would be reduced from 8 cents per kilowatt to 4 cents per kilowatt, (Thief River Falls users are paying 3 and one half cents) but only one or two peopla in Sherburn use electricity for heating or cooking. The business men were assured that the company might grant a reduction in residence and store rates later on when the company could be in position to grant similar reductions to the other towns that it serves." But no-one knew when that would be. Not even the company's local manager. The businessmen are sceptical too, they say that the company has made similar statements in the past and the Sherburn folks are still waiting.

The village council met on the following Monday night to discuss the situation and this time altho Scott Laird doesn't say, it seems likely that there was "electric light" on the electric light subject. This time the company had a change of heart and decided that they could not reduce cooking and heating rates but they were feeling particularly magnanimous towards the resident users and offered the following new reduced rates; "ten cents for the first 50 kwh, 6 cents for the next 50 kwh and 2.5 cents per kwh for all in excess of 150 kwh." It seems that Sherburn folks, ungrateful wretches that they are even refused to accept this generous offer.

And so to the great consternation of people who must worry along with municipal light plants, all is not peace and harmony in privately served towns.

WILL SEEK NEW RELIEF FUNDS

Roosevelt To Ask Congress For $1,166,000,000 to Carry on Job Program.

Washington — President Roosevelt is ready to ask congress for an emergency appropriation of $1,166,000,000 to carry on the civil works administration, the civilian conservation corps, and direct federal relief. He is standing pat, however, on his plan to taper off the civil works program and wind it up in May. It is the President's hope that with the coming of summer 4,000,000 men now on the government's emergency payroll will be able to find normal outdoor work. Nevertheless, there is a growing movement in congress against this sudden conclusion of the civil works program and a strong effort is in prospect to continue it, at least in part, throughout the summer. The final decision probably depends upon business conditions prevailing in the spring. The President was represented as determined to resist all efforts to expand the budget above the limits announced in his messages to congress. He will employ about $360,000,000 of the emergency appropriation soon to be asked for carrying on the civil works administration from next month until May. He will propose a continuation of the civilian conservation corps for one year from the conclusion of its first year in April. This will involve an appropriation of $300,000,000.

Chicago—The shadow of death over the defendant, Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, brought an end to her trial in the fantastic Wynekoop murder mystery. Judge Joseph B. She must remain in the county jail until she recovers sufficient strength to again stand trial, or until death removes her from the jurisdiction of the court.

STATE HIGHWAY PARKWAY SYSTEM PLANNED FOR MINN.

Minnesota now has the legal machinery for designating a state parkway system, part of which may be formed by roads in Pennington county, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Roads connecting a trunk highway with a public park or recreational center outside the limits of boroughs, villages or cities are eligible for inclusion in the parkway system. Parkway roads can be picked by county boards, subject to the approval of the commissioner of highways and the commissioner of conservation.

When officially designated as a state parkway, a road becomes eligible to receive both state and county aid benefits, at the discretion of the local board of county commissioners. Parkways are the only roads which can be both a state aid and county aid highway, Mr. Elsberg explained. State aid roads receive the proceeds of the state 1-mill levy while county aid roads receive one-third of the state gasoline tax.

"If future grants of Federal funds for highways are made on the same basis used in the past year, parkways also will be eligible to receive federal aid," Commissioner Elsberg said, "In fact, it was the parkway policy of the U. S. Bureau of Roads which suggested the Minnesota parkway plan.

"We hope that eventually we will be able to show on our state highway maps a distinctive parkway system covering the whole state, and leading both Minnesotans and tourists to public recreational spots in the various counties.

"The county projects can be linked up by classifying certain state trunk highways as parkways. There are many miles of trunk routes in both the original state system and the recent additions which will primarily serve the public best as scenic pleasure drives. They should be developed as such, preserving natural beauty. A parkway system also would tend to seperate pleasure and commercial traffic to some extent and thus make for the safety and greater enjoyment of the public.

"If counties do not have public parks or recreational centers at the present time, this opportunity may encourage the donation of beauty spots for public use, or their acquirement by other means."

Laws authorizing the establishment of state aid parkways in the counties were enacted by the special session of the legislature. In generol, such roads will be subject to the same laws as state aid roads, but some special requirements and standards may be set up by the highway department.

The Minnesota Income Tax Act was passed by the 1933 legislature and was one of the acts asked for by Governor Olsen and sponsored by the Farmer-Labor group in lawmaking body. All proceeds of the tax will go into the state school fund and be distributed to the various school districts of the state, much in the same manner as the other school aid funds are being distributed. The Governor's plan for an offset to benefit farmers and homeowners which also passed, provides for a reduction in the taxable valuation of homes and homesteads so that whereas unplatted territory, (farms) were previously taxed at 33 1-3 per cent of its true value, under the new law all such parcels as are actual homesteads, not to exceed 80 acres, and not to exceed $4,000 in value, will be taxed in the future at 20 per cent of its value. Platted territory, (city homes) which were in the past taxed at 40 per cent of their full and true value will under the new act be taxed at 25 per cent of its value, up to $4,000 amounts over that being taxed as before at 40 per cent.

The new tax on incomes is expected to provide the funds which will be lost to the taxing units under the new valuation plan.

Single persons have $1,200 exempt under the new income tax law, and married persons have $2,000 exempt with an additional $250 for each dependent. According to directions for making the returns; Take your total personal income for 1933 (salareis, interest, rentsh, dividends). Subtract $1,200 if you are single, $2,000 if married; then subtract $250 for each additional dependent. Next, deduct the amount of contributions to Community Fund, church, charitable or similar organization; then subtract contributions to lodges and veterans' organizations; finally deduct dividends collected from bussiness operated in the state. If, after all that deducting there remains a balance out of the total tax return must be filed.

Next task is to determine if a tax must be paid on the net income. In little tables scattered all over the blank the taxpayer finds places to list the various deductions he may make from his net income in deciding on his taxes paid, interest paid, losses from sale of securities or property, losses from rentals, and "other ordinary and necessary expences."

Starting with taxes: Deductions may include the following:

Federol income tax paid.

Taxes on property, but not special assessments designed to increase value.

Personal property taxes.

Motor vehicle taxes.

Gasoline taxes if paid to the state the state's part must be segregated and proof must be furnished to show actual amounts.

The second deduction from net income is interest paid on mortgages, notes, and so on. Rent paid on a home cannot be deducted.

There are places on the return to list profits or losses from real estate, from stocks and bonds, and so on. Taxes, interest and donations must be listed in detail.

An individual cannot deduct ordinary living expenses in determining his tax, with one exception. He may subtract money paid for medical and hospital care as a result of illness or accidents. There is no specific place on the blank for the item but the commission advises listing it on line 20 of page two, and in scedule G. Proof will be required for medical deductions, according to Carl E. Bashe. Insurance payments for accident or illness will considered an offset to medical bills, he said.

Donations are deductable only for organizations operating in Minnesota. Dividends to be deducted must be only in the case of business conduction in the state. In the event of a corporation doing bussiness in several states, the taxpayer is expected to use his best judgement in estimating the amount of a dividend which might be charged to Minnesota earnings.

All that makes the taxpayer's task simply one of taking his total income less credits, then listing and totaling his allowable deductions and arriving at a "balance subject to tax." When he reaches that point he can, if he desires, indulge in some arithmetic figure out what the tax will be. The return contains a table for computing the tax; the rate varies according to the size of the taxable income.

PATROL COLLECTIONS SHOW 50,000 GAIN IN 1933 OVER 1932

The Minnesota highway patrol was instrumental in collecting $184,296 in license fees and fines in 1933, as compared to $134,528 in 1932, a gain of approximately $50,000, according to a highway department announcement. This increase came despite a decrease in fines from $56,498 in 1932 to $47 011 in 1933, or $9,486.

The increase in the total collected was due principally to close observation of trucks from other states and enforcement of laws requiring Minnesota license under certain conditions.

Courtesy tags brought increased co-operation between the driving public and the patrol in 1933, the report stated, thus explaining the decrease in the total amount of fines for various infractions of highway laws.

The Nine Foot Channel As a Burden Carrier

This is the second of a series of eight articles dealing with the nine foot Mississippi Channel now under construction.

The upper Mississippi river, with the nine-foot channel completed, is destined to carry more tonnage than any other section of the Mississippi system.

This is a broad statement, but not difficult to substantiate when an adequate picture of midwest and northwest resources is available. Army engineers, without a single political blemish on their long record and with many successful presidents state the deep channel would be economically profitoble.

Major R. A. Wheeler, district engineer at Rock Island, Ill., recently declared that no other river in the country can so readily justify the cost of its improvement.

A more diverse tonnage than that which is needed or produced in the upper valley can hardly be imagined. Of course, such tonnage means industry, decentralized industry, which economists agree is good for the country.

The Federal Barge Lines, operating on a nine too dependable six-foot channel, already have demonstrated their efficiency in handling a long list of commodities shipped in packages, bags, bales and cans, as well as stock iron and steel fabricated and finished steel parts, implements and machines Perhaps a brief survey of the bulk cargoes which the nine foot channel is best adopted to carry, would be liluluminating.

Because the river offers a direct route to the ocean, its value is most vital in the shipping of exported and imported commodities, but there are millions of tons of domestic cargoes available also. Here are some of the cargoes originating in the northwest and middlewest, which can be transported on the river, either to domestic or foreign markets: Coal, for the fuelless northwest; principal northbound cargo; saving at least 1$ a ton assured; 10,000,000 tons annually used in Minnesota alone.

Iron ore, principal southbound cargo, to fill barges which brings loads up the river. The midwest is the molting pot for steel, the meeting place for Minnesota ore, Illinois coal and local limestone. It is no further by rail from the Cyuna iron range to the river port of Minneapolis, than to the lake port of Duluth. While the river haul to the coal region is hundreds of miles shorter than the lake haul.

Sulphur, thousands of tons used annually in grain processing, plant alone much more in treating fertilizers. Rail freight haul from Texas, $7 a ton; all-water cost, $2 a ton.

Fertilizers, phosphates from Tennessee and Florida, which, like the sulphur deposities in Texas, can be loaded directly into barges. Minnesota used more than 15,000 tons and Wisconsin 45,000 tons of fertilizors last year and would use much more if transportation rates were cheaper.

Salt, huge quantities used in making caustic soda and hydrochloric acid; indespensable in thousands of factories, in addition to that used in feeding stock. It is loaded directly into barges in Louisiana, which state produces 530,009 tons a year.

Oyster shells, Minnesota uses thousands of tons of crushed shells as poultry feed. They can be loaded directly into barges in Louisiana.

Iron oxide, principal coloring ingredient of paints; 12,000,000 tons of it ready for the steamshovel in southern Minnesota and northern Iowa.

Grains, Minnesoto produced 19,500,000 bushels of wheat, 164,700,000 bu. of oats, 47,232,000 bu. of barley and 176,916,000 bu. of corn in 1932, which, altogether, amounted to 9,307,000 tons. Upwards of 1,000,000 tons of grains are shipped each year into the southeastern section of this country, and our exports of grain and grain products in 1932 totaled, 1,835,000 tons.

Annual exports of other commodities produced in the Mississippi valley include: hay, 5,319 tons; potatoes 3,180 tons; seeds, 10,234 tons; manufactured tobacco, 262,235 tons; wool, 2,137 tons; sugar, 52,577 tons; copper, 64,980 tons; iron ore, 488,000 tons: iron and steel semi-manufactured products, such as pigiron, ingots, bars and structural steel, 908,386 tons.

These exported products alone add up to 3,632,224 tons, which would make 303 barge tows of 12,000 each, or 5,858 average train loads.

Imports, by tons, to an annual total of 4,103,651, include the following: asphalt, 74,168; bauxite ore, 343,720; chalk, 83,000; chrome ore, 237,000; clays and pottery, 151,935; cocanut oil 162,500 copro, 229,000; crude nitrarte, 16,800; gypsum, 713, 440; hops, 538; lime and limestone, 21,700; magnnese ore, 277,760; phospbates, 78,400 potasb, 528,640; qnerbache, 55,000; salt, 33,500; sisal, 100,800; sodium and other nitrates, 921,760; tin, 74,000. It is not contended that all this tonnage could or should be carried on the river, but a great deal of it will with the nine-foot channel completed. Altogether these imports would fill 342 barge tows of 12,000 tons each, or 6,618 average freight trains.

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY

Congressman Paul John Kvale

The President's bill for revaluating the dollar and setting up the huge stabilization fund, passed this week by the House and slated for early action in the Senate, has been referred to by many members as the most important measure that has been before Congress in the present century. Whether it justifies that description or not, it is surely the greatest among the administration's so-called recovery measures.

All gold now passes into the United States treasury which therefore has been in monetary circulation or which has been used as reserves for money. Coins will be melted down and cast into bars, then revalued so that each dollar contains between fifty and sixty per cent of the gold law now specifies is shall contain. The treasurery itself will receive the profit of the transaction, as was explained in this column last week.

The chief opposition, constructive, will come from the silver group who demand a provision for coinage, and from the group who desire an amendment creating a federal bank with powers to coin and issue money and regulate its value. They point out that their plan is not inconsistent with the President's plan, that it will remove this all-importont power from the hands of private bankers and the Federal Reserve system, and that it will eventually mean the circulation of only one kind of money, under supervision that will guarantee closer devotion to the public interest.

Whether or not this central bank idea makes much progress in connection with the present measure, interest in it is rapidly increasing, and it will in turn be a major issue when the opportunity to consider it maturely is reached.

The bill, as stoted, also provides for the setting aside of two billion dollars out of the devaluation profits for the purchase and sale of gold, foreign exchange and government securities. This is similar to funds established by Great Britain and France through the use of which they regulated the value of their currency on foreign exchange, and through use of which they so successfully pegged our dollar at its high rate with the consequent commercial handicap to this nation.

It is the administration hope that by use of the fund in similar operations, our foreign exchange advantages will reappear, with the resultant recapture of foreign markets and with the wholesome effect at least upon those commodities of which we sell our surplus abroad. That school of thought also insists that the exchange rate in general governs the level of all commodity prices, but the writer has never been fully convinced of the justification for the belief.

This fund is also designed to be for buying and selling our federal bonds and securities, thereby maintaining their price at or near par. Clearly the administration is determined that if hostile banking groups and financial combinations attempt to discredit this inflationary movement by flooding the market with government securities in the hope of beating down their price, as was done with Liberty Bonds and repurchasing at the lower levels, this fund will be used to protect the federal credit and prevent such deflation and gambling with the exchange or with the dollar itself.

Consequently, those who have been demanding a controlled expantion of currency and credit may now rightfully feel that the vital step has been taken, ordened soon aftes the new law is in effect. It is rumored, however, that the large banking groups which always assist the Treasury in floating and underwriting its bond issues have demanded that there be no "printing press" money, under threat of refusing to cooperate in flotation of huge bond issue this spring.

Representatives of the northwest dairy industry have been active during the past week in assisting their members of the Senate and House to impress upon the Agricultural Department and the AAA the desperate plight of that economic group, and to speed formulation of an emergency relief program as well as of a long time remedial plan.

It is hoped that the administration can be persuaded to broaden its original plan for a $100,000,000 fund, obviously inadequate to do any real good. Through elimination of part of the surplus national herd by way of tuberiulosis eradication and also by transplanting a portion of the herd surplus to southern states which are not now in the maketable area for dairy goods, spokesmen for the dairy farmers hope that an appreciable beginning can be made, and that some federol funds can then be made available for the farmers who are not fortuantely located in the milk sheds which supply the larger cities.

All recognize that the markets for dairy products depend in large measure on the restoration of the national buying power, and that in the meantime only the most vigorous steps any appreciable results. But in the meantime the dairy situation, in company with the beef cattle industry, grows more acute, and difficulty continues in finding a workable solution.

Roosevelt To Ask Congress For $1,166,000,000 to Carry on Job Program.

Washington — President Roosevelt is ready to ask congress for an emergency appropriation of $1,166,000,000 to carry on the civil works administration, the civilian conservation corps, and direct federal relief. He is standing pat, however, on his plan to taper off the civil works program and wind it up in May. It is the President's hope that with the coming of summer 4,000,000 men now on the government's emergency payroll will be able to find normal outdoor work. Nevertheless, there is a growing movement in congress against this sudden conclusion of the civil works program and a strong effort is in prospect to continue it, at least in part, throughout the summer. The final decision probably depends upon business conditions prevailing in the spring. The President was represented as determined to resist all efforts to expand the budget above the limits announced in his message to congress. He will employ about $350,000,000 of the emergency appropriation soon to be asked for carrying on the civil works administration from next month until May. He will propose a continuation of the civilian conservation corps for one year from the conclusion of its first year in April. This will involve an appropriation of $300,000,000.

Chicago—The shadow of death over the defendant, Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, brought an end to her trial in the fantastic Wynekoop murder mystery. Judge Joseph B. David decided the danger of Dr. Alice slumping over in death at her counsel's table, a fate that threatened her at least twice in court, outweighed the demands of justice that she continue on trial. She must remain in the county jail until she recovers sufficient strength to again stand trial, or until death removes her from the jurisdiction of the court.

STATE HIGHWAY PARKWAY SYSTEM PLANNED FOR MINN.

Minnesota now has the legal machinery for designating a state parkway system, part of which may be formed by roads in Pennington county, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Roads connecting a trunk highway with a public park or recreational center outside the limits of boroughs, villages or cities are eligible for inclusion in the parkway system. Parkway roads can be picked by county boards, subject to the approval of the commissioner of highways and the commissioner of conservation.

When officially designated as a state parkway, a road becomes eligible to receive both state and county aid benefits, at the discretion of the local board of county commissioners. Parkways are the only roads which can be both a state aid and county aid highway, Mr. Elsberg explained. State aid roads receive the proceeds of the state 1-mill levy while county aid roads receive one-third of the state gasoline tax.

"If future grants of Federal funds for highways are made on the same basis used in the past year, parkways also will be eligible to receive federal aid," Commissioner Elsberg said, "In fact, it was the parkway policy of the U. S. Bureau of Roads which suggested the Minnesota parkway plan.

"We hope that eventually we will be able to show on our state highway maps a distinctive parkway system covering the whole state, and leading both Minnesotans and tourists to public recreational spots in the various counties.

"The county projects can be linked up by classifying certain state trunk highways as parkways. There are many miles of trunk routes in both the original state system and the recent additions which will primarily serve the public best as scenic pleasure drives. They should be developed as such, preserving natural beauty. A parkway system also would tend to separate pleasure and commercial traffic to some extent and thus make for the safety and greater enjoyment of the public.

"If counties do not have public parks or recreational centers at the present time, this opportunity may encourage the donation of beauty spots for public use, or their acquirement by other means."

Laws authorizing the establishment of state aid parkways in the counties were enacted by the special session of the legislature. In general, such roads will be subject to the same laws as state aid roads, but some special requirements and standards may be set up by the highway department.

Morris Engelstad, Thief River Falls ranked second in the junior class. Pennington county students making the high scholarship roll include Irene Holst, Laura Hansen, and Chester Larson, Thief River Falls; and Clarence Weckworth and Ray Carlson of Hazel.

STATE INCOME MUST BE IN BY MARCH 15

Income tax returns under the new state income tax law must be made on or before March 15 according to the terms of the law. The Minnesota Income Tax Act was passed by the 1933 legislature and was one of the acts asked for by Governor Olsen and sponsored by the Farmer-Labor group in lawmaking body. Annual exports of other commodities produced in the Mississippi valley include: hay, 5,319 tons; potatoes 3,180 tons; seeds, 10,234 tons; manufactured tobacco, 262,235 tons; wool, 2,137 tons; sugar, 52,577 tons; copper, 64,980 tons; iron ore, 488,000 tons: iron and steel semi-manufactured products, such as pigiron, ingots, bars and structural steel, 908,386 tons.

These exported products alone add up to 3,632,224 tons, which would make 303 barge tows of 12,000 each, or 5,858 average train loads.

Imports, by tons, to an annual total of 4,103,661, include the following: asphalt, 74,168; bauxite ore, 343,720; chalk, 83,000; chrome ore, 237,000; clays and pottery, 151,935; cocoanut oil 162,500 copra, 229,000; crude nitrarte, 16,800; gypsum, 713, 440; hops, 538; lime and limestone, 21,700; maganese ore, 277,760; phosphates, 78,400 potash, 528,640; querbache, 55,000; salt, 33,500; sisal, 100,800; sodium and other nitrates, 921,760; tin, 74,000. It is not contended that all this tonnage could or should be carried on the river, but a great deal of it will with the nine-foot channel completed. Altogether these imports would fill 342 barge tows of 12,000 tons each, or 6,618 average freight trains.

BY

Congressman Paul John Kvale

The President's bill for revaluating the dollar and setting up the huge stabilization fund, passed this week by the House and slated for early action in the Senate, has been referred to by many members as the most important measure that has been before Congress in the present century. Whether it justifies that description or not, it is surely the greatest among the administration's so-called recovery measures.

All gold now passes into the United States treasury which therefore has been in monetary circulation or which has been used as reserves for money. Coins will be melted down and cast into bars, then revalued so that each dollar contains between fifty and sixty per cent of the gold law now specifies is shall contain. The treasurery itself will receive the profit of the transaction, as was explained in this column last week.

The chief opposition, constructive, will come from the silver group who demand a provision for coinage, and from the group who desire an amendment creating a federal bank with powers to coin and issue money and regulate its value. They point out that their plan is not inconsistent with the President's plan, that it will remove this all-important power from the hands of private bankers and the Federal Reserve system, and that it will eventually mean the circulation of only one kind of money, under supervision that will guarantee closer devotion to the public interest.

Whether or not this central bank idea makes much progress in connection with the present measure, interest in it is rapidly increasing, and it will in turn be a major issue when the opportunity to consider it maturely is reached.

The bill, as stated, also provides for the setting aside of two billion dollars out of the devaluation profits for the purchase and sale of gold, foreign exchange and government securities. This is similar to funds established by Great Britain and France through the use of which they regulated the value of their currency on foreign exchange, and through use of which they so successfully pegged our dollar at its high rate with the consequent commercial handicap to this nation.

It is the administration hope that by use of the fund in similar operations, our foreign exchange advantages will reappear, with the resultant recapture of foreign markets and with the wholesome effect at least upon those commodities of which we sell our surplus abroad. That school of thought also insists that the exchange rate in general governs the level of all commodity prices, but the writer has never been fully convinced of the justification for the belief.

This fund is also designed to be for buying and selling our federal bonds and securities, thereby maintaining their price at or near par. Clearly the administration is determined that if hostile banking groups and financial combinations attempt to discredit this inflationary movement by flooding the market with government securities in the hope of beating down their price, as was done with Liberty Bonds and repurchasing at the lower levels, this fund will be used to protect the federal credit and prevent such deflation and gambling with the exchange or with the dollar itself.

Consequently, those who have been demanding a controlled expantion of currency and credit may now rightfully feel that the vital step has been taken, ordered soon aftes the new law is in effect. It is rumored, however, that the large banking groups which always assist the Treasury in floating and underwriting its bond issues have demanded that there be no "printing press" money, under threat of refusing to cooperate in flotation of huge bond issue this spring.

Representatives of the northwest dairy industry have been active during the past week in assisting their members of the Senate and House to impress upon the Agricultural Department and the AAA the desperate plight of that economic group, and to speed formulation of an emergency relief program as well as of a long time remedial plan.

It is hoped that the administration can be persuaded to broaden its original plan for a $100,000,000 fund, obviously inadequate to do any real good. Through elimination of part of the surplus national herd by way of tuberculosis eradication and also by transplanting a portion of the herd surplus to southern states which are not now in the marketable area for dairy goods, spokesmen for the dairy farmers hope that an appreciable beginning can be made, and that some federal funds can then be made available for the farmers who are not fortunately located in the milk sheds which supply the larger cities.

All recognize that the markets for dairy products depend in large measure on the restoration of the national buying power, and that in the meantime only the most vigorous steps any appreciable results. But in the meantime the dairy situation, in company with the beef cattle industry, grows more acute, and difficulty continues in finding a workable solution.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1879."

WE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW——

While we are inclined to be charitable and take everything as being done with the very best of intentions, we nevertheless feel constrained to call attention to some things that should be borne in mind by public officials and also to ask some questions to which we feel the taxpayers of Thief River Falls are entitled to an answer.

To begin with we would like to call attention to the fact that the former council called for bids on the city official printing last year in the same manner as the present council has done. We also want to point out that altho the former council had no reason to waste any love on our competitors, and quite openly voiced their preference for the Forum they nevertheless awarded the official printing to the lowest bidder, as of course, they should do under the spirit of the law, in spite of the fact that it meant awarding the contract to our compeditor. They did not allow their politics to get the better of their judgment. They represented ALL the people and the taxpayers first.

The second thing we want to call attention to is that the administration of the Water and Light department is the business of the city council thru its water and light committee. The mayor has no authority to hire, nor fire men. No more so than any private citizen and that when Mayor Tungseth hired Viebahn to make a survey of the plant last summer without the authority of the council he was as clearly outside of his jurisdiction as if the act had been done by the writer or any other private citizen. The former council was not only justified in refusing to pay his bill for services, but could do nothing else than refuse under the circumstances. The same would apply to the expense bill covering trips to St. Paul which the mayor submitted to the council for approval. The council had not authorized the trips. The mayor had not consulted with the council in regard to them. Certainly the council can not be expected to approve payment of expenses for the mayor to go galivanting promiscuously about the country at the taxpayers expense.

Third; the old council met on the second of January for only the purpose. That purpose was to clean up the accumulated and unfinished business of their term and allow such bills which have been authorized and should be paid. When the new council took office the slate was clean.

Now the question we would like to have answered are the following:

Was the official printing let to the Times to pay a political debt?

Does the council know they have violated, if not the letter, then the spirit of the law in awarding the printing to the highest bidder?

Does the council know that by such procedure they invite corruption and collusion among contractors and discourage honest bidding?

How does it come about that Mr. Viebahn's bill grew from $80 to 442.70 in the short time that it took the old councilmen to leave their seats and the new members to assume them?

Are we correct in concluding that in hiring Mr. Viebahn as city engineer, they have added to the payroll of the city the full amount of his salary, $175.00 per month?

Is the paychecks of the four former councilmen and the city attorney who remain unpaid for their services being withheld to offset some of these unjustified extra expenses that the new administration is piling on the city?

Is your record to date a criterion of the business administration that can expect for the next two years?

———O———

WHAT IS THIS NRA ANYWAY?

When the National Industrial Re-Construction Act was passed we were told that it is for the purpose of stabilizing industry; put more men to work; raise the rate of wages; shorten the hours of labor; elimate the Sweat Shop; abolish child labor and put an end to unfair compition. That it has accomplished some of these things there can be no argument about. If we are to believe what we are told, it has elimnated the sweatshop and abolished child labor, for which we should all give it proper credit. There is reason to believe too that at least in some of the industries it has placed more men in jobs and raised the hour rate of pay. When it comes to the elimination of unfair practices however, it is less potent and there is every reason to believe that it has given to the established business a club with which they can successfully keep out competition. This is the practice which Senators Nye and Borah are objecting to, and their criticism should not be waved aside as the blattings of obstructionists. General Johnson's attack on those who see shortcomings in the NRA as being "political Tom-Tom beaters" will not correct the evils which have been allowed to creep into the codes and we quite agree with Senator Nye when he says:

> "Nero may rant and roar, but all the browbeating he may resort to will not destroy, tho it may delay, knowledge of what NRA is doing to destroy small business and unnecessarily furthur burden the consumer all to the end that the 'plunderbund' may enjoy larger monopoly and maintain profits of fictitious capitalization."

Here in Thief River Falls we have been treated to the sight of two established dealers setting themselves up as a cangaroo court to threaten and browbeat other men from entering into the only business which they know and which they have been engaged in for years, on the claim that it would be violation of the NRA code. When the men in question refused to abide by the decision of the self-constituted court and took their case to the district NRA board of their industry they again found that the two local dealers, plus other dealers in the same line from other cities constituted their tribunal. They entered along with their request for a certificate of public necessity, a paper signed by over 200 Thief River Falls citizens petitioning the board that the permit be granted. This petition was waved aside as being of no weight because the signatures had been solicited.

Which all brings us to the point at issue; does the NRA codes mean that those who desire entering business must first get permission from established business to launch ther venture? If that is the case how will it ever be possible for anyone to start in business except out in the wilderness so far removed from the haunts of men that established business can not serve it? The idea is incongruoue and inconceivable. Under such construction of the codes, no one could start a gasoline station because those already operating such stations would certainly feel that they fill the need for such service in the community and there is no "public necessity." The same would of course apply to grocery stores, peanut stands and every other enterprise already established in the ordinary communities.

We are quite willing to admit that the business in question is well served at present. We also admit that industry should be regulated to avoid overcrowding. But, if industry is to be so regulated then it must first become cooperatively operated, not for private profit but for community service. Otherwise there can be no protection for the consumers. And if such an arrangement is made there must also be provisions to absorb those who are left on the outside. For under our present economic set-up the average man must work if he is to live, we can not wave him off the earth with NRA codes.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

Farmer-Labor Leader

Let's suppose that you live in Chicago. You are physically run down. you go to your doctor. Rather soberly he says you must move to a warmer climate. Arizona. Your friends are concerned. So are you.

You must make a change. The Santa Fe system will carry you from Chicago to Arizona. And, though it is wholly beside the point, the Pennsylvania system will carry you from Chicago to New York.

An agent of the Pennsylvania calls on you. He is pleasant. Persuasive! His road has double track all the way and four tracks part of the way. If you allow yourself to be carried by his system you'll see wonderful cities and points of historic interest. Trains are speedier, dining car service unexcelled.

Also, and here he glows eloquent, the Pennsylvania system is engaged in a big program of patching its bridges, removing an occasional decayaed cross tie and in smoothing out its roadbed. A number of men are employed at made work. You'll see these men working, and be glad.

Yet the fact remains that you'll NEVER reach Arizona via the Pennsylvania system. It leads in the opposite direction. You are old enough to know it. Therefore, if you land with your cough on Manhattan island in the midst of a lashing blizzard from the icy Atlantic you should blame no one but yourself.

And that's the answer to the sly propaganda that the present trend "may" lead to a Cooperative Commonwealth. That is not the intent. The effort is to stabilize business—for private profit. It is a patching up of the old regime. And a Cooperative Commonwealth can never be reached via the capitalist system.

The road to social justice leads in the opposite direction. Along the path laid down in the declaration of principals of the Farmer-Labor association of Minnesota. As a nation we shall take one road or the other. You, personally, can influence the direction. What goal for you? Fascism, the rule of Big Business, or a Cooperative Commonwealth, the rule of the people. Which? Where do we go from here?

IF IT DOESN'T WORK, WHAT?

St. Paul Daily News

Startling is the report of Frank M. Rarig, Jr., executive secretary of the Minnesota CWA committee.

Mr. Rarig revealed Thursday that for the week ending Jan. 11 the government is spending at the rate of $1,600,000 to provide jobs for 86,000 men and women. He expects that this total will go to 100,000 jobs this week.

This is just the outlay for Minnesota, Multiply it by 48, say, to get some idea of the extent to which Uncle Sam is spending these days to prime the industrial pump.

If this priming does not work, it is quite likely to be continued as a permanent necessity—or at least until such time as our entire industrial and economic system can be made over. At least it is certain that people who are being aided in this way are not going to submit tamely to being thrown again into the job line, or going back to the old system of relief handouts.

It is obvious that we are on our way to a new setup—unless by some miracle business starts up again and stays up.

THE POST'S THIRD PARTY.

The Challenge (Chicago).

Sam Blythe in the Saturday Evening Post, is calling for a new third party to represent the middle class in politics now that "anyone who believes in sane progress," can no longer belong to the Republican Party.

The middle class he variously defines as anyone who has a stake in the country—a bond or two, a few shares in any enterprise, a large capital or large investment. Also as the 10 million out of the 120 million, who own stocks and bonds. As he specifically puts farmers and organized labor in an opposing class, what Mr. Blythe means by the middle class is the "House of Have."

This class has had control of both parties since the end of Andrew Jackson's administration. A great American historian has remarked that one of the greatest ironies of American history is the custodianship of democracy by the middle class, who, while erecting their system of tariffs and subsides and legislating from the bench, have denounced all other class programs as disloyal, seditious and unpatriotic.

BUYING LEGISLATION BY CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

St. Louis County Independent.

The practice of corporation officials of resorting to indefensible methods to secure the election of state officers who in turn will favor legislation for the financial benefit of the corporations, is revealed in the Senate investigation of alleged violation of Federal laws in the election of United States Senator John H. Overton of Louisiana.

According to press reports of the inquiry, S. D. Hunter of Sheveport, a gas and oil well capitalist, opposed to the election of Overton, admitted on the witness stand that he contributed $75,000 to the campaign fund of Dudley LeBlanc, one of the candidates for governor, because LeBlanc had agreed if elected, to amend the "severance tax" which was a financial burden to Hunter's oil and gas interests.

Hunter also admitted that the International Gas Products Co., of which he was a large stockholder had been fined $6,000 for "stealing gas" by a process known as "meter-jumping."

Hunter claimed he knew nothing about the gas stealing and experienced a "shock" when he heard of it. He also said the company demanded that the executive employes who worked the meter trick plead guilty personally and pay a fine. Of course the layman is inclined to draw the conclusion that no junior executive would resort to "meter-jumping" for the benefit of the corporation which employs him without a suggestion along that line from higher officials.

Evidently Lousiana needs more stringent codes against corrupt political practices as well as higher standards of business practices by corruption officials.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

LAW HAS BEEN IN ENEMY HANDS

Non-enforcement is the cause of prohibition being taken from the Constitution, and who is to blame for this non-inforcement? The political party in power and each of the major parties has been in power and each has betrayed its trust. All great reforms have been accomplishtd by some party and so must be. The Prohibition party was born for the purpose of ending the beverage liquor traffic and it will do it. Like all other questions it has its tides and this is one of its ebbs and the flood will surely return again. Both the Republican and Democratic parties re pudiated prohibition in their 1932 platforms. They are through with prohibition and prohibitionists should be through with them. Of the many dry and semi-dry organizations only the Prohibition party offers a way out. Non-partisanism has failed. You are wet or you are dry only as you vote.

Under a dry administration the dry cause is safe without the 18th amendment, and under a wet administration it is not safe with many amendments. The U. S. Supreme Court has said "No one has the inherent right to sell liquor" then pray tell where do they get the right? Only as it is given to them by those who are in power. Recognizing the futility of depending on others the National Prohibition party has put on a program of rejuvenating the party and are putting on strong committees in the several states which have been dormanant for some time past.

In the Rostrum

Dear Editor:

We are wondering if the people of Thief River Falls, and of the state and nation in general realize some of of the things that are being pulled off under the Democratic Law they call the NRA.

If there ever was a time of trusts and combinations it is right now. Certain lines of business by organization adopting and using so called laws or codes for their inuustry or business are trying to keep others from going into their lines of business under threat of fine or imprisonment.

We have lived here in the city for many years, and as most people know we have been engaged in the ice business. We are nothing but working people, and last fall the company that we were with sold out. We have been trying to start up in the ice business for ourselves this winter so as to keep ouselves employed and earn our own living.

Now we are prevented from going into the ice business by the Ice Code Administration, under the NRA, on the ground that we must first secure a certificate of public necessary and convenience.

A few days ago we were asked to attend a hearing at East Grand Forks to determine whether we should be permitted to go into business here in Thief River Falls. We found the hearing pretty much controlled by the ice deales, who naturally do not want to have anyone else go into their line of business. The whole idea with the ice code and administration seems to be to keep others from starting up in the ice business.

It looks to us as if the NRA and the Ice Code is being used to play favorities, and to keep others out of business, and to protect those who are already in business in each town from competition.

All we can say right now is that if it has got to the point here in the United States that a working man must get permission or licence to go into a business like the ice business and earn his own living, then it is time that we have a change in the law and in the ice and other NRA codes. All that we wish to do right now is to call attention to what is being done under the NRA codes. We do not believe it has ever before in the history of our country happened that a working man had to get a license or permit before he could go into honest work or business and earn his own living.

Yours very truly

THE INTENT AND PURPOSE OF CO-OPERATIVES

By Paul A. Harris

The following is a paper read by Paul A. Harris at the annual meeting of the Peoples' Co-operative Store incorporated, of this city, last Tuesday evening.

Most co-operatives in America today are of two classes the, producer distributor class as represented by our cooperative creameries, and consumer distributor class as represented by our cooperative stores. The creameries are concerning themselves mostly with moving food from the farm thru the factory to a wholesaler. The stores are concerning themselves chiefly with moving produce from the factory or wholesaler to the consumer.

The creameries are trying to save money for the producer by getting his produce to the markets without someone making a profit, (when I say profit I do not mean wages for any labor preformed but I do mean profit to someone simply because he owns the tools used in production or is able to control the market). Cooperative stores are trying to move produce from factory and wholesaler to consumer with profit, (the word profit used here in the same manner as before). They are trying to give the one who does the work of the world a larger share of the wealth he produces. This is indeed a laudable purpose and has succeeded to some extent, and been encouraged by the capitalist class in order to keep a portion of the workers satisfied and hoping that they may someday perfect their organization so as to give only those who work a share in the products of labor. While this is being done they, the capitalists, are reaping a great harvest, not caring much about what happens in the future, sneering at and Boob Boobing those who have five year plans and things similar.

Co-operatives must expand into all lines of industry so that produse is handled from producer to consumer entirely by cooperatives. Cooperative producers should never sell their products below cost of production, but under the present arrangement they are often compelled to do so because of keen competion of private individnals and corporations who hire men to do their work at less than a living wage. They should endenvor to establish a price for their produce that will give their labor a fair wage, but not try and make the price all they possibly can, for if they do this they will surely reduce consumption. Co-operative buyers should not be particularly interested in how cheap they can buy but first in wages and condition of labor employed in production of articles purchased, because they are consumers and must have the power to consume, which they can only get by an adequate wage. Next they should be interested in having their purchases produced by cooperatives wherever possible. Next in that they get good service. They should be particular in having goods produced by cooperatives, as this is their only guarantee that they produced without profit and at fair wages.

I believe our community should have a cooperative clothing factory, packing plant, flour mill, knitting mill and perhaps several other factories. Places where cotton is produced should have textile mills machinery iron and coal are plentiful machinery factories. The working class must take it upon themselves to establish these things, it has been left all to long to the wealthy class, who are not interested so much in establishing permanent and lasting prosperity, because they can endure several years of depression without individual suffering. Capitalists go into business to elimate profit, and any profit made by them should be divided among the patrons in patronage dividends on the Rochdale plan.

It is our business as co-operators to increase the scope of cooperative activities.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

The Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium Act enacted by the 1933 legislature has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court's decision in this case is not merely important because of sustaining this particular state law, but also because of the precedent it sets as to the court's in later cases. Few lawyers are appreciative of the decision's importance. In fact, it may be douted whether even the majority of lawyers realize to the fullest extent what the decision means.

22 States Effected

This is the first decision rendered during the recent depression involving the validity of emergency legislation. Should the Supreme Court have declared the Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium Law unconstitutional, similar emergency legislation in twenty-one other states would also have been invalidated. Many of the principles involved to uphold the constitutionality of the Minnesota law will have to be invoked to uphold the National Recovery Act. If the Supreme Court had found the Minnesota law unconstitutional it is difficult to see how it could sustain the National Recovery Act.

Olson, Peterson Pleased

The decision is particularly gratifying to Governor Floyd B. Olson and to Attorney General Harry H. Peterson. The Governor recommended legislation of this sort in his message to the legislature in 1933. The bill for the act was drawn in the office of attorney General Peterson and was primarily the work of Assistant Attorneys General Matthias N. Orfield and Roy C. Frank.

It is worthy of note in this connection that Attorney General H. H. Peterson was the only Attorney General in the United States to appear in the action before the court defending the law. In no other state as far as I know has the Attorney General appeared in defence of similar legislation.

Immediately following the decision of the Suprtme Court in the mortgage moratorium case, the court handed down another decision sustaining the contention of Minnesota's Farmer-Labor Attorney Generol.

Alabama vs Minnesota

In 1929 Congress passed an act providing that goods manufactured or produced by convicts, when shipped to another state, should become subject to the laws of such state. Acting under this law the legislature of Minnesota passed a law at the 1929 session requiring that all prison made goods, whether made in the Minnesota prison or shipped in from the prisons of other states should be marked in such a way as to indicate that they are prison made goods. Eighteen other states passed laws of a similar or more drastic character. Early in 1933 the State of Alabama, believing that these laws might interfere with the sale of its prison made goods, asked leave of the court to bring action restraining these nineteen states from enforcing their laws imposing conditions on the sale of prison made goods.

The application of the State of Alabama was heard before the Supreme Court of the United States on Tuesday, January 9. Attorney General Harry H. Peterson filed the state's brief in this matter and appeared for the state at this hearing. After the hearing the State of Alabama dismissed its action as to Minnesota,

This outcome of the case will not in any way interfere with the production and sale by the state prison of twine and farm machinery to the farmers of the state.

MAYOR AND FORMER OFFICIALS CLASH AT COUNCIL MEETING

council, this is an obligation of the city and I would like to know what you intend to do about it."

Alderman McFarland: "It is none of our business. It's between you fellows and the mayor."

Mayor: "May I ask you a question Mr. Berve?"

Berve: "Yes."

Mayor: "You held up my expense check didn't you?"

Berve: "If you refer to this bill of Mr. Viebahn—"

Mayor, (hastily) "No, no, I mean my expense check, that the council refused to allow."

Berve: "I don't know anything about your expense check. None has been brought officially to my attention. I have nothing to do about it. If you made trips unauthorized by the council you could not expect them to allow it. The council has something to say about the spending of the city's money. Gentlemen of the council, I want to know what you intend to do about it. You surely don't want the former officials of the city to have to sue to get their salaries?"

Jung: "What do you thing of it Mr. Quale?"

City Attorney: "It's all foolishness. The money should be paid. Get this thing out of your system. The election is over. Let's forget about it."

And so there you are, the thing is still hanging fire. The former councilmen and city attorney assert that they will file suit against the city unless the warrants are signed within a reasonable time.

Opening of bids for the official printing for the coming year revealed the Times bidding at 35 cents per folio for straight matter; 15 cents additional on tabular matter and 20 cents per folio for subsequent insertions. The Forum bid was the same as that upon which it was granted the county printing; 25 cents per folio for straight matter; 9 cents additional for tabular matter and 15 cents per folio for subsequent insertions. W. E. Dahlquist addressing the council on behalf of the Times stressed the circulation of the Times and the taxes they pay. R. M. Aalbu replying on behalf of the Forum stated that Mr. Dahlquist and himself are in the same class. Neither one are on the tax list.

No discussion was indulged in by the council, who proceeded to ballot immediately, resulting in one vote for the Forum and four for the Times. P. O. Myhrom being absent.

The famous dog situation was thrown into the ring again when C. Johnson appeared on behalf of himself and others requesting the council to appoint a committee to investigate the matter. The councilmen were reluctant about taking the matter into consideration and after some wrangling Alderman McFarland moved that City Attorney, Theo. Quale should make an investigation and report back to the council. The motion was seconded and carried.

A comunication from Dr. P. L. Vistaunet protesting against the damaging of the trees on his boulevard by the digging of the trenches close to the trunks of the trees was read. City Engineer Viebahn was questioned about the matter, and asserted that the trees are within the street area and that there is not enough room on the boulevard to dig the trenches farther away from the trees. He was cautioned by the city attorney against damaging property and instructed to see to it that all trenches are properly protected, that there shall be no accidents to pedestrians or cars.

A new beer ordinance was introduced and given its first reading. It repeals the old ordinance and substitutes a shorter instrument allowing sale of beer from six o'clock in the morning until one o'clock at night. Sunday sales are allowed between the hours of one p.m., and ten p.m. "On-Sale" licenses are granted to "persons, firms, partnerships or corporations operating restaurants, hotels, drug stores or bona fide clubs as defined" in the Minnesota liquor act. "Off Sale" licenses are granted only to persons, who have been residents of, and taxpayers within the city" for a period of twelve months.

Meeting again last night, the council discussed four sites for a Class 'A' airport to be located west of the city. This proposed airport consists of 160 acres with an eight point run-way and is to be a base for regular air service.

The Independent Basket Ball team was given the privilege of using the new auditorium for the balance of the season at a charge of $25. The complaint of Montgomery Ward and Co. that their tax assessment and valuation of property in this city is too large, was laid over until the next meeting for investigation.

T. A. Sullivan, president of the Red River Development Association, was allowed $110 for expenses on his trip to Washington D. C. in the interests of the proposed project.

All beer and soft drink licenses were renewed and the application of Mable Lappegaard for a soft drink license was refused.

Morris Bye, representing the high school, district 18, was granted the use of the auditorium for school activities until June 1 for $125.

The basket ball floor markings were ordered put on after the floor had been surfaced so they may be removed, and arrangements were completed for installation of baskets.

Ray R. Gauger was selected and will be authorized to draw up stage finishings and equipment. A resolution was passed naming the Union State Bank as depository for the city's funds.

The Council adjourned to Friday night, when the bids on seats for the new auditorium will be opened.

TOWNLEY SPERKS AT COURT HOUSE SAT.

man on the bridge who traded one pig for two suits and one suit for two pigs, he laid the cause of the depression at the door of the "price fixers." "The price fixers," he said "are the owners of the tools of production, the factories, railroads and means of intercourse, that are by virtue of a monoply able to fix the price the people must pay for everything they buy and the price to the producers for everything that they must sell." Referring to the price of harvesters as an example, he said, "Forty years ago you paid one hundred dollars or less for a binder and at that time it cost forty to fifty dollars in labor to made it. Today due to the labor saving machinery it costs less than half as much to make the binder but you pay $240 for it. This spread between cost of production and the cost to the purchaser has been fixed by "the man on the bridge," he said.

Speaking of the passing of other depressions he asserted that they passed because there were new empires to be developed, new railroads to be built, new wildernesses to be conquered. "That time has passed" he said, "We have reached the Pacific ocean, and nobody wants a mortgage on that. Stocks, bonds and farm mortgages are worthless today because they can no longer pay interest, and government bonds are selling good because the government is still paying interest, he said.

"It's a wonderful country," he continued, "but it don't belong to you. 300 years ago it belonged to the Indians. 60 years ago it belonged to your Grandpa and to day it belongs to Wall Street."

Launching into what he believes to be the remedy for the depression, he told of the meeting recently in Bismarck, N. D. where the people of that state decided to launch a program of state industries and to request that the United States government finance it thru CWA funds. The program embraces packing plants, woolen mills, flour mills and other factories for the utilization of raw materials produced in the Northwest. He told of the trip to Washington made by himself, Governor Langer and other leaders of North Dakota and their reception there. "We had no trouble getting a hearing," he said, "the president and other officials of the administration expressed themselves as fully aware of the need and gave us every reason to believe that they will support the plan. We were told to go home and prepare the plans and the application." These things are being done at the present time, Mr. Townley stated and a large delegation is getting ready to go to Washington about the 8-10 of February to lay them before the administration. Two delegates from each county in North Dakota will make the trip, he said and his purpose in being here is to organize Minnesota so that it sends two delegates from each county along also. The program is for the industrial development of the entire Northwest he said and Minnesota and other northwestern states will benefit as well as North Dakota. His address was received with enthusiasm and many questions about the plan was asked and answered after the talk was completed.

R. M. Aalbu of this city was delegated by Mr. Townley to convene a special meeting this week to chose the delegates for this county and lay the plans for sending them to Washington with the North Dakota-Minnesota caravan. Mr. Aalbu has sent out a call to representative progressives in every township of the county for a meeting at the court rooms this Friday evening when the organization will be perfected and the delegates chosen.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOL. 2 NO. 44 OFFICIAL PAPER OF PENNINGTON COUNTY THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1934

ADJUSTMENT OF FARM DEBTS IS DISCUSSED WED

Redistribution of All National Income Necessary; A. C. Hanna

One of eight meetings held this week in Minnesota for the adjustment of debts so the farmers in this community and other communities will be eligible for Federal Land Loans was held Wednesday at the court house in this city. It was a conference of the governor's conciliation committee and similar committees from surrounding counties with the object of clearing the way for fuller benefits of Federal Land Bank funds approved for loans, but which have not reached the farmer because in thousands of cases the farmer is already so heavily burdened with debts that he can not present proper securities.

Speaking at the meeting were: T. H. Arens, conservator of the department of rural credit, A. C. Hanna of the Farm Credit administration at Washington, and M. D. Avery of the Federal Land Bank in St. Paul.

The Federal Bank's stand permits as large a loan as the security will permit. However this is often not enough to liqidate the Farmer's debts in which case no loan will be made unless all debts are cut to a point where the loan will clear him and leave one fourth equity in his farm. With less, it is doubtful if a farmer could clear himself and in that case the loan would be of no good to him.

In cases where the farmer is so heavily in debt that he cannot get a loan, he will be given a hearing before the county concidiation committee and every effort will be made to help him.

Mr. Hanna outlined the decline of farm prosperity since 1920. He said that the farmer had been living on his capital rather than his income and added that redistribution of the national income along with refinancing is necessary to solve the problem.

Harry Robinson Home From Service With Asiatic Fleet; Tells of China

Harry Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Robinson of this city, and Yeoman attached to the Squadron Commander's office with the Asiatic fleet while it was on patrol duty during the China-Jap war has returned home after three years and tells some interesting tales from the Orient.

China is a land of unorganized millions, with the lowest possible standard of living Harry says, and everything seems to be backwards. Believe it or not, they take grasshoppers and cockroaches and coat them with shellaclike substance and eat them like candy, Harry vouches for that one, we don't. The better class are somewhat westernized and speak good English, Harry says. They like the American sailors best because they have more money to spend than the sailors of other nations.

Robinson was stationed at Manila, in the Philipines when the Japanese-chinese rumpus started. He says, "We landed supplies and ammunition and beat it up there. Thought we would see some action, and, well, we did but we didn't get into it." His ship was stationed in the Woosung river during the battle of Shanghai and watched the bombarment. "It was a battle between the organized, highly equipped Jananese war machine and unorganized ill equipped Chinese forces and could have only one outcome," Robinson says, "but the Japs won only after the most stubborn fighting." Native villages that were completely flattened out by shellfire were rebuilt in less than six months.

Mr. Robinson will leave for New York February 8, where he will take part in the commissioning of the new battleship, the U.S.S. New Orleans on February 15. This ship is now being completed in the Brooklyn Navy Yard and is the American answer to the German Vestpocket battleships.

Trovatten Speaks and Urges Cooperation; Pass Frazier Bill

John Funnesdahl was elected to the board of directors, succeeding F. T. Satre at the annual meeting of the Thief River Falls Farmers' Cooperative creamery association, held in the Sons of Norway hall Monday. The board of directors will hold their organization meeting on Feb. 16.

The report of the secretary showed that a total of 316,000 pounds of butter was produced in the year ending December 31 and that an average price of 19.28 cents per pound has been realized by the patrons of the institution for their butterfat. The report showed the cost of manufacturing the butter during the past year has been 3.075 cents per pound.

The financial statement for 1933 shows capital outstanding stock to be $3,800 and the surplus balance of $31,840. 00. Only $7,800 in first mortgage bonds remain to be paid of the issue made to finance the construction of the creamery building.

R. A. Trovatten, state commissioner of Agriculture, Dairy and Food, spoke at the gathering and urged the stockholders to stick together following a hot discussion of the management of the creamery. He advised against "rag-chewing" and letting individual grudges hold back the progress and welfare of the institution. "The present," he advised," is not the time for destructive methods." He urged the passing of the Frazier bill now before Congress and opposed the government's plan to destroy crops as a means of restoring normal price levels.

Highlanding Creamery Holds Annual Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Highlanding Creamery Association January 15, A. Hammersten was elected president, P. Void, vice president; W. Vaughan, secretary; and A. Horachek, John Swanson and Anton Johnson, directors.

The meeting was attended by a large number of stockholders and covered business for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1933. A total of 202,422 pounds of butterfat was received, from which was manufactured 249,538 pounds of butter, the percentage of over-run being 23.3. The total manufacturing cost per pound of butter was 2.7 cents and the average price paid for each pound of butterfat was 20,7 ceats.

A resolution was adopted giving free access to the creamery books to the board of directors or a committee appointed by the board. This group will meet with the butter maker once a month to set the price of butterfat deliveries.

Pie and Coffee Plus a Good Idea Gave Circulating Library Auspicious Start

Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, local librarian, has gained national recoguition for her work with the circulating library idea. An article in "The Farmer's Wife", national rural weekly tells of her work in inaugurating the circulating library in this county, and how she put it into practice with the help of Mr. Curtice, the library janitor and the cooperation of the county board of comissioners and other officials.

This is the secret, says the Farmer's Wife:

"The library and the schools sign a contract guaranteeing that the library will keep each school supplied with plenty of fresh books at all times for both general and reference reading. The library also keeps the books in repear—something the average school teacher can't do. Mrs. Halgrim selects the books to be purchased, choosing from a state approved list, does the buying, and houses the books in the Thief River Falls library.

"In return the school pays the library $10 a year (later getting some of it back in state aid), and becomes a sub-station of the library in the community. If either party wants to discontinue the contract the school can withdraw any books bought with its money.

"If every one of the sixty schools in the county bought Tom Sawyer, for example, paying $1 a copy, the cost would be $60 for this book alone. However, six copies of even the most popular book can adequately supply sixty schools, if the books circulate, making the cost of Tom Sawyer only $6 and leaving the rest of the money for other books."

"Frank B. Curtice, library janitor and ex-railroad conductor volunteered to become first assistant," the Farmer's Wife continues, "eliminating the need of added help there. He checks the books in and out of the library with all the care he learned in years of examining tickets."

But the Farmer's Wife lets the cat out of the bag when it tells about how Mrs. Halgrim used culinary magic to soften stony male hearts to the end that the venture could be properly financed. The story tells of how Mrs. Halgrim invited the county commisioners to a meeting "and slyly mentioned that pie and coffee would be served" and Mrs. Halgrim knew the way to a Norseman's heart for an appropriation was voted the next day.

His bid was $1,006.50.

MOVEMENT FOR A CO-OP WOOL MILL BEING LAUNCHED

Committee Selected at Meeting In Court Room Interviews Civic Bodies

A movement for the establishment of a cooperative woolen mill to be built in Thief River Falls with PWA funds was launched in the community last Friday evening when a delegation of farmers from the various parts of the county met in the court rooms in response to a call sent out by R. M. Aalbu on behalf of the Minnesota-North Dakota Industrial Caravan proponents.

A committe composed of P. O. Sorlom, C. H. Carlson, E. A. Yonke, Gordon Olson and Paul Harris was selected to interview the civic organizations, the city council, the county board and Mr. Frisby the CWA engineer here and secure their support of the project.

Members of the committee reported that they have talked the matter over with Mr. Frisby and been assured that there will be all the technical assistance necessary forthcoming from the federal government to prepare plans, specifications and application for federal funds. The committee also appeared before the annual meening of the stockholders of the Farmers Cooperative Creamery on Monday and explained the proposition to them. Mr. Harris appeared before the Civic and Commerce association at their noonday luncheon today and on behalf of the committee outlined the plan to the association. After a short discussion the matter was referred to the Industrial committee of the Civic and Commerce association for further consideration.

Mr. Harris announced: that Mr. Frisby informed him today that a government engineer is investigating the possibilities for woolen mills at Faribault, Litchfield and Fergus Falls at the present time and that this engineer will be here next week to take up consideration of the local plans. In the meantime the committee is arranging to meet with the city council and the county board at their next meeting to take the matter up with those bodies. As soon as more definite plans can be presented the committee will issue a call for the farmers of the county to meet again at the court house so that the developments can be presented to them.

Mrs. John Philipp, of Mavie, is visiting in the city to day.

CONGRESS PASSES NEW MONEY BILL

Gives President Power to Devalue Dollar and Treasury to Take Title to Gold.

Washington—Approved by both houses and senate, President Roosevelt's monetary bill gives the chief executive power to devalue the dollar and put $2,000,000,000 to the task of protecting the foreign value of the nation's currency. Passage by the senate came after administration forces had beaten back a determined challenge from the exponents of remonetized silver by the margin of two votes. The only amendment of any importance was that limiting the measure's life to three years, and that was put into the bill without objection from the administration. The Roosevelt forces defeated an effort to put the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund in the charges of a board. Specifically the bill contains the following provisions: The treasury is given title to all the nation's monetary gold stocks; including $3,500,000,000 held by the federal reserve banks. The President is authorized to revalue the dollar at 50 to 60 per cent of its present statutory gold equivalent. Coinage of gold is declared at an end. The metal is to be held in bullion form in the treasury as backing for paper currency. The $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund is created out of the increased value of the gold accruing as a result of devaluation of the dollar. It is placed in the sole charge of the secretary of the treasury and he is given authority to expend it in virtually any transactions he may deem necessary for stabilizing the dollar abroad. In addition, the bill removes several present restrictions upon the issuance of government securities, provides that any type of government obligation may be purchased with any other type, that securities issued may be sold privately, and authorizes the issuance of $2,500,000,000 additional notes.

Wants New Laws to Hit Bootlegger

Washington—The administration is deeply concerned over rampant bootlegging that is taking place under repeal and is somewhat at loss as how to approach the problem but has submitted to leaders in congress as many as three projected bills providing for drastic liquor control regulation. The justice department, the federal alcohol control administration and the internal revenue bureau all are urging immediate enactment of stringent legislation not only to combat the bootlegger but to protect the dry states as is provided under the twenty-first amendment.

Changes in Income Taxes Approved.

Washington—The house ways and means committee approved a series of sweeping income tax revision provisions for incorporation in a $270,000,000 bill designed to close tax evasion loopholes. The committee accepted provisions which would place a two per cent penalty tax on consolidated returns and tax undistributed adjusted net income of personal holding corporations 35 per cent.

Word Pure Opposed for Liquor Labels

Washington—No liquor label, the federal alcohol control administration believes, should use the word pure. The FACA suggested at a meeting of representatives of the liquor industry that, instead, liquor should be designated as straight, blended or imitation. This view was presented in a tentative draft of labeling regulations proposed to the dealers by the federal government.

Roosevelt Approves Full Navy Bill.

Washington—Certain that the President wants the legislation, house leaders cleared the way for approval of a bill to give America a modern, full treaty strength navy by 1940 or 1941—four to five years after present treaties expire. The navy department hopes eventually to have 2,100 serviceable fighting, bombing and scouting planes instead of the 1,000 now allowed by law.

Coyote in Fox Hunt, But Won't Play.

Portland, Ore.—All the lads were out in white breeches and red coats for the Multnomah and Portland Hunt Clubs' fox hunt. They couldn't find any foxes to be chased, so they had imported a coyote. The coyote was loosed from a box. The hounds bayed. The coyote took a drink and went back to his box. The hunters went home.

Factor Identifies Touhy as Snatcher.

Chicago—Protected by prosecutors from questions about his own alleged misdeeds in life, John Factor reaffirmed from the witness stand under a gruelling cross-examination his identification of three Touhy gangsters as the men who kidnaped him for $70,000 ransom.

White House Grants Cuba Recognition

Washington—Ending six months of unofficial relations during which Cuba has been in turmoil, the United States has accorded recognition to the new government of President Carlos Mendieta.

COUNTY TAXPAYERS TO SAVE MILLION A YEAR ON ROADS

Minnesota counties will save more than one million dollars a year from now on by being relieved of maintenance and improvement costs on the 4,500 miles of county roads taken into the state trunk system this month. This is the estimate of the state highway department.

The average county expenditure on the heavily traveled roads which were generally added to the state system has been about $230 a year for maintenance alone, according to highway department engineers, although this figure varies considerably in different localities.

As all these roads also require frequent outlays for improvement and betterments in addition to maintenance, the savings to county taxpayers should run far higher than a million dollars a year over a period of several years.

The state highway department must maintain and improve the new routes from its regular revenues. This year it has a trunk system 11,300 miles in elngth to care for, compared with only 6,800 miles previously. The highway department reduced its expenditures in 1933 by more than 50 per cent, compared with 1932.

FEDERAL LAND BANK AID FARMERS IN DISTRESS

Emergency action on application of farmers who reported their creditors on the point of foreclosing mortgages, has caused disbursement of $1,821,0400 in Minnesota, up to the beginning January according to a statement of the Federal Land Bank. There is a special committee at the bank that attends to these applications.

Frequently a call is made by the committee as the farm is "under the hammer." On one occasion the chairman got a judge on the telephone as he was in court preparing to render judgment on the emergency case the committee had allowed a loan upon, and in another case, a sheriff's sale was halted as the auction crowd was assembled and ready to begin bidding.

In all $6,042,000 has been disbursed to save mortgaged farmers of the states of Minnesota, Michigan and North Dakota from foreclosure. Applications of 1,248 persons were included in this amount, while 585 who had reported emergency needs, have not yet applied for loans.

COOPERATIVES USE FEDERAL CORP BANK RECORDS SHOW

Approximately $295,000 has been applied for by 28 cooperatives in Minnesota, according to the latest figures supplied by the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives. These include 22 creameries, most of which are seeking loans to refinance plant and equipment obligations; 2 elevators, 2 oil companies and 2 miscellaneous cooperatives.

"U" OPENINGS HELP MANY IN C. W. A.

On projects ranging from studies of magnesium alloys for use in airplane construction to investigations of the sub-surface geology of the Twin Cities area, and from studies of the lungs in persons suffering from embolism to those of the factors making for success among Arts College undergraduates, the University of Minnesota has set 754 persons to work on special CWA projects. In all, 334 projects are under way on the main campus and 159 projects at University Farm. All of the workers enumerated are unemployed graduates of various colleges. In addition there are a number of others at work on painting and repairing jobs.

A report by M. Willey, assistant to the president and W. H. Holman, supervising engineer, who are directing the projects, shows that the federal government paid these special employees $11,821.21 during the last completed week.

Scores of investigation that could not be made on the university's own funds, many of which might have had to wait for years, are being conducted with the CWA funds now available, according to Dr. Willey. Every project was stamped as worthwhile by a university committee before being forwarded to the CWA offices from which workers were assigned.

Heads of the study fields in which the CWA people are at work are rated as "foreman" of the projects.

PROFESSIONAL ADVICE FOR THOSE WHO MAKE WILLS

A series of interesting and important pieces of advice on the drafting of wills and trusts is given in the December issue of the Minnesota Law Review, edited at the University of Minnesota, in an article entitled, "Lessons from the Depression in the Drafting of Wills and Trusts." It was contributed by W. Barton Leach, professor of Law in the Harvard Law School.

Stated in the briefest form, the recommendations are these:

1, Do not waive securties on executor's or trustees bond under a will. If it is suggested that you waive sureties, refuse. It is a bad practise.

2, Do not sign a clause allowing an executor to retain speculative investments, or those forming too large a portion of the entire estate, according to his own judgment. The point is that after a man is dead there is no way of replacing his estate if it is lost. Every chance for loss should be eliminated.

3, In case the decedent leaves a margin account with a broker, "in most cases it would seem that conservatism would citate immediate liquidation of the account."

4, Personal loyalty to a corporation, arising from long connection with it should not lead the testator to to direct that its stocks or bonds be retained after his death. It is too risky.

5. Do not make bequests in your will that will beggar your family after estate taxes and costs of administration have been paid. Guard this by scaling bequests down in proportion to the amount of the estate that remains after administration.

COMMISSIONER'S LOAN SAVES COUPLE FROM LOSING FARM

Thrift of a lifetime and a kindly wish to help his neighbors who were not financially so well off, came near evicting a western Minnesota farmer from his farm and leaving him and his aged wife, they are past 80 years of age, helpless and penniless in the dead of winter.

But a Land Bank Commissioner's loan from the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul saved them and today they are thankful that provision was made for such emergencies as theirs.

This man had homesteaded a tract of land while there was much free land still to be had, and had acquired a good set of buildings on a portion of it. Later he had acquired another piece of good farm land upon which he needed no buildings. During the years that he struggled to lay by a little for his old age some of his neighbors were in even worse straits than himself and he had lent some of them money, which they had been unable to repay because of the dry weather, pests and low prices of the last few years.

But this farmer did not press his debtors. Instead, he put a mortgage on his two pieces of farm property to raise funds to carry him along, as he had helped to carry along some of his neighbors. Then his own creditors began to press him for payment, which he could not make. He was about to be thrown off his land and lose his home and his means of livilihood when the chance to make a commissioner's loan was brought to his attention.

Until a recent ruling of the Farm Credit Administration he could not even have made a commissioner's loan but under this new ruling that permits loans on adequate farm land even though it lacks buildings and is not a "complete farm unit" he was able to get a commissioner's loan that refinanced his mortgage and deliquencies and placed him in a position to face the future with hope and confidence.

U. BULLETIN SHOWS DECREASE IN TUBERCULAR STUDENTS

Betty Coed and her Minnesota brother are showing decreasing hospitality to the tuberculosis germ.

This encouraging note in the fight against tuberculosis is contained in a bulletin from the Minnesota Public Health Association.

Incidence of tuberculosis infection among students entering the University of Minnesota has decreased more than 8 per cent since 1928, according to a recent report, the bulletin points out.

Tuberculin tests, which screen out those students that have been exposed to tuberculosis for futher study to detect active disease, have been a part of the routine physical examinations at the University since 1928. In that year 33.4 per cent of the students reacted positively to the test. While in the 1932-33 school year, the report states only 24.9 showed infection.

"This definite decrease in the number of infected students indicates encouraging progress in the effect to control tuberculosis in youth, the most difficult age," the bulletin of the state Christmas Seal organization points out. Undoubtedly the intensive campaign conducted in our high schools is bearing fruits. By means of tuberculin testing and X-ray surveys, many unsuspected cases of tuberculosis have been brought to light among high school pupils. These students have been placed under treatment, thus protecting their schoolmates from the danger of exposure. Tuberculin testing surveys in school have been an important part of the Christmas Seal work for the past five years."

"These surveys have convinced us that the finding of tuberculosis in youth requires the testing and X-raying of apparently healthy school pupils. The disease may not only exist but may spread for a considerable period before symtoms occur which would cause the individual to seek medical care."

Capitol News Review

by A. I. Harris

A major accomplishment of CWA and CWS work in Minnesota has been the reduction of relief loads imposed on counties throughout Minnesota. Charts now are being prepared at the office of the state CWA administrator, Governor Olson, which show that the relief loads have dropped materially since the inauguration of this work.

* * * *

Social workers in Minnesota are continuing to greet with enthusiasm the transient relief program instituted by the state relief administration under the auspices of the federal government. The consensus of public and private agencies is that the new program fills a long-felt need and should become a permanent part of welfare activities in the state.

* * * *

Here's good news for farmers! Minnesota's egg surplus has been consumed. An order for 100,000 dozen of eggs, issued by the State Board of Control for direct relief in the three major cities in the state, went begging at cold storage plant. The order, which by the way is the largest single purchase of eggs on record in the state, was filled principally from the current receipts of farmers and poultry raisers. This is the first time in many years that cold storage plants weren't jammed with the product of the little red hen, indicating, according to Louis Broderick, director of the poultry and egg division of the State Department of Agriculture, a banner year in 1934 for egg producers.

* * * *

The war-term, "profiteering," resounded in various court rooms throughout the state last week when ten packing concerns were charged by the State Department of Agriculture with selling low grade eggs to CCC camps at high grade prices. All ten were found guilty, bringing a total in fines of $375. Strange but true, every concern selling eggs to the camps was involved, which brought suspicion of collusion.

The proper use of leisure time is is one of the important problems facing those interested in the welfare of the people. To insure intelligent use of leisure time, the state CWA committee, composed of Governor Olson and the State Board of Control, has established a liesure time and recreational division, which now is completing plans for giving both employed and unemployed persons throughout the state definite outlet for their idle hours. Courses in drama, literature, and the arts are to be provided, with a view toward building for the future. The division is in charge of R. W. Murchie of the University of Minnesota.

Interest in Minnesota's mortgage moratorium law, which has been upheld by the United States Supreme court in perhaps the most important and significant decision in recent years, is nationwide. So many requests from all parts of the country for copies of this law have been received that the law has been published in booklet form by the Commission of Administration and Finance, together with an abridged statement of the opinion of the Supreme court.

* * * *

The Minnesota income tax law, unlike the federal law, permits a deduction for expenses occurred from sickness and accidents to both the tax payer and members of his family. On the other hand, neither is it necessary to include no items of income compensation derived from personal injury or sickness. Which, of course, is another humanitarian aspect.

* * * *

Although the federal government recently ordered a curtailment in federal relief activities, the state committee and Governor Olson, as state CWA administrator, were advancing the program along a score of fronts. More than 100 varities of projects were under way; unemployment registration, with the view of eventually placing idle persons in jobs best suited them, was nearing completion; the Interim desirability, need and worth, so that when the full program is resumed, those projects best suited to a particular locality can be carried out.

* * * *

Each year the nation grows more conscious of Minnesota's recreation facilities. The most evidence of this is the fact that a national oil company has asked the Tourist bureau for material with which to compile a pamphlet solely on Minnesota. The company said they had received a heavy demand for a booklet of that sort.

* * * *

The federal proposal to retire sub marginal agricultural lands suitable for migatory waterfowl nesting areas again found the state Department of Conservation ready with a program. Creation of twenty nesting areas in various sections of the state is proposed by E. V. Willard, Conservation Commissioner to the authorities at Washington.

Federal Government Pays All Cost of the Nine Foot Channel

This is the third of a series of eight articles dealing with the nine foot channel now under construction in the Mississippi river.

As far as the cost of the nine-foot channel is concerned, Minnesota and the Northwest are getting a "break" from the federal government that probably never has been equalled and may never be.

This improvement, estimated at $124,000,000 will cost the Northwest almost nothing.

It cannot raise or affect the farmer's taxes or any other local taxation.

Not only this, but the ultimate cost of the channel doubtless will be less than the $124,000,000, for the army engineers' estimates are somewhat liberal, to allow for all contingencies and so far lock and dam construction contracts have been let at less than the estimated costs. Competition among contractors is very keen.

Now where is the money coming from to pay for the nine-foot channel? Since it is a federal job, the money must come from the federal revenues. The last year for which figures have been published by the department of commerce showed that 75 per cent of the federal revenue came from income taxes levied upon individuals and corporations. The rest is made up by taxes on estates, distilled spirits, tobacco and miscellaneous revenue, stamp and luxury taxes. From now on, there will be a large amount of federal revenue from the sale of beer and liquor and still more from the income taxes on beer and liquor corporations.

None of the state or local taxes go to the federal government, so the channel cost has no effect on their levies.

Compare the cost of the Upper Mississippi nine-foot channel with that on the Ohio. The Ohio is canalized for 981 miles with 55 dams. The Upper Mississippi will have 27 dams in 671 miles. Yet the cost for the Ohio improvement was only $118,743,000, compared wtih a liberal estimate of $124,000,000 for the Upper Mississippi.

One thing to remember is that we, in the northwest, have been unfamiliar with water transportation for two generations. Nevertheless, by far the bulk of the world's commerce is carried on water, and while water-borne commerce in the Upper Mississippi valley has been allowed to stagnate, it has been flourishing elsewhere, as on the Ohio.

The government has been spending millions annually improving harbors and channels in other parts of the country. Many of these millions have gone into lake and ocean harbors and river and coastal channels. It will be news to many in the northwest that even now barges can be loaded with sulphur in Texas and brought along the Gulf coast up the Mississippi all the way to Minneapolis.

The Upper Mississippi has been neglected simply because we have been satisfied to let our traffic move east and west exclusively, because we have taken it for granted that the railroads had a complete monopoly on transportation. Now that the cost of exclusive land transportation has become unbearable, we have seen the economic error of letting a natural water highway go to waste. We have paid for the nine-foot channel, many times, right here in the northwest, in unwaranted transportation costs.

The government operates the Federal Barge Lines, but these boats carry a minor part of the total river traffic. On the Ohio and other rivers, privately owned fleets of both common and contract carriers handle the greater share of the business. It was necessary for the government to improve land highways. For the same reason it has been necessary for the government to pioneer in the operation of barge lines, on newly developed channels, just as it has has assisted in the establishment of air transportation. Once commerce is restored on a dependable nine-foot channel, private enterprise will handle the barge lines.

32 S. L. COUNTY TOWNSHIPS NOW FACE DISSOLUTION

Thirty-two St. Louis county townships, because of their high tax deliqnency, may be dissolved by the county board under state law, commissioners there have been informed. A survey of such townships was asked by the county board last week. State statutes give county boards the authority to dissolve towns having a delinquency of more than 70 per cent, or towns having a valuation of less than $50,000 with a 60 per cent deliquency:

IT'S TIME TO TRY SOMETHING ELSE

"If this dosen't work we'll try something else," President Roosevelt said when he launched the recovery program. The NRA and the Public Works program failed to fulfill expectations and the CWA was launched to fill the breach. But what about the AAA? That has fallen down more pitiably than the NRA and there is nothing as yet being done to remedy the situation. The wheat allotment benefited mostly the large wheat farmers and the average diversified farmer received but little if any benefit from it. According to hog raisers whom we have discussed the matter with, the corn-hog program is a tax on the hog raiser rather than a benefit. We are told that the price of porkers dropped the amount of the processing tax just as soon as that tax went into effect. That the packers took the easiest way out, which was passing the tax back on the farmer rather than on to the consumer as was intended. The hog raiser is worse off than before, for he gets the tax, less the cost of administration, so that the only result is the creation of a few more government jobs which the farmers have to pay for.

Meanwhile, due to the NRA, the wheat processing tax and the devaluation of the dollar, the price of commercial feeds is going up while the price of eggs, poultry and butterfat stays in the dumps. Fifteen cents for butterfat doesen't pay for the labor to say nothing about hay and feed. The same can be said of 17 cent eggs.

On Monday Secretary Wallace laid before beef and dairy producers another plan for reducing production and repaying the farmers with a processing tax. One or two failures are evidently not enough for Mr. Wallace, he must pile them up until they cry to high heaven. This time he would put a processing tax on butterfat. A five cent per pound tax, which he no doubt expects to be passed on by the processors to the consumers.—And the hills re-echo Oh! Yeah! This tax like the pork tax will be passed back to the farmer and it will mean a corresponding reduction in the price of butterfat.

Private business must take the course of least resistance. It has no alternative if it would survive and when butterfat is bought it will be bought less the tax. Co-operative creameries that must sell its products on the commission market will be forced to take the price offered. And Wallace's wishes to the contrary that price will remain what the demand warrants. Centralizers will be forced to take the tax out of the farmers since they can not pay it out of their own funds and survive. Co-operatives will have to pass it back to the farmers whether they like it or not, since they pay back to their patrons everything above the cost of production and administration, and have no funds of their own to pay it out of. The net results of this tax like the pork tax will be more bookkeeping for the farmers to pay for.

It's about time that Secretary Wallace and his particular section of the "brain trust" woke up to the fact that their Agricultural Adjustment program is about as helpful to the farmers as barley beards in his flannels. It's time to try something else, and this time they had better consult more farmers and fewer county agents and college professors.

WHY NOT LET THE CONVENTION DECIDE IT?

Brother Whaley of the Country press of Moorhead, is musing on the congressional situation in the ninth district and lists quite a formidable array of would be, might be, or ought to be, candidates for the Farmer-Labor nomination. While we are willing to let him do all musing his heart desires (we like to do those things ourselves) we feel in duty bound to call him when he takes our lady Senator's name in vain. The Dame is Nappin brother, N a p p i n, and she will not be the candidate of the drys. We speak officially, being quite well acquainted with the lady. Neither will she be the candidate of the wets. If she becomes a candidate for congress it will be because the ninth district convention chooses her for the honor. And then she will be the candidate of the Farmer-Labor party, and the platform of the Farmer Labor party will be her platform and no other. If you don't think we know what we are talking about just look up her record.

It's no rumor that we will have a convention to choose a candidate for the ninth district, that's decided, and not harmony, but party regularity and principles is the watch-word of the Farmer-Labor party up in this neck of the woods.

You really ought to attend the Ninth District Farmer-Labor conferences, Brother Whaley, they're not stuff. At the last one held in December the conference went on record as opposed to the district convention endorsing anyone who has as much as announced their candidacy for congress. And that's the way it should be. There will be no "Selvigs" getting by the primary as a Farmer-Laborite if we stick to the convention indorsed candidate. As far as we are concerned we will take off our coat for that candidate, for the is a battle for principles and not of personalities.

The small homestead tax law, so called, was held to be constitutional by Judge J. W. Boener of the District Court at Minneapolis. This is the law which reduces the valuation on homes and homesteads up to $4,000 valuation to 25 per cent and 20 per cent of the full and true valuation respectively. The law was intended to act as an offset or easement for the homeowner, the difference in tax receipts being expected to be made up from the new state income tax.

Inasmuch as the law will tend to foster homeowning and reduce tenantry it is a good law, altho there are some rough spots to be polished off. For instance a man may own an apartment building and if he resides in it himself it would list in the homes class and give him an advantage, (up to $4,000 valuation) over the man who owns a similar apartment house and does not reside in it. It would seem in fairness that the man who resides in his own apartment house should benefit from this law only to the extent of the percentage of the whole building that his own apartment occupies.

This is about the fifth decision by district courts on this law, three declaring it unconstitutional and two declaring it as being valid. It is about time that the supreme Court which has had it under consideration for the past three months get it out from under their bide.

Mr. Cheney, professional political spit-ball artist, seems to be warming up his blow-gun for the coming campaign.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

The investigation of the Northwest Bancorporation by the state Department of Commerce has been temporarily halted. Federal Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux has granted a temporary restraining order to the officers of the Bancorporation preventing further investigation for the time being.

It has been charged that the chain bank organizations in the state were responsible for mulcting investors of the Northwest of millions of dollars through the sale of fraudulent stocks. It is to determine the truth or falsity of these charges that the investigation was undertaken by the Department of Commerce.

Speaking of banks makes one wonder to what extent the banking business is today in the hands of the common people. There is, of course, no doubt that the large chain bank groups in different parts of the country are mere subsidiaries of the large Wall Street banking and finance institutions. These bancorporations with their numerous subsidiary banks constitute the arms of Wall Street by which the giant octopus controls money and credit in the nation.

The same is, of course, not true of independent state banks. They are still pretty much in the hands of the people and yet they, too, reflect the power of the wealthier classes in our banking business.

Wealthy Control Deposits

In a recent report submitted by E. A. Benson, Commissioner of Banks, it is shown that there are now in the state 535,259 depositors in state banks with total deposits of more than $181,000,000. The number of accounts under $1000 is 492,480; the number of accounts ranging from $1000 to $2000 is 22,478; and the number of those in excess of $2000 number 20,301. These figures do not, however, tell the whole story. That is to say, they do not fully reveal the amount of deposits held by the wealthier depositors. The percentage of deposits under $1000 amount to 32.5 per cent of the whole, approximately one-third. The number of deposits of those ranging from $1000 to $2000 total 16.4 per cent of the whole; and the percentage of deposits in excess of $2000 amount 51.1 per cent.

Analizing these figures, Mr. Benson shows that the percentage of accounts under $2000 represents nearly 96 per cent of the depositors while the percentage of accounts over $2000 represents about 3.8 per cent of the depositors. This means that less than 4 per cent of the depositors control more than 50 per cent of the deposits in the state banks of Minnesota today. This is most remarkable as it must be kept in mind that state banks rather than national banks constitute the banking facilities of the average man and woman.

Favors Socialization

There is no doubt that the ultimate solution of the banking business lies in the socialization of money and banking. It is useless to attempt to establish any system of control of the present privately owned banking schemes for governmental control of business has up to date, at least, proven all but a complete failure.

The Farmer-Labor party stands committed to a program of socialization of "key industries" and this includes banks.

Years ago the administration in North Dakota created the "Bank of North Dakota," an institution operated for service and not for private profit. It will be remembered that when the Bank of North Dakota was established in 1919, Wall Street made war on the North Dakota state administration, then as now controlled by the National Nonpartisan League. The bonds of the Bank, guaranteed by the state, were turned down by the investment bankers of New York and other large cities. There was no question as to the validity of the bonds, but there was serious objection on the part of bankers to the objectives to be attained. Only herculean efforts on the part of the Nonpartisan leaguers made possible the sale of the bonds.

The men and women of Minnesota who are desirous of establishing a new order of things can only accomplish their purpose by uniting under the banner of the Farmer-Labor party. It is the only political movement in Minnesota that is avowedly for public ownership of the banking business.

PRESIDENT'S POLICIES HELP PROPERTY OWNERS CHIEFLY

An Open Letter to the President by John Dewey

You have recognized the futility of the policy of your predecessor who believed that if only finance and industry were stimulated at the top, prosperity would under the beneficent hands of overlords gradually trickle down to the masses. You have recognized in theory that there can be no enduring prosperity without increase of the consuming power of the masses, brought about by increase of purchasing power.

At the same time, Mr. President, you are continuing in practice the policies of President Hoover and the Republican Administration, that did nothing to lift the American people from the depression. Loans of billions are made to banks, railways and insurance corporations, adding to the debt structure of the country and to the burden of interest that must be paid through taxation. Loans and at the top have, in spite of your determined efforts reached those at the bottom in the ratio of seven to one.

You have tried to stem the tide of deflation as your predecessor did not. You have announced as your goal the restoration of the price level to that of 1926. But the methods by which this end is being sought are such that the chief effect is to assist those in least need of help, those who are al- able system. ready the beneficiaries of our inequit-

The effect is to make solvent speculative land values, and to bolster the mortgage debts and rates of interest based thereon; to validate the impossibe burdensome capitalization of railways, public utilities, mining and manufacturing corporations. However good your intentions, your policies are in their consequences a continuation of the favors extended to organized and speculative wealth by your predecessor.

Mr. President, I am convinced in common with the great majority of our fellow citizens, that you do not desire to see our farmers reduced to a state of peasantry, and the wage earners to a condition a little above that of serfdom. But what is the end to be, when along with the increase of debts through large expenditures, taxes still continue to be piled upon the consumer, and the cost of living of the mass rises more rapidly than wages and salaries?

When five per cent of the people own and control four-fifths of the wealth of the country, nothing but a continuation of the evil causes that have produced the present situation can be expected from policies that put the burden of debt and increased cost of living upon those least able to stand it, while refusing to use power to tax higher incomes and estates, to secure that equalization of income which will alone guarantee mass consumption, to take care of mass production.

With a fair distribution of national incomes, and with reasonable prices for goods, we could consume every year for a number of years to come, from one to one hundred and a half billion more bales of cotton than at present; could construct two million more homes, consume almost two billion more gallons of milk and increase vastly the production and use of furniture, household and dress goods. Such an increase would of necessity create a demand also for capital expenditures.

There is but one way open to recovery which is anything more than a temporary hectic fever. That way is not being taken. It is simple and direct. It is on one side, the use of taxation to achieve an adequate, equitable distribution of consuming and purchasing power, and on the other side, the use of government authority and power to relieve the suffering that is due to unemployment, and to raise the standard of living and of economic demand by an adequate program of housing, and of social services in health, education and all things where individuals are dependent upon the community.

A beginning is made in the latter direction, and we desire to give you full credit for that beginning. But we ask you, Mr. President, to compare your own figures of expenditures in this direction for what is being done to aid the wealthy who live by investment and not by work, to see how one-sided are present policies and how sure they are to end in disaster.

BY

Congressman Paul John Kvale

A double-barreled and really important topic for this week's letter is supplied through publication, almost simultaneously, of the text of the new tax bill (still open to change, however, before introduction to the house) and of the report by the group which for a year and a half has made a most exhaustive study of our national income. The latter, just issued by the Department of Commerce, is detailed breakdown of income to show how averages in the last four years of depression have affected wages and salaries of labor as well as "wages" of property and money, including rents, royalties, dividends, interest and similar items.

On its face, the tax bill seems disappointed to those who have insisted that our existing tax structure must be sharply and upwardly modified in the case of income taxes levied on the extremely wealthy individuals and corporations and in the case of gifts and inheritances. Closed examination, however, almost entirely dispels that feeling, for it is quickly revealed that the men who have evaded their share of the federal tax burden are to be reached even more vigorously thru revision of the administrative sections and thru change in policy of taxation of unearned income, which for the past two years has been notoriously favored.

The bill only attempts to increase total revenues by two hundred millions, not a great deal when compared with current outlays. But it proves that the budget balancing hysteria does not sway the administration, and that it proposes to wait until there is some appreciable and permanent revival in business and industry before it turns to taxing the higher income brackets of individuals and increasing corporation taxes. Application then will be productive of new revenue, and will also be a brake on any wild inflation such as was experienced in the late twenties.

The wisdom of such a course is indicated by an analysis of the report referred to above. It shows the startling figure, for instance, of a wage decline of sixty percent from 1929 to 1932. This is the deepest for any form of payments, and is the most impressive when it is remembered the figures only apply to the full-time employes. If unemployment and part time work were figured in, the result would be admittedly staggering. In contrast with the item, wages of money declined only one twenty-fifth of

WE ARE THE DEAD

We are the dead—who vainly strove to bind
With chains of greed deluded humankind;
Who sought to reign as despots on the earth.
But now, alas! a new age comes to birth.
And we are dead.

We are the dead—who were too deaf to hear
The cries of justice—what had we to fear?
We scorned the law; we were too blind to see
That all are slaves unless all men are free;
Now we are dead.

We are the dead; our kingdom built on lust
For gold and power is prostrate in the dust;
Our glory fades, our banners now are furled.
New days are here, a vision wakes the world
And we are dead. —Thomas Curtis Clark.

THE REAL ISSUE

Union Advocate

For the time being the CWA is diverting attention away from the fact that the NRA has utterly failed to counteract the depression. The next move will undoubtedly be inflation, and there is already evidence that Mr. Roosevelt, by some strange trick of magic, will revalue gold, less than half of which is in the treasury of the federal government. The rest is in the hands of the federal reserve bank system, placed there by the orders of the President.

Inflation, controlled or otherwise, is artificial. The revaluation of gold is artificial. But hunger is real. Unemployment is a fact. Evictions are realities to those driven by order of courts from their homes. There is nothing unreal or artificial about human poverty and misery.

The CWA has proven a godsend to milions who received nothing through the NRA or other initials in the alphabet of recovery. But the CWA is only an emergency. Inflation would be nothing less than an emergency measure.

The real issue for Labor is one which concerns wages. Labor insists that it has the right to a greater share in the profits of its toil. It does not matter what the yardstick of value may be; it does not matter whether the value of currency be set according to the gold standard or some other measure. Labor demands a fuller share in the final profits of its toil. That is the issue, and all the magic of finance and make-believe will not change it.

RUSSIA CONTROLS PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION

Stephen Messeager

Accoring to Walter Duranty, special representative of the New York Times in Moscow, for the first time in its history the Soviet Union has completed its state grain "collections" before the end of the year. While the total of the government collection is not given it is estimated at 24,500,000 metric tons, of which 17,500,000 tons will be assigned to the urban population, the army and the construction camps, leaving 7,000,000 tons for reserve or export. In the latter respect, it is noteworthy that the proportion of wheat in this year's collection is half as large again as that of last year. This assures a plentiful and equal supply of grain to the population until the next crop is harvested.

In the matter of production and distribution of food Russia seems to have successfully solved the problem that vexes the United States and other nations. Communism may be deplorable in some respects to individualism, but it must be admitted that our boasted individualism is not all that could be desired by any means. At least thee are no idle people in Russia.

EXPENSIVE WISECRACKING

St. Paul Daily News.

"I would like to ask the senator, apropos of a chicken in very pot, which costs the taxpayer nothing, what it has cost the taxpayer to put a blue duck in every window?"

The quotation is from the Congressional Record. Sen. Schall, Republican, Minnesota, is speaking. His question is addressed to Sen. Dickenson, Republican Iowa. The senatorial wisecrack on the "blue duck" was greeted with laughter according to the Record's parentheses.

The "chicken in every pot" did not cost anything. Few of the taxpayers got it either. The "blue duck," as Sen. Schall calls the blue eagle, has cost something but our guess is that if the matter were put to a vote today the American people would favor it over the mythical chicken and the do-nothingism which condemned millions to slow starvation.

Meanwhile it is quite touching to see the concern of Sen. Schall for the taxpayer. It does not bother him when he fills page after page of the Congressional Record with this sort of drivel at $500 a page and then franks it to thousands of taxpayers at their expense.

SCIENTIFIC PARTY BUILDING

Fairmont Daily Sentinel, Dem.

Martin county may, if it chooses, look on and see worked out here the scientific building of a political party, a political organization with genuine form substance and solidarity, in opposition to the loose, irresponsible groups heretofore denominated political parties.

When you belong to the Farmer-Labor party, or rather Farmer-Labor Association, as the dominant inner group is called you really belong to something.

This central board of directors, responsible and accountable to the state organization, has selected or will select its official representative in each precinct of the county.

The membership will then be built up from those who can be depended upon to carry out the purposes of the master organization.

There is a membership fee and regular dues, which is entirely sound and proper. The chosen thus recognize their duty and obligation to society pledged to a definite purpose, committed to the achievement of certain ends.

This plan of party organization and operation concerns and should claim the interest of every person interested in popular government, and that includes every citizen of the republic.

No party so formulated, given honest, unselfish and intelligent leadership, can fail to command public attention and rise to power. A party thus soundly organized and solidified cannot fail to be a force to be seriously reckoned with. It is certain to influence tremendously the electorate not actually identified with the inner circle.

It will be well therefore that the people of Minnesota differentiate between the Farmer-Labor party and the Farmer-Labor Association.

Anyone can belong to the party, in the same loose manner that anyone can call himself Democrat or Republican, and exercise his franchise accordingly. Membership in the Association, however, is an entirely different matter.

Without approving the Farmer-Labor Association itself, this paper does approve its initiative in formulating, for the first time in America, a real responsible political machine.

To the Farmer-Labor Association of Minnesota, congratulations. It is setting a pace in scientific [illegible] party building for which the nation has waited a century and a half.

A breakfast guest at the White House was astonished to see Mr. Coolidge pour his coffee from the cup to the saucer. Not to be outdone, the guest followed suit. The President added cream and sugar, in the saucer, and tasted the mixture with his spoon. The guest was imitating this when the President sat the saucer on the floor for the dog!

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY

Congressman Paul John Kvale

(Cantinned from psge four)

the 1929 level; hardly noticeable interest reduction. Dividends suffered somewhat more, but the statistics clearly shaw what an unequal division has been made in the farm of wages and salaries, as against interest and dividends.

Consequently, any policy of taxation tending to retard business recovery, reemployment aad increased volume af income af all kinds is now tabaoed, aad the entire efforts of the administration will be to penalize the unearned incomes and tax dodgers without disturbing the existing schedules af tax payments.

Some discussian will center around the efforts to give the President discretionary power to impose retaliatory taxes an foreign carporations operating in the United States in cases where nations such as France tax our corporatians heavily. Instead of trying to write mandatory provisions into the bill, which wauld have provoked a bitter and perhaps a losing fight, the committee proposes to give this permissive authority and then bring pressure on the President to exercise it. But he has given good ground for the bellaf that he is apposed to the ecaaamic and financial warfare of retaliatians and reprisals with their attendant dangers. A little while ago he made short work of those who attempted to wreak revenge and resentment on France by placing a virtual embargo on impartation of her wines and liqnors that are so economically important ta that nation. In this case, then, he will be slow to use the authority that is sought to be given bim.

Speaking af this income-taxatian-inflation questioa, an admirable editorial farm a recent isssue of the Philadelphia Record is inserted here. It's a gem:

"Wall Street bankers are responsible far a widtspread anti-inflation campaign, featuring the distribution af 100,000 mark aates of the German inflation period. Each note is accomaanied by a letter explaining that 'the enclosed bill was warth $23,000 before the war and was virtually worthless after the inflation."

"Pretty cute. But if inflationists cared to stoop to this kiad af strategy, they could easily answer Wall Street by distributing $50,000 checks on American banks which closed during the Hoover regime, and which aren't worth a nickel today because of the deflation. The truth is that either uncantrolled inflation or uncontrolled deflation can wreck a nation's financial structure. Only controlled inflation can stop the continuing deflation."

Minnesota's Governor Olson, accompanied by his administrator Dr. Lambie, are in the Capitol earnestly working to speed up appraval of public warks prajects and to assure extension and expantion of civil works and emergency relief funds for the Gopher State, and cooperating ia that regard with the writer and athers who have been in constant conference with the administration over thesa matters.

Minnesota has a splendid record, as compared with ather states, in getting these funds put ta quick and efficient use. Naturally, such large expenditures and such a necessarily speedy program have caused local complaints and scattered instances of individual errors, but in the present regrettoble revelations af politcal and financial crookedness in connection with these outlays, Minnesota can proudly point to a completely clean record.

F-L CONVENTION AT ST. PAUL ON TUESDAY MAR. 27

Only Dues-Paying Members Can Sit as Delegates Says New Rule

On March 27, the last Tuesday in the month, delegates from 81 organized counties will meet in the St. Paul Auditorium at a biennial convention of the Farmer-Labor Association of Minnesota. They will assemble to conduct the business of the organization, to perfect plans for the coming campaigns and to indorse candidates for nomination.

The letter addressed to all chairmen and to club secretaries, and signed by the State secretarytreasurer, reads as follows:

January 30, 1934

"To County Chairmen and secretaries:

"We enclose here with convention call for the biennial convention of the Farmer-Labor Association which is self-explanatory.

"You will note that ALL DUES-PAYING MEMBERS in the county shall be delegates to the county convention. In addition to these members, every UNORGANIZED township, village or other subdivision in your county, is entitled to two delegates in the county convention, but provided that ALL delegates to the state convention must be members of the Farmer- Labor Association, either by direct affiliation in the local or county units or through membership in labor unions or farmers economic organizations.

"The state committee adopted this representation for county conventions after considerable thought and consideration. Many counties are only partially organized; the movement has grown rapidly and will need from two to four years more before the

Rising Grasshopper Scourge Perils Northwest This Year, Exhaustive Study of Pest Discloses

By Roy P. Speer

The Forum is indebted to the St. Paul Dispatch for the following story and the accompanying map, reprinted with their permission.

There is new and startling evidence that the swarms of grasshoppers certain to emerge from the ground in May and June in the badly infested areas of the United States and Canada present a menace not experienced in the Northwest since the disastrous scourges of the 1870's.

It is now indisputably established that overwhelming numbers of these grasshoppers have reverted to type and will emerge from the soil not as ordinary grasshoppers of the past but as the dread Rocky Mountain locusts whose migratory flights were so utterly destructive some 60 years ago. Where the grasshopper of the past has proved to be a pest, this locust of the future may become an actual international calamity.

Hopper is Changing.

According to T. L. Aamodt, assist- grasshopper campaigns in Minnesota, ant state entomologist, in chage of the lesser-migatory grasshopper, under the economic pressure of infinite multiplication, is undergoing astonishing physical change. Its body is becoming longer and stronger. It is changing its color. Its wings are becoming longer and are so enabling it to make distant flights. Nature seems to be preparing it for new funtions, entirely different from those possessed by it for so many years.

To combat this threatening scourge, a locust "minute man" organization of from 40,000 to 50,000 farmers has been built up in western and and northern Minnesota by A. G. Ruggles, state entomologist and Mr. Aamodt, to wage instant war against it, should any migrations of locust invade the state this summer. Poison bait supply stations have been established at strategic locations, from which field operations can be directed in a few minutes' notice.

Compare Types of Pests

Scientists, says Mr. Aamodt, were at first puzzled by the changes in the lesser-migratory grasshopper's appearance, noticed but a short while ago. Then they delved into history. Comparison of the newer type grasshopper with some of the specimens of the feared Rocky Mountain locust of some 60 years ago. still in exsis-

CWA ARCHITECT MAKING SURVEY ON WOOL MILL

Meeting of All Rural Delegates To be Held Here Sunday Afternoon

An architect working under CWA is in the city at the present time making a survoy of the proposed woolen mill project and the feasibility of locating a mill here. A committee met with him this forenoon Mr. Harris announced at which time a committee from the WPA and the industrial committee of the C and C were invited to sit in and take part in the discussion.

All who received call to attend the convention on Friday evening January 26th when the woolen mill project was first launched, as well as all others who are interested in seeing this project crystalized are urged to attend a meeting at the court rooms in Thief River Falls on Tuesday afternoon February 13th at 1:30 p.m. The committe will make its report at that time and the architect will be present to outline the result of his survey.

The project was outlined to the Workmens' Protective Association at its regular meeting last Monday evening by Paul A. Harris secretary of the committee selected by the county-wide convention two weeks ago and R. M. Aalbu, editor of the Forum. Many questions were asked by the Workmens' association members as to the method proposed for securing the approval of the project and financing it as well as to how it will be directed if it becomes a reality. A great many of the members of the group were enthusiatic in thier approval of the project and a committee composed of E. E. Kelly, Dan Kelly, R. Ristau, Helmer Ostrom and Con. Gaston waa appointed to co operate with the convention's committee in furthuring the project.

A letter received by R. M. Aalbu yesterday from F. C. Proehl, who is in charge of the organization of the Minnesota delegation which will accompany A. C. Townley and Governor Langer of North Dakota and the North Dakota Industrial Caravan to Washington to urge the establishment of local industries thrucut the northwest, announces that the caravan will leave St. Paul for Washington on the morning of February 21st. A meeting is to be held in the St. Paul Labor Temple on the evening of the 20th at 8 o'clock to organize the caravan. Mr. Proehl announces that arrangement have been made for those who do not have their own cars to make the trip to Washington in special chartered busses. He urges that Pennington county name its two delegates and have them on hand at the St. Paul Labor Temple at the meeting on the evening of the 20 th.

Farmer-Labor County Convention Mar. 16th

The Pennington county Farmer-Labor convention will be held in Thief River Falls on March 16, according to an announcement made by the county executive committee yesterday. The convention will be called at 12 o'clock noon. The hall in which the convention will be held has not yet been decided upon but will be announced thru the columns of this paper. Watch for it.

March 13 is designed for the holding of precinct caucuses and all Farmer-Laborites in townships having no regular Farmer-Labor clubs holding regular meetings should caucus at that time and elect two delegates to the county convention. See the article on the call for the state convention elsewhere in this issue for the rules under which county conventions must be conducted.

The county convention is called for the purpose of electing delegates and alternates to the state convention to be held March 26, to elect chairman, secretary and treasurer for the next two years as well as any other business that may properly come before the gathering.

CORN-HOG PLAN MODIFIED NOW; SAYS DOUGLASS

Exemptions Will Give All Small Producers Benefits of Plan

Farmers who produced one or more litters of pigs each year, on the average, in 1932 and 1933, may sign corn-hog reduction contracts and receive payments from the government for reducing their 1934 hog production, according to a new ruling by the agricultural Adjustment Administration just received by County Agent R. M. Douglass.T his changes an eirlier ruling that set the average production at three litters each year as a imnimum and lets the small producers receive benefit of the program..

Also a producer who can show satisfactory reason to his community committee or county agent why he should not fill his silo to the average level it was filled in 1932-33, he may be exempted from doing so but the average years devoted to silage corn will not be included in the acerage on which his reduction is based. Sweet clover is removed from the list of crops that can b grown on contracted additional permanent pasture land.

A farmer who bas moved recently to a farm where fewer cows have been kept than he has been used to keeping may keep as many cows in 1934 as he kept on the other farm in 1932-33.

Signers of wheat reduction contracts whose acreage of winter wheat seeded last fall was winter-killed will be given a wider latitude in the choice of crops than is provided in the contract for 1934.

Farmers who do not butcher and sell or exchange annually more than 1,000 pounds of live hogs of their own raising will be exempted from paying a processing tax on an amount up to 300 pounds sold.

Under instructions from Agricultural Adjustment Administration the county agent has set up a county council of three members to advise with the Farm Credit Administration in making production and barnyard loans to farmers. Members of the committee are: Alfred Longren, Ed. Heieren and S. E. Hunt.

Persons seeking information about the corn-hog reduction plan can get quicker service by directing their inquires to the community or county committee, or to the county agricultural agent rather than to state or national headquarters, according to word received this week from Washington by county agent, R. M. Douglass.

Norby, chairman of the local Boy Scouts of America, yesterday extended an invitation to all boy scouts to meet at the Old Elks' hall on Saturday morning February 10, at 11 o'clock and hear President Roosevelt in his nation mobilization broadcast. A program is being prepared that will interest every scout.

Two Large Cheese-Making Co-Operatives Are Added to L.O'L. Marketing Agency

Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc. will increase its cheese marketings from about 6,000,000 to 25,000,000 pounds in the next year through two important cheese producing organizations having just become members of the Minneapolis co-operative.

The National Cheese Producers Federation, with headquarters at Plymouth, Wis., has just become a member of Land O' Lakes and the latter will handle all marketings of the federation's cheese output, which amounts to 18,000,000 pounds a year. There are about 125 members of the federation.

The Pine Island (Minn.) Association also has become a member of the co-operative, which will handle the marketing of the association's 3,000,000 pound cheese output. This association has about 20 members.

The Land O' Lakes last year handled about 6,000,000 pounds of cheese about half of which mas made by members of the Plymouth federation and the other half made by the creamery members of Land O' Lakes, but all sold under the Land O' Lakes brand.

Under the new setup, the federation brands will be dropped gradually and the Land O' Lakes brand substituted. The same will apply to the Pine Island output.

It was said at the Land O' Lakes office today that the National Cheese Producers Federation will continue to operate and will supervise the assembling, grading and field service on the cheese produced by members, but that all sales will be handled by Land O' Lakes.

Land O' Lakes has established a branch office at Plymouth which will become the headquarters of its cheese sales and shipping departments. Employees will be added to those who had worked for the federation.

The Plymouth, Wis., district has been recognized for years as the largest production center for domestic cheese in the country, its Monday quotations on cheese are the guide to domestic cheese prices.

ORGANIZE YOUR TOWNSHIP FARMER-LABOR CLUB NOW!

An Editorial

The call has gone out for the State Farmer-Labor convention to be held at St. Paul on March 27. County conventions must be held before that time. The Pennington county convention date is announced elsewhere on this page.

In the meatime, it behooves the Farmer-Laborites in every township to caucus and organize Farmer-Labor clubs with regular dues-paying membership if their townships are to have proper representation in the county convention. Under the rules to be followed in the holding of county conventions, as laid down by the state organization, all dues-paying members of the Farmer-Labor association in the county are automatically qualified to sit in the convention as delegates. Townships which have no regular Farmer-Labor club or dues-paying members are entitled to two delegates to be chosen in caucus.

The city of Thief River Falls has a very active Farmer-Labor club with a large membership, all of which will be eligible to sit in the convention as delegates. Unless the rest of the county is to be greatly outnumbered the farmers should proceed at once to organize township clubs. Remember, that every dues-paying member of the association is a duly accredited delegate. ACT NOW, to assure your township of proper representation at the county convention. Get in touch with your township chairman at once, hold an organization meeting and send in as many applications for membership in the association as possible. All applications should be sent to the county secretary, H. O. Berve, Thief River Falls.

CASH BALANCE OF U.S. ON INCREASE

Devaluation of Dollar Causes Expansion of Nation's Balance in the Treasury.

Washington—Means to check tha rapid return of capital to the United States because of its threat to the successful operation of the American monetary program were studied by administration financial advisers. So great is the confidence inspired in the American financial outlook by the return to a modified form of a gold standard that the huge flow of investment funds to this country has disrupted world financial markets and interfered with the administration's effort to peg the dollar in foreign markets at 59.06 per cent of its former gold value. An all-time record cash balance of $4,434,713,155.18 was reported by the federal government with the proceeds of its dollar devaluation profits. Devaluation of the dollar permitted the treasury to write up its gold assets of $4,034,867,780.67 on January 31, to $7,018,263,925.70 on February 1 with the cut in gold content of the dollar. This profit was paid directly into the general fund of tha treasury. A total of $2,000,000,000 of the profit will be used to establish the administration's stabilization fund. The remainder will be used for regular government expenditures. Several billions of dollars worth of capital which sought safety in London last summer from the decline in the dollars has begun to return to the United States. It is being attracted by tha assurance of at least temporary stability of the dollar, and the new field for investment with the gradual improvement in business conditions.

950 Million Aid is Voted By House.

Washington—A vote of 332 to 1 sent the $950,000,000 relief and civil works appropriation speeding to the senate for passage. The lone "no" was shouted by Terrell of Texas, a Democrat. The measure carries a provision to permit the federal relief administrator to make grants for relief within a state to a public agency without the consent of the governor. Under the existing relief act a governor has to request the funds. In submitting the bill, Chairman Buchanan, Democrat, Texas, explained that while $500,000,000 was to be allocated for direct relief, it was planned by the civil works administration to demobilize its workers with a view to having this labor absorbed by the public works administration and industry.

All Facing Liquor Trials Are Freed.

Washington—Anyone charged with violating the federal prohibition law and not yet tried, or who has been convicted and has an appeal pending in a higher court will go free. The supreme court so ruled in an unanimous decision handed down by Chief Justice Hughes. Justice department officials said it affected upwards of 9,000 cases, involving 13,000 or more persons.

Touhy Jury Deadlocked; New Trial.

Chicago—The state's attorney's office moved for an early retrial of kidnaping charges against Roger Touhy and two other Chicago gangsters after an initial attempt ended in a jury disagreement. The prosecution was forced to get a delay of an extradition order to England against John "Jake the Barber" Factor, its most important witness.

Gallipolis, Ohio—The steamer Senator Cordill, the largest packet on the Upper Ohio river, sank and two deck hands, both Negroes, were drowned. Tha packet is valued at $65,000. The boat went to the bottom when floating ice put holes in the hull. This is the third time the Cordell as been sunk.

JUDGE BOERNER UPHOLDS ACT FAVORING HOMESTEADS

A decision in favor of the small home owner was handed down today by Judge John W. Boerner, Ramsey county court.

He upheld as valid a law which reduces the assessed valuation of small homesteads from 40 per cent of full value to 25 per cent of full value in the cities, and from 33 1-3 to 20 per cent in rural areas.

The law applies up to $4,000 full value on the homesteads, any value above that amount being subject to the present assessment rates.

The measure, known as the homestead tax relief law, was attacked by A. W. Logan, St. Louis, Mo., who asked a temporary injuntion to restrain County Assessor E. A. Young, County Auditor George J. Ries and County Treasurer Elso M. Obst from assessing, spreading and collecting this year's taxes on the basis provided in the relief law, which was adopted at the regular 1933 session.

Mr. Logan's complaint charged that the law discriminated between like pieces of property merely because they yere not occupied as homesteads, or were so occupied.

FARMERS GETTING CROP CURB CASH BUREAU REPORTS

Producers Are Enthusiastic Over Corn-Hog Control Plan

County Farm Bureau offices are busy these days as farmers call by the hundreds to make arrangements for the 45-cent per bushel federal corn loans. Much greater activity awaits the Farm Bureau offices, however, in the corn-hog control signup. Educational meetings are being held in all the "corn belt" counties and a few counties have started sign-up work.

The drive will be under full headway within a week, it was learned at the state extension office, at University Farm.

Information received from County Farm Bureau offices throughout the state indicate that the corn-hog control plan is being accepted with even greater enthusiasm than was the wheat control sign-up, which already has placed $240, 065 in the pockets of Minnesota farmers, as a first installment on an estimated total of $1,709,000 to be paid Minnesota farmers for curtailing their 1934 wheat crop.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars also are being received by farmers from corn loans. In one county alone, Mower, farmers had on January 20, received $31,794.35 in cash from this source. Total received by farmers on January 20 was $589,473.58, of an estimated total of $2,000,000 that will be in the pockets of Minnesota farmers by March 1. The corn loan price is about a third higher than the price of corn at the time the loan plan went into effect.

Farmers have the option of turning the corn over to the government, when the loans fall due next fall, or paying from corn sales or other sources, so they will receive full benefits if the market should go above the loan figure.

While opposition to the wheat control plan was made in some quartera, and continues from these sources against the corn-hog control sign-up, farmers are practically unanimous in regarding the crop control plan as a highly desirable factor in increasing their cash income.

Many farmers have expressed their thanks to the Minnesota Farm Bureau and the American Farm Bureau for the part they played in securing passage of the crop control legislation last March, and for the work now being done by the Farm Bureau in making these benefits directly available to farmera.

County agents are now on duty in practically every county, either on a full time or emergency basis, in directing crop control work.

Farm Bureau units throughout the state also are taking an active part in setting up local Production Credit associations, through which farmers will receive improved credit facilities for general farming operations. In none of these activities are benefits limited to Farm Bureau membership, officers explain.

GRASSHOPPER SCOURGE PERIL NORTHWEST SURVEY SHOWS

tence in museums gave them their clue. They found that the tyo were identical. And now they are looking for possible long sustained migrations of these locusts from the badly infested areas to points hundreds of miles distant. They believe the only way to insure unidentified and distant areas against calamitons invasions is by stopping these migrations at their source.

The grasshopper migrations of 1873 to 1878 furnished the history of Minnesota with one of its most thrilling and dramatic chapters. An entire chapter in Folwell's History of Minnesota presents a graphic account of the effects of these many invasions on the pioneer agriculture of the state. "Their flights," writes an observer of one of these migrations, "May be likened to an immense snowstorm, extending from the ground to a height at which the eyes perceive then only as minute, darting scintillations. On the horizon they appear as a dust tornado, riding upon the wind like an omnious hailstorm."

Another says, "They circle in myriads about you—driving into doors and windows, beaping about your feet and buildings, and covering the ground two or three inches deep."

HOPPER AREA MAPPED AND MENACING PESTS SHOWN

The above map shows the areas badly infested with grasshoppers this year, based on egg surveys made in the fall of 1933. In black areas the infestation is very severe, in shaded areas, severe, and in dotted areas only local. The white areas are free from infestation. It is from this area of some forty million acres that possible migrations of locusts may be looked for this summer, unless the insects are controlled with poison bait. The insect at the lower left is the common variety of hopper somewhat enlarged. The insect at the right is the Rocky Mountain locusts also somewhat enlarged.

According to W. H. Larrimer, in charge of cereal and forage insect investigation for the United States Department of Agriculture, our lesser migratory grasshopper which has been so destructive the past two years is a direct descendant or near-relative of the Rocky Mountain locust. 'Apparently." says Dr. Larrimer, "the descendants of the locusts that plagued American farmers half a century ago lost some of the dangerous, particularly the habit of migration in immense swarms. This year, however, they seem to have reverted to type."

According to Mr. Aamodt, all the other varities of grasshoppers seem to be undergoing a marked change. The old-fashioned two-striped grasshopper, a relatively large insect so heavy that it ordinarily makes only several clumsy jumps before a turkey can catch it, is developing semi-migratory habits. In the infested Minnesota areas last summer this grasshopper could be seen soaring through air several hundred feet above the ground. Specimens of it were caught in the cabins of airplanes, two or three thousand feet in the air.

Development Natural.

"The development of these migratory habits is a natural one," says Mr. Aamodt. "The grasshoppers have multiplied so rapidly that in the badly infested areas the food supply has become insufficient to support them. Under this stress of threatening starvation, these insects have developed ways of migrating to places more abundant. All types of animal life develop similar characteristics under economic pressure."

So serious is the tsituation that an international conference was held at Fargo recently, to study the problem and work out emergency control measures. Official delegation from the eight states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebrasko, Wyoming, Montana, and Idaho attened this meeting. Similar delegations, headed by the minister of agriculture in Canada, were there from the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

When figures from the eight states were compiled, it was found that nearly 13,500,000 acres in the eight states will need applications of poison bait during the hatching season this spring. It was conservatively estimated that from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 acres in the three Canadian provinces are badly infested.

Quarter Million Sought

As a result of the conference, the eight states decided to ask for a Federal appropriation of $2,500,000 for the purchase and application of poison bait during the hatching season this year. It is reported from Washington that this amount has been budgeted by the administration and that congress will be asked by message of President Roosevelt to appropriate this money as an emergency measure. The Canadian government is working out ways and means to raise twice that amount for use this spring.

The plan to be used in all this area is the one worked out so thoroughly in Minnesota under Mr. Aamodt's supervision. So effective were the poison bait campaigns in this state in 1932 and 1933 that only $40,000 is to be used this spring for actual grasshopper eradication. All of the state, according to Mr. Aamodt, is now under complete control. Unless possible migratory invasions come from the north and west. Minnesota will be reasonably free of grasshoppers in a year or so.

The number of grasshopper eggs laid in the 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 acres of badly-infested territory last summer and fall is conceivably large. The mind of man is incapable of measuring it. Reliable report of canadian entomologists set the number of eggs laid in a single isolated square foot of ground in certain places in Canada at not less than 400,000. This is the maximum. It is estimated by Mr. Aamodt and others engaged in the work that the 40,000,00 to 50,000,000 acres now contain an average of at least 250,000 eggs per acre. Even allowing for a tremendous mortality when the tiny grasshoppers begin to emerge from the ground, the number that will survive under natural conditions is unbelievably large.

Grasshopper eggs are remarkably resistant to injury. Eggs that have been subjected to freezing temperatures of from 15 to 20 degrees below zero—a temperature rarely attained by the ground—have hatched. Eggs that have been immersed in water of moderate temperatures for from 50 to 100 days have hatched with no appreciable mortality. Because of these facts, and others, little if any injury to eggs now in the ground is looked for by spring.

One notural condition late this coming spring would work havok with eggs and newly-hatched grasshoppers. Should there be a fairly continuous period, wet weather in the infested areas from about the middle of May to late June, a large mortality would result. Unfortunately much of the infested territory rarely experiences this kind of weather. Scientists are not in a mood to rely much on this uncertain control measure. Experience has taught them this.

Up to the present time, the natural parasites of the grasshopper have not multipiled sufficiently to check the growth of the plague. In time, various bacterial and fungus diseases may gain such foothold that they will reduce the grasshopper population to normal limits, but as yet they have had little effect on it.

Students of the problem have become convinced that any successful control plan must be man-made. The liberal and systematic use of poison-bait is looked on as one of the only practical remeby. The unit of poison bait to be usel over all the infested area is 100 pounds of bran, two gallons of mollasses and five pounds of crude or white arsenic. Arsenate of lead is not strong enough. In many instances, 50 pounds of sawdust will be substituted for 50 pounds of the bran. This equal use of bran and sawdust has been found to be effective as the full use of bran. The sawdust can be brought much more cheaply than bran.

The poison bait is more effective when scattered in the morning. The grasshoppers do not feed at night, but begin eating voraciously when dawn comes. The old-type end-gate seeder, used so generally many years ago before the more modern seeddrill succeeded it, is used widely for the scattering of poison bait. An enormous amount of poison bait mixing and scattering machinery will be sold in the infested areas of the United States and Canada this spring. Each farmer will be asked to mix and scatter his own allotment of poison bait.

The Minnesota grasshopper control methods that will be copied so widely in other states and provinces this spring were worked out by A. G. Ruggles, state entomoloist; R. A. Trovatten, state commissioner of agriculture, and Mr. Aamodt.

MUSICAL ABILITY GREAT ASSET TO THE TRAINED MECHANICS

A considerable number of students who attend Dunwoody Institute from all parts of Minnesota not only love music but have learned to play some instrument. At the school they find an orchestra made up entirely of students. Anyone who has a musical instrument and can pay a little can get into the orchestra.

There a student enjoys the association with fellow musicians and improves himself as a player. He develops his school spirit by cooperating with other players and by entertaining the student body at assemblies when the orchestra plays.

One of the most interesting outcomes of this student orchestra, open to everyone, is that many of the boys who go out from the school carry with them to their trade an improved musical ability which they can use in two ways: Through the year they get increased pleasure from the music which they are able to play. They also find their services as a paid musician in demand after working hours, and in this way supplement their income.

counties will be sufficently well organized to insist that each and every delegate to the county convention be a dues-paying member. However, it is deemed necessary that no portion of our rank and file movement shall be denied representation in the formation of the principals and platform of the movement or in the selection of candidates for office to put such platform in operation.

"County conventions should be held on or before March 13. The county officers are hereby instructed to notify ALL DUES-PAYING members of the county convention. Also to personally, or by delegating someone in each township in which there are NO dues-paying members, arrange a meeting for the purpose of selecting TWO delegates from the township to attend the county convention. When meetings are called in townships with no dues-paying members, every effort should be made to secure a sufficient number of people, who are willing to become members, to form a local club. Pointing out to them that all of those who become members will be delegates to the county convention. Campaign work will be started in the near future and it will be a great advantage to have contact with local township chairmen in carrying on the work in an organization and efficient manner.

"If you have not adopted county by-laws, this should be done at the county meeting. Also where the county organization has not been completed, as to the selection of officers, an executive committee, or other committes, this may be done at this time.

"Credential blanks are enclosed As soon as the county convention has been held and delegates elected, please fill in credentials and return to this office. All credentials should be in the office of the secretary on or before March 23. We would also appreciate being advised the date of your county convention.

"Very truly yours,
"IRENE WELBY,
"Secretary-Treasurer."

Most Important in History

The convention of 1934 will be the largest and most important in the history of the Association to date. Representation will exceed any previous gathering. Only six counties remain unorganized. Of the 81 organized some have chartered clubs in avery township in addition to clubs in cities, towns and villages.

The action of the State committee providing for the seating in county conventions of delegates from unorganized townships assures the widest degree of popular representation.

Final Fall of Gavel

The forthcoming State convention of the Farmer-Labor Association will give voice to the will of the people of the state as no other gathering ever has done. Each club and every member should give the business of the convention his or her best thought and whole-hearted support between now and the final fall of the gavel.

The Nine Foot Channel And Costs of Transportation

This is the fourth of a series of eight articles dealing with the construction of the nine-foot channel in the Mississippi river.

The Upper Mississippi nine-foot channel is designed to stop transportation waste, to end the unnecessary drain on private and public resources which for years has been a justifiable complaint against the railroads. Those who think them the correct present and future economic picture of Minnesota and the rest of the valley region.

Many of these river opponents, and most other people as well, have been accustomed to see only two directions east and west, because the railroads have crossed the country latitudinally for nearly 100 years, and there has been little north and south movement.

This later vision fails to discern that much of our commercial and industrial development, and our social progress as well, might be enhanced if there were more the north-south traffic. There is no more reason for keeping the north separated from the south than there is tying up the east and west with monopolistic transportation system.

A recently published bit of railroad propaganda assailed the nine-foot channel as a waste of public funds, but the money spent on the river, unlike that harvested by the railroads, will stay here. It isn't going east.

Public money, invested in this greatest of all waterways, remains in the ownership and custody of the people, because they will still own the river, even after all the barge lines are in private hands. The cash subsidies, grants and dividends taken by the railroads always have been concentrated in the east.

The channel cost, then, cannot be a waste, because it not only pays wages to thousands of people, but represents a capitol investment in a public highway, owned, for all time, by the people. But when it comes to spending money in large amounts, the railroads hold the record.

Here are a few random facts and figures that afford an understandable composite picture of how money can be spread around. This data is from various but authentic sources, all of public record and largely of common knowledge, as isolated items. Here's the picture:

While the railroad mileage has remained almost stationary since 1911, total revenue has more than doubled, reaching a maximum of more than $6,000,000,000 in 1929, compared with less than $3,000,000,000.

The railroads of the country have over 30 per cent more stock and bonds outstanding against them than the amount of money for which they could be reproduced now. That's something like trying to make a $100 farm implement do a $130 job.

From 1910 to 1919, 20 railroads issued fictitious capital to the extent of $692,000,000, and dissipated $253,559,000 in paying special bonuses and dividends.

The Burlington, Southern Pacific Reading roads gave away in four months $161,000,000 in bonuses.

Aids, gifts and grants to class one roads have reached the staggering total of $956,383,000. The public not only gave the railroads nearly a billion dollars, but now is forced to pay dividends on it.

A total of 158,000,000 acres of land, equal to the acreage of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois, has been givn to the railroads and now draws dividends as part of their capital structure.

Several roads have paid dividends despite stock deficits.

Despite the steady increase in profits, the railroads, with almost no exceptions, have paid off no debts and up to January 1 this year had borrowed $272,000,000 from the government and now are borrowing still more to replace outworn or obsolete equipment.

L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson, declares there are 30,000 miles of unnecessary trackage in the country, costing $75,000,000 a year to operate and maintain.

Half the total ton-mileage of the country is carried on 26,000 miles of line, only 10 per cent of the total mileage.

It takes 37,000 other miles of line, or nearly 30 per cent of the total, to carry two per cent of the total ton-mileage.

The river of greatest traffic density, the Monogahola, cost $92,000 per mile to improve. The railroad of greatest traffic density, the Pittsburgh and Erie, cost $317,000 a mile.

Maintenance of the Monongahela costs $2,000 per mile, while the average of seven railroads of greatest traffic density is $3,000 a mile.

Even the national transportation committee, friendly to the railroads, was moved to comment that, "If the railroads had regarded themselves more accurately as purveyors of transportation, rather than as guardians of monopoly, they would have been more alert to take advantage of development in their field."

Despite the fact that validity of Minnesota's income tax law is being tested in the courts, returns on individual incomes for 1933 must be filed and at least half of the tax paid before March 15. Should the law be unconstitutional refunds will be made. All single persons with incomes more than $2,000 are subject to the tax and must file returns.

Sportsmen for years have been demanding greater and more effective enforcement of game and fish laws. Under the late W. D. Stewart their requests were complied with, the game warden force was enlarged and arrests of law violators reached the peak in the state's game and fish history. It so happened that while the force was enlarged receipts, because of the depression, dwindled and the game and fish fund was depleted. Stewart's crime seems to have been that of pleasing the sportsman. Were he alive today he would probably muse: "You're damned if you do and damned if you don't," and was Philosophic about it.

Governor Olson's request for a classification and ranking of all CWA projects is a virtual guarantee of the continuance of the work relief program in Minnesota. It also indicates that the program will be pushed forward vigorously along lines that will result in well co-ordinated and worthwhile accomplishment. Bias will be excluded from the ranking by the fact that five separate agencies will rank independently.

The feeling in certain quarters that CWA work benefits only the workers on the pay-roll is not borne out by the facts. Most of the projects in themselves are of value to the community and every local pay-roll brings just that much money into local circulation. In addition, there is a tidy little by-product, from the community standpoint: in December for example, the relief load in the state dropped from its November peak of $1,050,000 to nearly $750,000.

Exception has been taken in certain quarters to remark in this column on the recent organization of the Law and Order League, and its futility from the standpoint of law enforcement. Such organizations cannot possibly have the effect of curbing the activities of criminals and gangsters. Only the intelligent activities of efficient, official law enforcement agencies can do that, and these agencies must recieve their moral support from the entire body of society. What the official "law enforcement" organization generally resolve themselves into are groups of snoopers with overdeveloped inquisitive tendencies prying into the private affairs of law-abiding neighbors and makeing nuisances of themselves. When they are not that they are something worse, using their pious but hypocritical cloak of law enforcement to conceal movements to combat labor and progressive and liberal ideas that are fast gaining a firm foothold in government.

Although the applications were submitted and the assets successfully examined more than two months ago, no funds have been received from the R.F.C. by the state banking department for contemplated federal loans to eight closed banks in Minnesota. This was revealed by E. A. Benson, Commissioner of Banks. In addition to six Minneapolis closed banks, applications were made for loans to the State Bank and Trust Company of Redwood Falls and Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Dassel.

In a 12-page brief prepared by the Attorneys-General's office the State Commerce Commission answered the federal temporary restraining order which halted the Commission's sift of the Northwest Bancorporation stock deals. The answer presents two defenses, the first holding that the injunction violates Amendment 11 to the U. S. Constitution as it is in truth and effect a suit against the state. The second defense is a review of the state's reason for the investigation. It would seem to the average layman that this affair is wholly the state's business and, therefore, not subject to interference by the federal courts. The Northwest Bonco is incorporated in Delaware.

The committee of ten to survey the advisability of placing county and township roads into the state trunk system has held its initial meeting. It was decided to apply to the CWA for funds to carry on the investigation as no arrangements for expenses had been made when the Legislature asked Governor Olson to select such a board. The purpose of the committee is to determine whether part of the burden on real property might be shifted to gasoline and motor taxes. County and township roads are now supported largely by tax on property.

SO THIS IS ENGINEERING

Let it never be said that we refused to admit it when we have been in error. And we have been wrong, terribly wrong—woefully wrong. We hang our head in shame and grovel in the ashes of our humiliation. When some of our "leading citizens" insisted that we should have a "City Engineer", we were contrary, yea literally stubborn in our opposition. We insisted that the local talent already on the city's payroll was indeed sufficient to take care of the city's need in that respect, and that if more expert and technical knowledge should be required a consulting engineer could be secured when special occasion should require. From the depths of our abysmal ignorance, we were unable to see what was so clear to those "leading citizens" from the eminence of their superior business judgment and all-encompassing intelligence; that it would indeed take a man who had burnt much midnight oil pouring long and earnestly over textbooks, to direct the digging of trenches and pulling down of present streetlights weeks in advance of the receipt of cables for the new circuits. That it would take a man of natural ability and special training with protractors, dividers, graduated scales, T squares, triangles, irregular curves and other paraphanalia of the drafting room, to say nothing about the instruments of the surveyor to conceive and engineer the correct method of leaving those trenches, as well as those which have been dug for watermains unprotected, that they can constitute a proper mensce to life and limb of careless residents wending a homeward way thru darkened streets. Only a man with a whole flock of diplomas could be trusted to cut trenches into and across the state trunk highway system without first securing permission from the state highway department, and subsequently flaunt all state regulations for the safeguarding of pedestrians and motorists with signals and lanterns.

If advice from one as humble in station as ourselves is not presumptious, we would like to suggest that in lieu of the signals and lanterns of which there seems to be a shortage, that some of the diplomas of which there is now such a bountiful supply be posted conspiciously at exposed intersections and danger points.

THE PROFIT SYSTEM AND OUR DEGENERATING MORALS

Some time ago the Minneapolis Journal found it necessary to inform the people that it would not accept liquor advertising. At the same time they announced that they would accept beer and light wine advertising, "in the belief that their moderate use will discourage the use of 'hard' liquors," a conclusion which was probably easy to arrive at in view of the full page ads that they have been receiving from the breweries. Shortly thereafter our friend the mayor took occasion to remind our contemporary that it would be quite proper for it to take a similar stand.

Not more than three or four years ago a certain cigarette manufacturer started using the pictures of young women and feminine indorsement of his brand in his advertising. It was confined to billboards, because very few newspapers would accept such advertising. Today, very few refuse it.

In the Heyday of the old saloon, the sale of intoxicants was stopped by law at 11 o'clock and was not permitted on Sunday. Today, for all our loudvoiced abhorrence of the old saloon, we consider legalizing the sale of beer until one o'clock at night and on Sunday. In those days no respectable newspaper accepted advertising for beer nor hard liquor. Today the magazines and newspapers are resplendent with pictures of women imbibing freely.

Five years ago most cigarette manufacturers condemned the studied attempts being made by one certain manufacturer to make the adolescent girls and young women of our country addicts of the weed. Today, the manufacturers vie with each other in circulating advertising designed to bring the women to the use of their products. Ten years ago bank robbery was rare enough to make the front page of every daily in the nation. Today, (with most of the banks closed and thus out of the reckoning) they are so numerous that they are not mentioned in the papers outside of the city where the holdup occurs. Two years ago abductions and kidnapping was unusual. Today they are daily occurences. Businessmen stoop to tactics which they would not consider ten years ago. Men take chances on murder, death, life imprisonment, who would not take chances on a night "in" for disorderly conduct a few years ago. Newspapers accept advertising that were tabooed in the past. Theatres present plays that would have been closed by the police.

Surely, there is some basic cause for this deplorable let-down in morals, for it permeates the whole social register. It can be laid to only one thing, and that is a breaking down of the entire moral structure of the race. It is useless to say that it is merely the leveling of the moral standard of men and women. The passing of the so-called double standard is merely another visible effect of the disintregration of the entire structure. The real cause lays in the economic system.

We believe that the ever contracting vicious circle of the profit system is the cause of the so-called social evils as well as the let-down in the ethics. As technological unemployment due to increase in the use of labor saving machinery throws more and more of the people out of employment, as the ownership of this machinery brings the control of all production into ever fewer hands; as the mounting debt burden and interest centralizes the wealth of the nation in fewer and fewer masters of finance—thus does the buying power of the masses continually shrink and the surplus, which has been created with labor-saving machinery becomes harder and harder to dispose of. This continually shrinking active market makes cut-throat competition between those still able to hang on in business inevitable. More and more ethics are thrown to the wind in an Herculean effort to capture the sheckels that are ever harder to get and lower and lower will sink the morals. More and more chances will the young men and women, who are placed into this world thru no fault of their own, continue to take to get that subsistence which they feel they are entitled to until government will cease to exist thru sheer inability to enforce the laws and the entire race commits suicide thru degeneracy.

This may seem to many to be a morosa picture of the trend of the times, but we do not believe that it is overdrawn. And there is only one thing that can be done to arrest the disintregration of the race, and that is a determined effort to eliminate the profit motive from our daily lives. An economic system based on service and cooperation would encourage higher ethics, revive clean morals, build a race, healthy mentally, morally and physically. The present economic order, or rather disorder, is mass suicide.

WAR AND PROFITS
Stephen Messenger

When Johnny came marching home in '65 he was made to believe that he was a leader in public affairs, possessed of exclusive virtues acquired around camp fires. For a generation public affairs were dominated by the veterans. After the war with Spain most of the boys returned home disappointed in glories, but added to the veteran ranks.

The men who went to the World War returned home with questionable glory. But few of them on either side knew what it was all about, and killed and were killed under a system that not only filled a million graves but left a decidedly bad taste in the soldiers' mouths because of greed and graft that will never be told in histories. War at best is beastly, brutal, barbarous system designed to kill off a portion of the population that profits may accure to the few who are on the inside. The predominant sentiment has no measure of honor or glory—it is rather that of regret and resentment. Take the profits away and there will never be a war.

WHERE IS THE FEDERAL BLUE EAGLE?
Union Advocate

In all this hullaballoo about the NRA and the screaming blue eagle there is one glaring inconsistency which should be apparent to everyone.

Let it be remembered that the President personally asked congress to enact the national industrial recovery act, and that he, personally, wrote the blue eagle blanket code which provides for increased wages, shorter hours, reemployment and collective bargaining.

But there is no blue eagle over the U. S. post-office. There is no blue eagle over the federal civil service. And the blue bird of recovery is even less friendly to the army and navy.

The postal workers have never been over paid. As a matter of fact their average wage is never much over the level of subsistence. And no one can ever say the rank and file of the army has been overpaid.

Yet, one of the first acts of the President was to slash the pay of the overworked postal clerks, carriers and labors. These federal employees were given a 15% slash in wages as a temporary measure early last summer. A few days ago Mr. Roosevelt ordered this reduction continued for another half year. And in the 9th Corps Area headquarters of the army the enlisted men have seen their monthly wage of $21 reduced to $17.85, while 300,000 members of the CCC are paid $30 per month.

Slashing the pay of postal workers and enlisted men as an act of public economy while great air, and ocean transportation corporations take milions of dollars each month for doubtful postal transportation services is not consistent with good common sense.

And last, but not least, it would seem that Uncle Sam would at least set the pace for private industry by floating instead of flaunting the blue eagle over the federal buildings and army barracks.

EXILES FROM THE HOMELAND
(Minneapolis Journal)

Thomas Mann, German novelist with an English name, has hidden himself in his villa, La Tranquille, in a secluded pocket of the French Riviera, a spot that cannot be found on the map.

Mann was under no compulsion to leave his home in Munich. The Nazi officials offered him a chair in the University and literary honors without end—and without result. He was not able to live comfortably in a country against whose policies he bitterly rebelled.

"How can I remain silent," Mann told a visitor "when I see everything that has been sublime in German culture, thought and living, suddenly turn to ashes? How can a man who has always felt that liberty is the greatest human possession live there where only oppression, tyranny and hate exsist?"

How indeed? Finding exile was the only alternative, Mann, with his family and his books, went to his present abode in the French Riviera. "I love France," he says, "but France is not home to a man who is German in heart and soul."

One wonders sometimes how many of the old German breed, those who are not driven out of Germany of the Nazi regime, find themselves forced out of their own country by themselves and by their outraged ideals of liberty and fraternity. Mann is one such and there must be many others, from whom the world hears nothing, waiting in countries adjacent, hoping sometime to return to a homeland nearer to their ideals and their hearts' desires.

(St. Paul Daily News)

THE BIG TRAGEDY

Netiher civilized nor uncivilized people send their children to war to be killed and maimed. Yet in this depression, 5,500,000 children are victims.

Five and a half million children were on relief rolls Nov. 1. Many of them will die of diseases which proper nutrition could have warded off. Many of them will bear in their bodies and souls the scars of this experience.

And as long as they live their outlook on life will be shaped by the fact that in early years starvation was the rule and what food there was came in a charity basket, or by means of a grocery order.

That is what we have allowed to happen during the four years of depression. There have been other casualties and other tragedies but this is the most dreadful and the most stupid. It has been the most dreadful not only for the children, but for the parents who could have endured for themselves but whose hearts broke for their babies.

We should not have allowed it to happen. We should never have endured the cruel passive of officials who refused year after year to act. What ever else happened we should not have let children go unnourished.

Today the parents of these children are on civil works payrolls receiving wages which at least can buy adequate food.

But the problem is not solved. No way has yet been found for making these parents permanently self-supporting nor these children permanently secure. We must never relax our efforts until the way is found, and until we have made sure, so far as it is humanly possible, that their tragedy will not be repeated.

WEEKLY WASHINGTON LETTER
BY
Congressman Paul John Kvale

Quick action is promised when Congress next week considers the deficiency appropriation bill which carries just a little less than a billion dollars for continuation of the CWA and emergency relief programs. Large as it is, this fund nevertheless is designed to insure continued expenditure on the present scale only until May first, on the average it may close earlier in the southern states, and continue beyond that where climatic conditions require. Revolt in the House seems effectivey stopped by the administration leaders' tactics; they will bring it up under suspension of rules, debate it only forty minutes, then pass it on to the Senate.

There, however, a serious effort will be made to increase the amount to insure resumption of these activities in the fall, when Congress will not be in session, but when all the House and a third of the Senate seek reelection. Obviously, the pressure from four million voters and those dependent upon them, now employed in these works, casts its shadow before. And there are thinking Members of Congress, not persuaded by the political considerations, who see the danger of departing from a program just when it is beginning to funtion efficiently and aid in the resumption of at least a degree of business activity in the smaller as well as the larger centers.

It is supposed that the President is not at all averse to seeing these amounts increased to a reasonable degree, but that he purposely is leaving it to Congress instead of asking himself. The House will not have that responsibility, due to the strategy of its leaders. If the Senate does boost the sum, it is almost certain the House will follow. And speed is essential, for the CWA is right now sweeping out the corners of its financial bin.

* * * *

Funds for public works apparently face a more dangerous future. The ambitious program for the current year is in for a sharp curtailment, uness some of us can succeed in amending or altering the administration policy in the next few days, before it is announced. Conferences have been numerous with the White House the Secretary of the Interior, who is also administrator of public works, the Budget Director, and others charged with this responsibility. Interest of a number of liberal Senators has been enlisted.

And yet it seems that the amount suggested in the President's budget message will be adhered to. That is $500,000,000—half of what is carried for the emergency supply bill next week for permanent public works for the next fiscal year. And that includes the so-called non-federal loans, about three-fourths of which are covered by adequate collateral in each loan, so that that amount will eventually return to the treasury. It seems difficult in the extreme to understand the inconsistency of expanding tremendous sums as outright gratitudes of a non-permanent character while the constuction program launched on such an ambitious scale last year is to be pinched off so abruptly.

One effect of it, if adopted, will bring to a virtual standstill the highway construction and maintence program in the various states which has been such a steadying employment influence. Another will be to remove public construction from the employment picture at the time when its first effects were beginning to be noted both in the buiding trades as well as among the large group of allied trades and industries which supply the raw materials. And every bit of this is inseparably linked in with the purchasing power of the public which means in computable dollars and cents figures a rise in the commodity prices that mean life and death to the farmer. This will be a major issue when it reaches Congress, but the fight is right now in progress among those who are canny enough to see when and where the most effective work can be put in.

* * * *

Again, another strange action was recorded when the House appriations committee disregarded the request of the President, the Director of the Budget, the Director of the federal Employment of Labor, disregarded the promise to the States embraced in the Wagner bill which became law last year, and hamstrung the new employment and re-employment agencies throughout the nation by virtually cutting their money in half for the next year.

Apparently willing to spend a billion on temporary work in a few months, it takes the very agency which has been responsible for the wise spending of this sum, and which is responsible for the search and placement of permanent and suitable employment for those who have temporary, part time jobs or no work at all, and weakens this agency cruelly if indeed it does not wreck that organization.

HOW GOD CREATED A WOMEN
According to Hindu Mythology.
Contributed

At the begining of time; Twashtri, created the world. But when he wished to create a women, he found that he had employed all his materials in the creation of man. There did not remain one solid element. Then Twashtri, perplexed, fell into a profound meditation from which he aroused himself and proceeded as follows:

He took the roundness of the moon, the undulations of the serpent, the entwinement of the clinging plants, the trembling of the grass, the slenderness of the rose vine, and the velvet of the flower, the lightness of the leaf and the glance of the fawn, the gaiety of the sun's rays the tears of the mist, the inconstancy of the wind and the timidity of the hare, the vanity of the peacock and the softness of the dawn on the throat of the swallow, the hardness of the diamond, the sweet flavor of honey and the cruelty of the tiger, the warmth of fire, the chill of snow, the chatter of the jay and the cooing of the turtle dove.

He combined all these and formed a women. Then he made a present of her to man.

Eight days latter the man came to Twashtri and said

"My Lord: the creature you gave me poisons my existence; she chatters without rest, she takes all my time, she laments for nothing at all. And is allways ill, take her back; and Twashtri took the women back.

But eight days later the man came again to the God and said:

"My Lord, my life is very solitary since I returned this creature, I remember how she danced before me, singing. I recall how she played with me, clung to me. Give her back to me" And Twashtri rturned the women to him.

Three days later Twashtri saw the man coming to him again.

"My Lord," he said, "I do not understand exactly how it is, but I am sure that the woman causes me more annoyance then pleasure, I beg you relieve me of her."

But Twashtri cried: "Go your way and do the best you can"

And the man cried: "I can not live with her!"

"Neither can you live without her!" replied Twashtri.

And the man went away sorrowfully, murmuring: "Woe is me, I can neither live with her nor without her."

GOVERNOR OLSON DECLARES FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP
By
Henry G. Teigan

Governor Floyd B. Olson threw a bomb shell into the camp of his political enemies last week when he espoused the cause of Mayor Mahoney and the Farmer-Labor endorsed candidates in the St. Paul municipal campaign.

The Governor's entry into the St. Paul campaign was accompanied by that of Attorney General Harry H. Peterson, who managed Mayor Mahoney's campaign two years ago.

The thing that makes the St. Paul city campaign of so much importonce at this time is that the Laborites have declared for municipal ownership of light and power. The proposed municipal plant will be approved or rejected by the voters of St. Paul at the primary election on March 6. This is I believe, the first instonce that this very important issue has been brought directly before the voters of any large city in Minnesota in recent years. True, the Farmer-Laborites have long declared for public ownership of all public utilities, but up to date no direct attempt has been made to establish a publicly-owned plant in either of the Twin Cities.

Solution in Public Ownership

It is becoming more obvious each day that the only solution of the public utitity issue lies in public ownership. Students of government and and politics have realized the utter failure of regulation right from the beginning, but now the worker and business man are equally convinced of this fact. One of the things that has given a boost to the cause of public ownership is the "Roosevelt-Norris" program for government operation of the huge Muscle-Shoals hydro-electric plant. This proposal of Senator Norris was fought vigorously by the power crowd (and vetoed by Presidents Coolidge and Hoover. but with the election of President Roosevelt in November 1932, the Nebraska Senator's efforts were crowned with success.

Private Company Rates High

Then, to, it is only too apparent that the rates of such companies as the Northern States Power Company are exceptionly high. The people of the Twin Cities are today paying a rate for electric current that is from 100 to 200 percent more than is being charged for similar service in cities having municipally owned plants. Tacoma, Seattle, Los Angeles Winnipeg and toronto are typical of the larger cities owning their own light and power systems. The rates in those cities are on the average less than half of those exacted by the Northern States Power company in the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Governor Olson and Attorney General Paterson deserve credit for going down the line for the Farmer-Labor program in such contests, as the one now in progress in St. Paul. It is positive proof that these men are not mere job holders, as were some of their predecessors, but are responsive to the needs of the people as well as loyal to their party's pledges, made prior to their election to office.

SING IN THE SPRING OF THY YOUTH
Translated from Norse

Sing throughout thy spring of life
All the joy thou knowest;
Song will banish care and strife,
Whereso'er thou goest,
And thy joyfull song of youth
Shall return to thee in truth,
Echoing thy Summer.

When thy hair is turning gray
In thy life's September,
Songs begin to fade away;
With the coming of December,
Sweetly then thy song of youth
Shall return to thee, in truth,
Echoing thy summer.

PROWLERS LOSE TO WARREN IN FIRST GAME IN AUDITORIUM

overtime ended with the score 19 all.

In the second overtime neither team was able to score from the field and the deciding point came when the local timekeeper misinformed Coach Dooley on the number of times a player had entered the game. As a result Warren was awarded a technical foul shot which was made good by Knutson, Warren captain and which proved to be the winning point.

It appeared that the Prowlers were somewhat lost on the large auditorium floor and were short-winded due to the added exercise.

In the preliminary game the Prowler reserves had things all their own way as they outscored the Warren lads 2to 1, and finished the game fovcred 43 to 23. The young Prowlers showed plenty of class. They played a nicely organized and systematic game in contrast to the slip-shod game of the first string.

First string scorers were, Captain Dahl, 1; Nicholson, 2; Kielty 3; Langseth, 4; Swanson, 2 and Korstad, 7. In the Preliminary game, Jung, 8; Nelson, 5; Lee, 12; Van Pelt, 6; Hermanson 12.

This Friday the Prowlers will play Crookston in this city. Crookston has improved rapidy recently and last defeated the strong East Grand Forks team. With Crookston preparing to make a determined effort to round out the season leading the distict this game is expected to be another of those hair raising things. We'll bet on the Prowlers.

DEBATE SPONSORED AT THE GERVAIS-ALERT CLUB MEET DRAWS CAPACITY AUDIENCE

The Wildwood school in Gervais township was filled to overflowing last Friday evening, when a debate was staged on the question, "Resolved, that the Farmer-Labor Party is the Third Party of Capitalism." Many late arrivals were unable to get in and had to turn away. The debate which was sponsored by the Gervais Alert Farmers' Club, was held in conjunction with the annual meeting of that institution.

Following the report of the secretory and the treasurer, and the election of officers of the club for the coming year, at which H. C. Arlt was reelected President and Anton Halvorson secretory, the debate was on.

Ed. Bauman of Bagley, upholding the affirmative side of the question, cited instances where police under a Farmer-Labor Administration had "cracked skulls" in subduing ricting and asserted that clubs in the hands of Farmer-Labor policemen hurt just as much as those in the hands of Republican or Democratic policemen. He blamed Governor Olson and Representatives Melby and Day for alleged discriminations and delay in relief work in Clearwater county. The remedy for our social inequalities is for the farmers and workers to arise and overthrow the Capitalistic system he said.

In upholding the negative side of the question, R. M. Aalbu said he was not prepared to debate on the relief situation in Clearwater county, for he hasn't been there and knows nothing about the situation. 'The question' he said, "is whether or not the Farmer Labor party seeks to maintain this so called Capitalistic system of society."

He read from the "Declaration of Principles" of the Farmer Labor association and from the preamble of the Farmer Labor party platform declaring for the establishment of a Cooperative Commonwealth. "We can have the cooperative commonwealth anytime we want it" he said, "a we won't have to shoot anyone to get it. The American revolution was fought 150 years ago and we gained all that can be gained by any revolution when we gained the power of selfgovernment. If we do not know how to use it after we have it, no revolution will help us." He charged that the Communists are either 'rattleheads' or in the employ of the capitalists trying to foment a revolution that could be used as an excuse for clamping a military dictotorship upon the people and the limitation of the franchise. He asserted that the communists have opposed and attempted to obstruct every piece of legislation ever proposed, to lighten the burden on the workers and the farmers. "Most of the people wouldn't know a cooperative commonwealth if they saw it," he said, "and if the American people were suddenly transplanted into such a system of society, they would be in the same position as a fish thrown up on dry land and told to walk,—they wouldn't know how to go about it." The Farmer-Labor party seeks to bring about a cooperative commonwealth by election and organization and a gradual rebuilding of the present economic system, he contended.

Ostrander, Home Demonstration Specialist from the University Farm, at St. Paul.

A discussion on "How to Serve Canned Meats" will bring out many new and interesting ways which will increase the popularity of canned meat in the home, county agent R. M. Douglass stoted. "Most farms have poultry, hogs, cows and sheep to provide meat, and by knowing how to can propery, they should have a good meat supply thruout the entire year,"

Junior Blademen Lose Two Games to E. G. F.

Battling the Grand Forks Central high school hockey team on the local rink last night the Junior blade-team lost a fast and furious game 2 to 1.

Taking the lead late in the first period, when Berling and Hellquist carried the rubber down the ice and shoved it into the visitors net on a wild scramble, the locals led until in the second period when the East siders broke away for two counters to finish the scoring for the evening.

During the final minutes of play the local virtually bombarded Central high's net in a vain effort to tie up the Grand Forks goal guard had 19 stops while the local goalie had only 11 stops.

H. W. HICKS LOSES AT CWA HEARING HELD WED. FEB. 14

Case Was Heard by Davidson Kirkconnel and Evenson

The squabble which developed between H. W. Hicks, local electrician and the City Engineer, Mr. Viebahn over whether or not Mr. Viebahn had authority to discharge a CWA worker was given an airing before the County Board of Commissioners sitting as the CWA board on Tuesday forenoon, but no satisfactory decision was reached. The hearing was sceduled to be reoponed on Wednesday but a new order was received from the CWA administration in the meantime which sets up a grievance board and the hearing was finally set for the afternoon at two o'clock before this new board. This board which is composed of the certifying officer, Mr. Kirkconnel, the county reemployment manager, Mr. Davidson, the county engineer Mr. Erickson and the county relief officer Mr. Evenson took the matter under advisement at that time with the result that Mr. Hicks was to remain on the CWA list but would not be allowed to go back on duty as a lineman's helper, the position which he held when the trouble started, nor would he be allowed to work again on that particular project.

Mr. Hicks was represented at the hearing by attorney H. O. Berve and Mr. Viebahn was represented by the city attorney, Theo. Quale. The charge against Mr. Hicks stated that he was guilty of insubordination and inefficiency. In defense Mr. Hicks stated that he complained to the engineer that some of the work was not being properly done, mentioning specificalty certain wire splicing. He could not get the engineer to investigate, he said. Mr. Viebahn explained his refusal to investigate by saying that he thought Hicks was trying to get the foreman, Mr. Hendrickson's job. He instructed Hicks to get back on the job and obey orders, he said.

The examination brought out the fact that Hicks has 27 years experience as an electrical worker.

LeRoy Olson, 7 Years Old, Bitten by Dog

LeRoy Olson seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Junie Olson, was severely bitten in the face by a dog while he was in the vicinity of the Washington school Monday, February 12. He was taken to a doctor to have the wound dressed. The wounds are healing nicely and there is no more apparent danger. Special care should be taken to treat all dog bites as very serious injuries, physicians state, as rabies may result from the bite of an apparently healthy dog and once the disease has gotten a start it is impossible to stop. Medical men urge that persons bitten should go at once to a physician for treatment for any and all wounds that you may get from a dog for no matter how harmless they appear they may cause infection.

Grind Your Axe and Enter the Chopping Contest, Win Fifty Dollar Prize, 'Easily'

All the "Paul Bunyans" from this territory will have an opportunity to make some "easy money" Friday, Feb. 23, at 9:30 a m on the vacant lot north of the post office

Peter McLarin, champion wood chopper of the world, offers $50 to any man that can cut a log in two, in fifty per cent more time than he requires to cut the same log. In other words, Mr. McLarin will lose if he cannot cut thru the log in two-thirds the time required by his opponent. The log which is 14 inches in diameter will be on display in front of the Kelly Hardware store Thursday.

It is probably "unfair" that Mr. Mc Larin does not know of the high class competition he will meet here, in a city that used to be the largest logging center in northern Minnesota. Bearing this in mind, the local wood choppers will probably be loath to put forth their best efforts.

Mr. McLarin is brought here under the auspices of the Oen Mercantile company and the Kelly Hardware. He comes from the Farwell, Ozmun Kirk company of Duluth, wholesale hardwara dealers as a representative of the Action Tool company of Philadelphia. The only restriction placed on the contestonts is that they cannot use a Pumb One Piece axe. Mr. Mc Larin will try to demonstrate the superiority of this particular tool.

Mr. McLarin hails from Australia and storted his wood chopping career in that country. (We think that's bad for Mr. McLarin for Australia is known as the treeless continent) He has travelled all over the world staging wood chopping contest in circus and vaudeville acts. He will come to Thief River Falls from Baudette on Thursday evening and will leave here Friday to be at Bemidji in the afternoon to stoge a similar contest at that place.

Some of the local boys who are in the habit of "letting the chips fall where they may" are said to be grinding their axes and preparing to give Mr. McLarin a logging camp reception.

RELIEF FUND IS DEPLETED FED. MONEY SOUGHT

County Officers to go to Saint Paul Seeking Money For Relief

A great deal of the county boards time during the February meeting was spent on a discussion of poor relief problems and ways of handling the situation. It was decided to make a determined effort to secure federal aid as a great number of the counties of the state are now doing. This will serve in a large measure to lighten the load on local communities.

Harry Fowler, county auditor, and Paul Lundgren, county attorney, will go to St. Paut next week to confer with the state relief board. They will take with them figures showing the financial condition of the county in order to try to qualify for aid.

County poor fund bills for the month of January totaled about $1,300 in addition to this there were considerable bills from previous months. A detailed account of relief received in 1933 will be given in connection with the county financial statement to be published shortly.

The auditor's and treasurer's reports were approved by board, there being a balance in all funds excepting the county poor fund and the county aid road fund. $105.358.66 was in the treasury at the end of the year this included a road and bridge fund balance of $19,744.74 out of which $15,000 in warrents were called January 1.

$877.88 was appropriated to Rocksbury township to cover the cost of grading county aid road now completed. A group of Norden folks appeared to ask for an extension of county aid road No. 12 but the matter was laid over. A group of Goodridge people asked for a tax adjustment on the old hotel out of which it is planned to make a CWA gymnasium. A report was submitted on the cost of operating of the Oakland-Park Satitorium, which cost is the lowest of any similar sized sanitorium in the state, by Dr. O. F. Melby. A resolution was passed by the board to issue refunding bonds on ditches where payments were extended last year for a five year period.

Mrs. Mable Jenkins entertained a birthday party for her son Robert who celebrated his seventh birthday games were played and lunch served.

OPPOSING PETITION IS READ AND TABLED

Mayor Clarifies His Stand in Public Statement Today

A large gallary of citizens attended the meeting of the city council Tuesday evening when the new beer ordinance was slated to get its third reading and come to a vote. A petition protesting against the late closing hours specified in the new measure and against the sale of beer on Sunday, signed by 35 businessmen and professional men of the city was presented and read and was tabled on motion by Alderman Knight seconded by Alderman Griebstein without discussion. On rollcall only Alderman Christofferson voted against the ordinance.

The mayor, whose stand on the new ordinance had been in doubt, clarified his position in a statement in tha "Public Forum" of the Thief River Falls Times today and is apparently favoring the measure.

"On Sale" beer licenses were granted to James Cosgrove, William Sheedy and Harry Fry to take effect as soon as the new ordinance becomes law.

Resolutions were adopted authorizing applications prepared by District CWA engineer Frisbie for a sewage disposal plant and a municipal airport for this city. THE WETS TAKE ROPE ENOUGH TO HANG THEMSELVES

Perhaps we are ornery, and just plumb impossible to satisfy, at any rate we freely confess that we are far from satisfied with the manner in which the beer and liquor situation has been and is being handled. When the Eighteenth Amendment was enacted we opposed it, arguing that it had no place in the constitution and that you can not legislature morals into people anyway. Yet when the repeal election came along, we opposed repeal. We were against repeal becuuse nothing better was proposed by the wet crowd. When they told us that we should first repeal the amendment and talk about regulation later, we were skeptical. We feared that if the law was repealed or altered first, before any substitute had been agreed upon, the wet crowd would run away with the show. We believe that most people will agree that this is just about what has happened.

There were probably a great many flaws in the old ordinance regulating the sale of beer in this city. For one thing, we could see no justification for the council setting itself up as judge and jury to hold hearings in cases of alleged violations of the ordinance. We thought it the function of the Municipal Court to handle that part of it. On the other hand, we also feel that it was sufficiently liberal as to hours. If any person can't consume his share of beer from six o'clock in the morning until eleven o'clock at night his capacity is beyond any hope of filling and all night hours will not be any better. Certainly there is no excuse for Sunday sale. If moral and religious reasons can not be considered valid by our present administration, then certainly ordinary sound business ethics should dictate a reasonable closing hour.

Even when the saloons were in their prime we prohibited sale on Sunday and after eleven o'clock at night, and yet many people who quite fervently declared that they would not want to see a return to the old saloon are willing to apologize for Sunday beer sale.

The third reading and passage of the new beer ordinance by the city council Tuesday evening had all the earmarks of a cut-and-dried proposition. When a petition signed by 35 businessmen and professional men of the city was presented, protesting against passage of the new ordinance, it was promptly tabled on motion by Alderman Knight, seconded by Griebstein. When the roll was called on the passage of the ordinance, only one alderman voted against it; Mr. Christofferson. We predict that he will be able to point to that vote with a great deal of satisfaction in less than six months.

Now those who claim to be in the "know" are not agreed on whether or not the mayor will sign the new ordinance. Some seem to think that he will repeat the performance of last spring and "duck" out of town, thus passing the buck to the President of the council. Whether or not he signs it is beside the point. It is now quite clearly established that it was drawn and passed with his full knowledge and consent, and we wonder how the members of the Lutheran Free church which has always been noted for its militant anti-liquor stand will react to such action on the part of one of its clergy.

The part the mayor is playing in this matter should establish beyond question the truth of the charge made during the city campaign last fall, that the mayor had the entire confidence and full support of the wet crowd.

THE DAILY NEWS SHEDS CROCODILE TEARS

Well, well, isn't that too bad, even the kidnapping racket is experiencing a deplorable let-down in ethics if we are to believe the St. Paul Daily News. In lamenting the treatment accorded to Mr. Bremer by his abductors in an editorial in Saturday's News they say "He was deprived of even reasonable comforts and frequently without sufficient food." In the case of the Hamm abduction, they say that the kidnappers treated him well and returned him in a few days.

It's sure getting tough. The old economic pinch is just about making it impossible for all of us. Why not another law to provide jail sentences for kidnappers that run away with our wealthy brewers and bankers and hold them in captivity without proper bathroom facilities and table de hote dinners?

There is no defense for kidnappers of course. Nevertheless, the kind of drivel that the St. Paul News indulges in rather grates on our nerves when we remember that on our trips up and down Wabasha avenue in St Paul last winter we saw unemployed men, with bare toes protruding from worn out shoes, without proper clothing, many without overcoats, huddling on street corners or leaning against the railing around the old capitol grounds, cold, hungry, down and out, all hope gone, all ambition quelched panhandling some passer-by for a dime with which to appease the gnawing in their stomachs. And the Daily News shed no tears for them. When Mayor Mahoney was moving heaven and earth to secure funds to provide for these unfortunates all the Daily News and other St. Paul dailies could see was the increased tax burden on the Hamms and the Bremers.

If the weathy are being subjected to a reign of terror it is as a direct result of their own legalized racketeering and no amount of "coordination of police forces" or "Vigilante Committee" will stop it. We could turn the country into an armed camp with machine gun redoubts at every crossroad and gangland would still find a way to beat the game. Strentbening the enforcement is treating the effect and not the cause of lawlessness.

For a century and a half we have allowed to grow up in our country a system which puts a premium upon honesty. A system which makes it increasingly difficult for people to be lawabiding, and under such conditions it is idiotic to talk about wiping out gangsters and racketeering. Ninety-nine percent of crime is premeditated and cold-blooded. Give every human an opportunity to earn a comfortable living by honest efforts and that ninty-nine percent of crime will disapoear. Allow the the conditions which foster crime to remain and it is only a matter of time 'till government will cease to exist thru sheer inability to enforce its laws. Government admitted defeat in the case of the eighteenth amendment and it was repealed. So far as effective enforcement is concerned, government might as well admit defeat in the case of abductions and bank robbery, it can not enforce its prohibitions. These are cold, hard facts which our wealthy friends might well consider next time they feel inclined to duck income taxes, graft in air and ocean mail contracts or spend millions in blocking progress towards a cooperative commonwealth.

READER VOICES PROTEST AGAINST FORUM'S CRITICISM OF CITY ADMINISTRATION

Dear Friend Editor:

After reading your editorial about Engineering we must voice a humble protest against your criticisms of the Engineer, Mayor Tungseth and the City Administration. We now have a fearless Mayor who seems to have found himself and a business mens administration led by the Commecial club and the beer men, and they are entitled to our commendation.

So far as the city printing that you were so excited over, what real difference does it make if the Mayor and the city council let that go to the highest bidder. The taxpayers as a whole foot the bill, and the people of the city would never have known about it if you had not called attention to it. We went to one of the leaders of the Commercial Club, and one of our busted bankers and had them figure it all out for us and find that it only amounts to one small fraction of thirty cents on each taxpayer. Both these men know how to figure and spend other peoples money just like Mayor Tungseth so I am sure they are correct.

What I like about the new council is that they have sense enough to pay their political debts and reward their friends. That's why they gave the printing to the Times. That's why they hired a man to come here and look over the books and papers of the city at a cost of only $500 to the old town.

If the Forum only understood good business it would thank Mayor Tungseth for bringing Engineer Viebahn from Hibbing. He's a young engineer who wears his white collar very becomingly and who knows how to stand and look on while he orders his men to work in the dirt. If the Forum will leave him alone end give him a chance we are sure he will soon be able to run our Electric Light Plant without any Diesel engines at all, and save the city the entire fuel bill. Then we will not mind the loss of the $15,000 from the government. Mister Viebahn is a new man brought here from the outside. We had a lot of old fogies here that we ought to get out of the way. Engineer Viebahn gets only $175 a month in his new job. That is $2100 per year and the busted banker and his friends from the Commercial Club said that too amounted to littla or nothing sa long as you take it out of other peoples money.

So far as the salaries of the old city council and the city lawyer, why make such fuss? It is good economy to hold back on other peoples money sometimes. It shows fine judgment, I am sure. Mayor Tungseth knows what he is doing, by holding back and not signing the salary checks for the old council and the old city lawyer he can save enough money for the city so that they can let him make a few more trips to tha Cities to see his friend Governor Olson. You can be sure the Mayor knows just what he is doing in this.

And then there is that old beer ordinance. I am glad the council has sense enough to repeal the old thing. Why should not the drinking places be allowed to keep open on Sunday and until 1 o'clock at night. Give the restaurant men a chance to make a dollar if they can sell a little more beer. I am sure the Mayor will be with the council on this. He is a liberal minister and sure will not stand in the way of progress here at home. He was a little timid and ducked when it came to signing the old ordinance, but I am sure he will now do his part and sign up for the new deal on beer. He owes it to the wet crowd that supported him during the campaign. Depend upon it he will find a way.

Give the Mayor and the Commercial Club and the beer men a chance and they will show us how to run the city, and the county also. Give us a dozen more places selling beer. Competition is the life of trade and if the beer men want five or six more places selling beer why let them have it.

Jst be cool and take your time Mr. Editor. I am sure the new city administration will be economical and save the city money and at the same time show us a good, clean, wide open town that we can all be proud of with a preacher and old time experienced saloon keepers sitting down together and taking part in the city government I am sure we will have a good town.

Now Mr. Aalbu I want this printed in the Forum as a protest against your editorials. If I am wrong go ahead and say so and give me the dickens all you like. I have tough skin. I like your paper and read it right along, but sometime your editorials are strong stuff.

Your respectfully,
S. P. Olson.

The Liberal Digest

ISSUES AND MEN

An Editorial fram the Nation by Oswald Garrison Villard

Mr. Mills makes an interesting speech. That one must admit even when one recall how ludicrously wrong he was in many of his utterances and forecasts when he was Mr. Hoover's Sec. of the Treasury. He delivers his speechs, moreover, in the best House of Commons manner which is paying him compliment, he clothes his thoughts in excellent language. His address in Topeka on January 29 seems to me by all means the best criticism yet made of the President's policies from the other side and his statement of the duty of the opposition was historically correct and well put.

What interested me most about this speech, however, was Mr. Mill's reference near the end of his address to the tariff problem. He felt compelled to defend himself for making it, and recalled the last words of McKinley before he was assassinated as a justification lest he be charged with party treason. They ought to be on the walls of every Democratic and Republican clubhouse in the country: "A system which provides a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued and healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in the fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing." Refering to our lost foreign markets and the necessity of restoring purchasing power at home and also of promoting "a greater prosperity and a higher standard of living the world over," Mr. Mills correctly declared that "we will have to abandon the present policy of isolation and intense nationalism and to some extent modify recent tariff practices." Precisely. Henry A. Wallace brilliantly illuminated one phase of the situation not long ago when he declared that we must either change our tariff policy or abandon 50,000,000 acres of land and find new employment for the huge population which now makes some kind of a living by tilling them. But that is only one phase of the problem. The plight of our manufactors is equally grave unless we r vise our whole crazy tariff system. That Mr. Mills can see this and speak out for it when he is one of the outstanding members of the high-tariff Republican Party is an extremely encouraging sign; it ought to make President Roosevelt finally decide to take up a question about which he thus far been extremely vague. The President seems to be without true understanding of the need of the haur and the tariff's relation to national recovery. This is the more remarkable because he has at his elbow one of the greatest tariff exports in America, Secretary Hull.

But when Mr. Mills spoke this fine words about aiding the return of "greater prosperity and a higher standard of living the world over," he betrayed the protectionista and he cannot deny it. For the basic principle of American protection has always been utterly selfish without the highest interest in the other fellow across the seas. We have never considered the effect of our tariffs upon other nations. We have frankly said that they might go the hell for all we cared. When we have been told that our tariffs were injoring working people abroad by further depressing their wages and standards of living, as their employers sought to decrease costs in order still to sell goods over here, your true Republican has said that the foreigner could starve if he pleased. The protected beet-sugar grower in Colorado is usually rather pleased if you tell him that the tariff on sugar he bought and paid for be campaign contributions and other favors to politicians has brought the Cubans to despaid and starvation. He calmly says, "What of it? Nobody is looking after us but ourselves." When Mr. Mills begins to express the humanitarian and economically wise desire to help the rest of the world recover, he is undermining the very foundations of the selfish, nationalistic protective system.

Mr. Mills was also excellent in protesting against the new doctrine of isolation, "autarchy," as it is called. This is the latest panacea—dear little Jimmie Gerard heading a society which was discovered that we can do away with poverty in America completely isolating ourselves, buying only the essential things we cannot produce, and "cutting loose from the poverty of Europe"! To such as Jimmie, Mr. Mills makes the following complete answer: "A practically completely self-contained and controled national economy can doubtless be attained, but only at a frightful social cost and by the enforced migration of millions of people from their homes, and an all-around lowering of the standard of living."

It is interesting to note that in a remarkable review of the German economic situation under Hitler which appeared recently in the New Statesman and Nation, of London, the same conclusion is reached—namely, that in the course of some years Hitler could establish autarchy in Germany, but only at a frightful cost and by the steady deterioration of the standard of living of the entire German people. Russia has shown that this can be done in behalf of its cause, that millions upon millions of people can go living at the bare point of sustenance. Germany, if the enthusiam for Hitler can be kept up, could readily make similar sacrifices. Even we Americans could give up many of our luxuries if we had to do so. But why in heaven's name should the nations cut themselves off from one another? The normal status for the world is trade, full and free. Every barrier preventing the free flow of goods is an injury to innumerable people.

Somehow it is vey hard to visualize Ogden Mills as leading the Republican Party—his personal unpopularity in New York State alone would seem to forbid that. But none the less he should have his due: he is seeking to lead in a party where leadership is dead, and the manner in which he is doing it is really beyond criticism. It will be interesting to see whether others besides James M. Beck will appear to define the opposition policies which the Repubican Party must put forth if it is to continue to exsist or have a reason for exsisting.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth, upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created equal."

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of it as a final resting place for those who died here that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have hallowed it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

It is rather for us, the living, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve these dead shall not have die in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom and that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

WHAT NEXT?

(An Editorial by A. F. Lockhart)

Portsmouth, Ohio, is a small industrial city. It has a population of 43,000 and is situated 100 miles east of Cincinnati.

Last November this city voted on a bond issue to erect a municipal power plant. In 1932 an election on the same issue resulted in a majority of 240 votes against a city-owned plant. But the election held in November, 1933, gave a majority of 2,736 votes against municipal ownership. Here's what happened:

Under the Ohio Corrupt Practices Act it is necessary that both proponents and opponents of any bond election publish a true and accurate statement of all money expended. The public ownership group spent $220. But the American Gas and Electric company, which opposed the issue, admitted spending $10,800 for purely political purposes. In addition to this sum, the power trust admitted it spent $4,555 to transport between 1,200 and 1,500 residents of Portsmouth to Philo a city about 100 miles from Portsmouth, merely to show them the power trust's plant "for promotional purposes." This was a part of the "educational" campaign, but it began shortly before the election.

The power company employtd 263 "canvassers" to make a survey of the town "to ascertain how many were going to vote." The canvassers received from $3 to $500 for this worthy service. In addition to this, the power company hired 100 "challengers" and "witnesses" to watch the balloting and thus make certain an honest election. Exactly $1,775.08 was paid to the one daily paper in Portsmouth for advertising during the campaign. An option was taken on a small weekly paper which had been favorable to public ownership. The option barred this weekly from taking part in the fight.

The power interests payed to both the beer crowd and to the churches. It supplied free beer and a speaker to anyone asking for this combination. It also furnished free gas and light to any church bazaars, chicken pie dinners or other social affairs sponsored by the churches. When one church held a carnival in one of the suburbs the power company circulated cards which stated, "This carnival made possible through the Ohio Power company's donation of electrical power for cooking and lighting. Remember this when voting next November 7."

A week before the election a pamphlet, creditel to the Ohio railway employees, was circulated. The booklet appealed to the voters to vote against a municipal plant on the grounds that the city-owned plant would increase taxes. This appeal was made despite the fact that in Portsmouth—as in St. Paul—the plant was to be selfsustaining with bonds issued against the property and earnings of the plant anl not against the general taxpayers.

When the power trust will go to such lengths to defeat public ownership in a city of 43,000 population it must be assumed that the profits from private ownership of public utilities must be enormous to justify such expenditures. Think it over.

GOVERNOR OISON, A NATURAL BORN HUMANITARIAN

(Country Press, Moorhead)

In a recent statement Governor Olson said, "Tha care of the destitute, is a public obligation and not a private one and must be performed even to exhaustion of all resources of the state and its communities." It is a well known fact that we spent millions of dollars taking care of the starving people of Belgium, Germany and Russia, so why should there be any objection or neglect in taking care of our own destitute people? The bitter and unfair fight put up against the governors bill at the special session of the Minnesota legislature for a relief fund by senator Rockne, long a leader of the state senate, clearly shows the natural makeup of the two men. Rockne's whole career in the state senate clearly shows that he has always cast the question of humenity to the winds and worked his head off for the property rights of the big special millionaire interests of the state, while Governor Olson's career in public life has conclusively shown him to be a natural humanitarian, and a man who has always shown himself to be greatly interested in the welfare of the common people. If there were many more men in the nation of the same character and disposition of Governor Olson, this would be a much better country in which to live. Rockne's persistent underhanded fight against the Governor and his administration has strengthened the popular and high standing of Governor Olson in every community in the state.

BRANCH BANKING

Union Advocate

All through the depression and up to the nation's bank holiday, the state of Maine boasted it had no bank failures. The press of that state pointed with bombastic pride to the fact that it, of all other states, had a benking structure which could weather any financial storm. Then came the national bank holiday, and after it the investigation of all banks as to their solvency and ability to pay back to the depositors the millions intrusted to them. Only sound banks were to be permitted to reopen.

Then the truth came out.

Some years ago a small group of Maine bankers, public utility magnates and industrialista incorporated under the title Financial Institutions, Incorporated. This corporation went out and bought smaller banks at their own price, forcing many to sell under threat of bankruptcy. In time the corporation controlled 40 banks in the state with deposits of one hundred million dollars. The corporation also controlled the newspapers of the state. Hence the favorable publicity concerning the soundness of Maine's chain banks. State bank examiners owed their jobs to the corporation. No doubt some of the national bank examiners got their jobs from the banking trust also. Anyway, the banks which had been given official okays by both the state and national bank examiners for solvency failed to open after an honest examination of the bank books had been made. And some of the high executives in Financial Institutions, Incorporated, are headed straight for the penitententiary.

As long as this banking octopus controlled the press and the politics of the state, it was safe; but when honest examiners made an audit of the books then the fraud and hypocrisy of bankers, utility magnates and politicians was exposed.

Chain banking is receiving a black eye not only in Maine but in Minnesota and wherever branch banking has become a commission racket for the brokers in stocks and bonds. And that is a hopeful sign.

St. Paul—A system of allocation of state relief funds to needy communities throughout Minnesota will be worked out at once as Gov. Floyd B. Olson returned from a conference with federal relief administrators in Washington.

Slayton—Three hundred Murray county farmers, interested in the growing of barley since repeal of the eighteenth amendment, heard proper methods of barley cultivation for sale purposes discussed at an instruction school here.

Minneapolis—With federal deposit insurance contributing substantially to the gain, deposits of banks in Minnesota have increased steadily in recent weeks and now stands at levels probably $20,000,000 higher than those of last fall and well above March 1, 1933, just before the bank holiday.

Minneapolis—A new seed corn yielding an average of ten bushels to the acre more than ordinary farm varieties planted beside it in the same fields, has been developed through years of patient testing and breeding by specialists at University farm, in co-operation with a commercial seed firm.

Pipestone—Approximately $70,000 has been distributed in Pipestone county through activities of the Civil Works and public works administrations. Nearly $38,000 has been expended in CWA work, while over $30,000 was spent on PWA projects. In addition, more than $1,600 was paid to women workers under the CWA

Duluth—The historical Grand Portage trail is going to be restored to near its original condition when used by early trappers and voyageurs to circumvent the unnavigable portions of the Pigeon river. Albert Lea—The farm home of Henry Hartman, a mile east of here, was destroyed by fire. Firemen fought the fire in 17 below zero weather and managed to save all other buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Hartman and four children were all asleep on the second floor of the building when the fire was discovered, escaping in night attire. The family suffered severely from the cold before they arrived at the farm home of Thomas Boyle, nearly a mile away.

St. Paul—Complete silence still surrounded the Edward G. Bremer kidnaping case up to Feb. 6, and the family reiterated its announcement that no further word has been received from the abductors. Mr. Bremer was kidnaped January 17 as he drove between Summit school, where he had left his young daughter, and his office in the St. Paul loop. The same day the kidnapers demanded $200,000 ransom. Since then no word has been received from the kidnaping gang, despite several appeals by the elder Bremer.

The Future of the Minnesota Mississippi River Community

This is the fifth of a series of eight articles dealing with the construction of the nine-foot channel in the Mississippi river.

Let's take a look at a typical river city in Minnesota, and see what are its possibilities for the future. Winona, named for the romantic Indian maiden, site of the famous Sugar Loaf rock, owes its beginning to the river. In the old lumber days, before the northwest was denied of its pine forests, Winona was a flourishing community. The elders residents will tell you how, as youngsters, they could walk clear across the river on logs—and the river was wider than now.

Yet the population of Winona hasn't changed much in more than 40 years. It stays about "as is," though possessing potential resources which should make it one of the largest and most prosperous communities north of St. Louis.

Winona is illustrative of what selfish influences, in times gone by, have done to turn progressive communities into deserted villages. It is one of the principal points of rail crossing on the river, where the North Western, running clear to the Black Hills, could drop millions of bushels of grain for processing warehousing, instead of carrying it east to make truffic for the eastern rail lines.

Why should this grain go to Chicago before being sent east or south? In Chicago there is a switching charge of 10 cents a hundred. If the grain goes there, as it does now, before going south for export out of New Orleans, it must come back 200 miles by the river.

In Winona, wheat could be milled in huge quantities and the flour sent either east by rail or south by barge. Milled in Winona, the farmers would have the advantage of cheap bran and shorts, necessary foodstuffs, without paying the freight to Chicago and back. Yet even the flour milling industry in Winona is not what it once was. Water transportation, on the Great Lakes, brought one foreign market closer. The river will bring it even closer still.

The farming region back of Winona is famous for its purebred dairy cattle, hogs and poultry. It needs, among other things, linseed cake as cattle feed. Sixty three percent of the world's flax-seed is grown in the Argentine, and nearly all of it shipped to the Jersey coast where it is processed in bond and exported to such dairing countries as Belgium and Holland. Rail freight costs to the midwest are almost prohibitive.

Winona quite logically should be a stock feed distributing center, the flaxseed being shipped to New Orleans instead of New Jersey, and then up the river, giving the farmers the benefit of cheap water transportation.

Last year Minnesota used upwards of 25,000 tons of oyster shells as poultry feed. These are loaded directly into barges at Morgan City, La., and shipped north. Winona should be an important distributing center for this product.

Winona uses around 100,000 tons of coal a year and could be a distributing center for a wide territory to the westward. Coal can be shipped to Winona by water for $1 a ton less than by rail. Local authorities declare Winona could build an adequate coal terminal for $7,000. Yet Winona's public school system alone bought 1,565 tons of coal for this year, and at $1 a ton saving this would much more than pay the interest and carrying charges on the terminal.

A few Winona industries already have used the river, and have saved money, even without adequate channel or terminal facilities. If a terminal were installed, as it will be when the nine-foot channel is completed, these benefits would be spread not only throughout Winona, but a vast trading territory served by the city.

Fertilizer is another necessity to Minnesota farmers, potash from Germany, nitrates from Chile and phosphates from Tennessee and Florida. All are bulk cargoes which can be handled cheapest by water. The Tennessee and Florida phosphates are loaded directly into barges from their natural deposits, or mines, and can come all the way by water, either on the Ohio, or by way of the intercoastal canal, and then up the Mississippi.

These fertilizers, however, must be mixed in different proportions to suit different soils. Every farmer can obtain, through his county agent, the exact fertilizer prescription that each field requires. Winona readily became a mixing and processing point for these products.

These are just a few of the advantages which the nine-foot channel will bring to Winona, and through this city to many thousands of citizens to the westward.

BUREAU MEETINGS ARE BEING HELD THROUGHOUT THE STATE

Presidents, secretaries and office assistants of County Farm Bureaus are attending district meetings this month to plan ways in which the Farm Bureau may be of even greater assistance to the membership, and to discuss organization activities. The schedule follows: Mankato, Feb. 7; Owatona, Feb. 8; Lewiston, Feb. 9; Pipstone, Feb 13; Lakefield, Feb. 14; Redwood Falls, Feb. 15; Minneapolis, Feb. 16; St. Cloud, Feb. 19; Aitkin; Feb. 20; Bemidji, Feb. 21; Crookston Feb. 22; Fergus Falls, Feb. 23.

Farm Bureau leaders of the various counties will attend the nearest meeting. A. G. Mereness, director of organization for the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, or J. S. Jones, secretary-treasurer, will attend the meetings.

Meetings held to date indicate that interest in the Farm Bureau and support of its program is at a new high level, due to the Farm Bureau's legislative successes in both its state and national programs and because of the leading part theCounty Farm Bureaus are playing in assisting farmers to get crop reduction funds and federal loans.

MINNESOTA LAND BANK LOANS TOTAL $7,376,000 IN JANUARY

Minnesota farmers numbering 2,824 borrowed $7,376,000 from the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul in January just closed and checks were sent out for that amount, it is disclosed in figures released by the Land Bank. Only once in the history of the bank have Minnesota farmers been granted as large a volume of loans in any one month, December 1933.

The total loans for January, however, made a new record for the Seventh District, exceeding the previous December record, the respective figpres being $18,354,000 and $18,242,000. The January number of farmers who were granted loans also set a monthly record, being 8,366 compared with 7,883 for the previous record month of December.

Commissioner's loans in Minnesota for the month exceeded the number of regular land bank loans, the respective figures being 1,440 and 1,384, a situation that was paralleled in Wisconsin and in Michigan. North Dakota for the month had a greater number of Land Bank loans than of commissioner's loans.

The volume of credit extended uner the commissioner's loans in this state was $2, 260,000 approximately, compared with 5,115,000 in land bank loans.

For the whole district, the number of farmers who got "commissioner's loans" exceeded the number receiving regular Land Bank loans,being respectively, 4,282 and 4,084. This is held to confirm the view frequently expressed by persons connected with the Federal Land Bank, namely that the Commissioner's loan is enabling the Federall Land Bank to be of service to thousands of farmers who could not, under present conditions, qualify for a Land Bank Loan.

Divided as volume, the Land Bank loans, however, exceed those made from the Commissioner's fund, the Land Bank loans totaling $12,827,000 as against $5,785,000 from the Commissioner's fund.

EDWARD BREMER BACK AT HOME

Kidnap Lair is Located by Iowa Authorities Southwest of Creston.

St. Paul—Edward G. Bremer was released by his kidnapers at Rochester, Minn., upon payment of $200,000 ransom by his father, Adolf Bremer. He had been held captive 22 days and 12 hours. In the seclusion of his father's home, he related to police and federal authorities the story of his 22 days in the hands of kidnapers. Still bearing the marks of his experience, in the form of a bandaged head and a bruised knee, Mr. Bremer was reported to be eager to give federal authorities all the information he could. He is confident that the kidnap gang comprised at least 10 or 12 men, because of the different voices he heard as he sat blindfolded in the kidnap hideout. In telling the story of the kidnaping, young Bremer confirmed earlier reports that the abduction had taken place just a few moments after he had dropped his small daughter, Betty, from his car at Summit school on Goodrich avenue. He stopped for an arterial highway, and two men jumped on his car and slugged him, driving off to exchange cars a little later. After a 5 or 6 hour ride to the hangout, he was kept in darkness all the time. It was revealed that the family was in touch with the kidnapers all the time and arrangements were finally made to drop the $200,000 ransom on a lonely road near Faribault. Bremer was released within 24 hours. Bremer is the fifth kidnaping victim in St. Paul during the last two years. The other four and the amount paid for their release, were: Leon Gleckman, $6,400; Morris Putnam, $10,000; Haskell Bohn, $12,000 and William Hamm Jr. $100,000. Several days after Bremer was returned, P. A. Fladley, of the Iowa state bureau of criminal apprehension, notified authorities the house in which the kidnapers held Bremer, was located nine miles from Creston. State and federal police are investigating every clue and it is reported that progress is being made.

CASH FARM INCOME OF STATE UP 20 MILLIONS

Minnesota farmers have received about 20 million dollars more gross cash income in 1933 than they received in the preceding year, according to a preliminary estimate by Dr. Warren C. Waite of the division of agricultural economics, University Farm, St. Paul. Based on sales of the 16 most important farm commodities, Dr. Waite's estimate of gross cash income for 1933 is 185 million dollars as against the preliminary estimate of 165 millions in 1932. The estimated income for this year, however, is only about half the average annual gross cash income of 382 million dollars in the period 1925-1929.

Taxes, interest and other cash expenses of farm operation are estimated at 142 millions, as compared with the estimate of 149 milions for 1932. The average for 1925-1929 was 194 millions. Thus the estimated net cash income for 1933 is 43 millions, 27 millions greater than the 1932 estimate of 16 millions, but less than one-fourth of the average annual net cash income 188 million dollars for the period 1925-1929. The net cash income represents what farmers have available for payment for their own labor and return on capital investment; in other words, for family living and saving.

Reduced to the per-farm average, this year's estimated net cash income will be $248 per farm, as against the 1932 estimate of $92, and the 1925-1929 average of over $1,000.

The 16 principal farm products included in the foregoing estimates are butterfat, hogs, cattle, wheat, eggs, milk, corn, flax, oats, barley, potatoes, calves, chickens hay, rye and lambs-sheep. Cash expenses considered include 20 items; taxes, interest on indebtedness, hired labor, stocker and feeder cattle, hogs and sheep, veterinary charges, stallion fees, threshing, twine, sacks, spray materials, gasoline, auto and truck licenses, machine repairs, building repairs, farm papers, organization fees, insurance, fertilizer and electricity.

ROAD PATROL TRAVELS 3,000,000 MILES DURING YEAR

Minnesota highway patrolmen traveled 3,377,460 miles in 1933, according to an annual report to commissioner N. W. Elsberg by John P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol. Patrolmen gave aid at 905 accidents, assisted 1,028,380 motorists in various way; warned 72,246 drivers of traffic violations; took 417 drivers into custody; tagged 46,781 for use of illegal equipment tagged 8,568 for improper licenses; were instrumental in collecting $47,164 for license corrections and saw $36,321 in fines imposed and a total of 2,273 in sentences ordered.

The patrol showed increases over 1932 in practically every department of its work except in the number of fines. Milage traveled increased from 2,666,682 miles in 1932, or nearly a million. The 1933 total of 3,377,460 mils was an average of 48,349 per patrolman, or almost twice around the world the equator for each man.

Individual cases of assistance to motorists increased from 619,902 in 1932 to 1,028,380 in 1933. This assistance included gasoline delivered to stalled motorists, garages called for motorists in trouble, minor adjustments on motor vehicles, tires changed, cars started, cars removed from ditches, road information given, children assisted across highways, directions given, first aid to injured and obstacles removed from highways.

Warnings given to motorists violating traffic laws almost doubled in 1933 over the previous year as non-arrest correctional work gained in efficiency. There were 38,139 such warnings given in 1932, as compared to 72,246 in 1933.

License inspectors of the patrol collected $76,532 in 1933 in addition to the $47,164 collected through regular patrol officers for license violations.

WARN AGAINST UNFAIR HOG PRICE DEDUCTIONS

A warning to farmers that local hog buyers and small processors in several sections of the country, purchasing live hogs for commercial slaughter, are reported to be deducting the whole or part of the amount of the processsing tax from the regular market price quoted to the seller has been issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and copies have been received by Andrew Boss, directing the corn-hog campaign in Minnesota.

Secretary Wallace says that country buyers and others who, in settling for hogs with the seller, make a deduction for the processing tax on the bill of sale are penalizing the seller and are tending to frustrate the declared policy of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Farmers are urged not to sell to any buyer who makes proposes to make any such deduction. Names of hog purchasers following this practice, together with full particulars on individual cases, should be forwarded to Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington, D. C. The Administration will use all powers under the law to prevent fraudulent practices in connection with the collection of processing taxes.

The administration points out that country buyers who deduct the tax from the price offered farmers and who then resell the live hogs to another person or processor, simply are taking advantage of the farmer in order to realize a larger profit on the shipment.

ANTI MILITARISTS SEND QUESTIONAIRE ON WAR TO NATION'S CLERGYMEN

A group of nationally-known anti-militarists is sending out questionaires to over 100,000 clergymen thruout the nation requesting them to answer a series of questions on war and peace, economics and politics. It is expected that at least 20,000 replies will be received. A summary will be released to the press of the nation about May 2nd according to the announcement.

The group suggests that Monday May 7th be devoted to a nation-wide study of the opinions, of these 20,000 or more Clergymen and to the formulating of a more adequate campaign of action.

FARM CREDIT UNITS WILL MOVE INTO SINGLE BUILDING

All permanent units of the Farm Credit Administration will move into a single building within the next 30 days, according to an announcement by General Agent Leo. T. Crowley at St. Paul this week.

This is being undertaken for the double purpose of increasing efficiency of all units and cutting down the expence. Mr. Crowley estimates that there will be an annual saving of approximately $70,000 by the concentration. The building that has been leased for the purpose is the Great Northern-Northern Pacific and former First National Bank building only one block from the new post office that is nearing completion.

The units affected will be: the Federal Land Bank, Intermediate Credit Bank, Production Credit Corporation, regional Bank for Co-operatives, and the offices of the general agent. These are now housed in 4 different buildings and communication is carried on by messengers whenever it is necessary for transference of records, files etc. Both messenger service and telephone service will be reduced and expedited by concentration on three floors of the designated new quarters. Alternations are now in progress.

Units that will not be affected will be the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, located in Minneapolis, and the Crop Production Loan office, also in Minneapolis, both of which organizations will ultimately be superceded by permanent units.

ST. PAUL TAXPAYER SAYS FREE LICENSE IS MISTAKE

P. A. Beckjord, president of the Midway Club of St. Paul, has refused to accept free drivers licenses for his wife and five children on the grounds that "It is rediculous to expect the state to issue seven licenses for 25 cents."

He so notified the drivers license division of the highway department.

"If our legislators really believe that the licensing of drivers is for the purpose of making our highways safer," said Mr. Beckjord, "the law must be changed so that sufficient revenue is available to provide adequate enforcement of the measure. Every driver should pay for his own individual license and there should be provision for renewal of licenses."

MINNESOTANS GET IMPORTANT POSTS IN POLICY STUDY

Minnesota opinion and judgment are going to play an important part in the findings of two commissions that have been set up to find facts that may play a big part in the formation of certain policies by the United States.

Supported by national foundations, the Social Science Research Council has created a Commission of Inquiry on Public Service Personnel, making President L. D. Coffman of the University of Minnesota its chairman. It also has created a Commission of Inquiry on National Policy in International Economic Relations. On the second, Dean Guy Stanton Ford of the Minnesota graduate school holds membership, its secretary and professional economist is Professor A. H. Hansen, also of Minnesota, and among its fact finders is Arthur Upgren, instructor in economics.

While not government in fact, both commissions are said to have the sanction and approval of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Their findings should have an important bearing on future government policy.

For years the knowledge has been general that an increasing number of persons were on public payrolls, whether of the federal, state, municipal, county or smaller government unit. The Commission on Public Service Personnel will make a detailed study of this situation, covering the entire country and the entire range of public employment. It is important that public service be administered and manned both honestly and efficiently for, as a statement says, "There are about two and one-half million people working for the federal government, for the states, and for the local units of government, including the schools, but not counting those who are at work on emergency unemployment relief. About one-third of these are federal employees; a little more than one-third are school teachers, approximately one forth are employed by cities, counties, villages and towns; state employees make up the balance, of about 8 percent."

The Commission on National Policy in International Economic Relations will also take evidence and conduct reseaches in all parts of the country, holding hearings in many principal cities. Tariffs and other policies affecting imports, agricultural produce tion and export policies, foreign loans, interest payments from abroad, exchange rates, and many other matters that affect international economic relations, will be examined.

The impartial and non-governmental commision of inquiry is an instrument of fact finding for national policy determination that has been much used abroad, particularly in England, but that is new to the United States.

FLARES ORDERED FOR SCHOOL BUSSES ON STATE HIGHWAYS

Letters have gone out from the office of the state director of rural education, ordering all school busses using the state highways to be equipped with emergency flares and flags for the protection of school children and traffic.

The order went to all county superintendents of schools and to the heads of 418 consolidated school districts of the state, according to notice received by the highway patrol. Flares must be set in front, to the side of vehicles standing on the highways at night. Flags are used in the daytime.

Trucks and buses generally which use the state highways are now required to carry flares and flags for use in case of a breakdown. In the past many serious accidents have resulted from vehices stalling on the highways and being left standing without proper warning signals.

Farmer-Labor Press Service

by Senator Henry G. Teigan

The 1934 Farmer-Labor Convention will be held at the St. Paul Auditorium on March 27 next, according to the call just issued by the State Executive Board of the Farmer-Labor Association.

The convention's duties will consist of the adoption of a platform, and the indorsement of candidates for state and congressional offices. Unlike the old political parties, the convention itself will formulate a platform and select its candidates. Republican and Democratic conventions merely ratify the plans of their political bosses who have the ground thoroughly prepared before their conventions meet.

Delegates From County Organizations

Delegates will be chosen by the county organizations. Each organization, under the constitution of the association, is entitled to as many delegates as the vote for governor at the last preceding general election will justify. That is to say, each county is entitled to one delegate at large, and one additional delegate for each one thousand votes or major fraction thereof cast for the Farmer-Labor nominee for governor at that election.

The convention held on March 27 will undoubtedly be the largest in the history of the party. There are today active dues-paying organizations in all but six counties of the state, and, in all probability, these six counties too will be organized in time to participate in the county conventions which must be held on or before March 13.

Representation Provided

The provisions of the call are all set forth in a letter addressed to chairmen and secretaries of all Farmer-Labor county associations. The letter reads in part as follows:

"You will note that all dues-paying members in the county shall be delegates to the county convention. In addition to these members in the county convention. In addition to the county convention. In addition to these members, every unorganized township, village or other subdivision in your county is entitled to two delegates in the county convention, but, provided that all delegates to the state convention must be members of the Farmer-Labor Association, either by direct affiliation in the local or county units, or through membership in labor unions or farmers economic organizations.

"The state committee adopted this representation for county conventions after considerable thought and consideration. Many counties are only particially organized; the movement has grown rapidly and will need from two to four years more before the counties will sufficiently well organized to insist that each and every delegate to the county convention be a dues-paying member. However, it is deemed necessary that no portion of our rank and file movement shall be denied representation in the formation of the principles and platform of the movement or in the selection of candidates for office to put such platform in operation

County Convention March 13

"County conventions should be held on or before March 13. The county officers are hereby instructed to notify all dues-paying members of the county convention. Also to personally, or by delegating someone in each township in which there are no dues-paying members, arrange a meeting for the purpose of selecting two delegates from the township to attend the county convention.

"When meetings are called in townships with no dues-paying members, every effort should be made to secure a sufficient number of people, who are willing to become members, to form a local club. Pointing out to them that all of those who become members will be delegates to the county convention. Campaign work will be started in the near future and it will be a great advantage to have contact with local township chairmen in carrying on the work in an organized and efficient manner.

"If you have not adopted county by-laws, this should be done at the county meeting. Also where the county organization has not been completed as to the selection of officers, an executive committee, or other committeee, this may be done at this time."

This letter is signed by Miss Welby Secretary of the State Farmer-Labor Association.

All county organizations are urged to hold their conventions under the plan provided for in the call so that every section of the state may be properly represented at the state convention.

ECONOMY

You have repeatedly been told about the economy in the New Ford V-8 during 1933 which to some people is thought exaggerating so we quote you an example of a trip made by four local men the first part of October 1933 in a 1933 V-8 Standard Tudor

The four occupants of the car were Carl Wennberg, Geo. Baken, Rudolph Sagmoen, and Ardell Robinson. 3,700 miles were made on this trip which took them through the large cities of Chicago, Albany, New York, the Twin Cities, Buffalo, Baltimore, Niagara Falls, Washington, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Schenectady at which points many sight seeing tours were made with considerable stopping and starting. They also drove through the Alaghany mountains.

On the open road they travelled as fast as 85 miles per hour and averaged 60 miles miles per hour. In spite of this high speed they averaged 18 miles per gallon, added no oil between each 1,000 miles, added no water on the entire trip and at no time out of high gear. This is not a guess figure as an accurate record was kept for the purpose of dividing the expense. The above participants of the trip will verify these figures if necessary. This gives you an idea of the remarkable economy that can be obtained with the New Ford V-8 driven at a moderate speed. The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is more economical due to dual Carburation and Dual Intake Manifold which according to tests will give you 2 1-2 miles more per gallon.

We would like to give you more facts about the 1934 Ford. Immediate deliveries can be made.

Robin Tells Why

By FRAN BEVERLY

PATTERSON sat down in the semi-darkness of his library and prepared to listen alone, for the last time to the voice he loved best in all the world. After that, when he had heard each record, he would destroy them all.

An hour previously he had posted the letter to Dorothy Dunbar, asking her to become his wife. The die was already cast and he would henceforth endeavor to put dreams of his boyhood sweetheart completely from his life; but not before he had heard once again each of her glorious songs.

It seemed but yesterday—though a full fifteen years had passed—that he and Sally Pendleton had wandered arm in arm through the sweet-smelling country lanes and he had pleaded with her to marry him. She was seventeen but she had announced her intention to become a great singer and had refused to marry him.

"I know as well as if it were written on the sands," she had told him, "that if we marry now I will utterly fail to carry out my ideals in music. If you will wait for me—I will love no one but you."

But Patterson in his immature reasoning and the impatience of youth had turned from her. He wanted her then or not at all. If she loved her voice better than she loved him she must choose her own way.

Of course, Patterson knew of Sally Pendleton's success as all the world did. But he knew not where she was nor would he have followed had he known. She was somewhere in the world singing, but not in his part of the world. He knew now that he had committed a great folly in his youth; he had been ungenerous, small, jealous.

However, Dorothy Dunbar was a sweet woman, and no doubt they would be tremendously happy.

Sally's songs at seventeen had been, "Won't You Tell Me Why, Robin?" "In the Gloaming," "The Lost Chord," "Ye Banks and Braes," and Patterson had managed to secure them all for his talking machine.

He was so deep in his dreams and so regretful of their imminent passing that he was only half-conscious that a voice, not that of the machine, was singing through, "Won't You Tell Me Why, Robin?"

Patterson's heart beat rapidly and he gripped the arms of his chair in a tensity of emotion he had not known for years. For Patterson's name was Robin and the emotion in that voice told him that Sally Pendleton was in the same building calling to him.

He must go.

Down the elevator he went and swiftly to the office of the apartment house to make inquiry. A lady had arrived during the afternoon, yes—her name was not, however, Pendleton.

Patterson's heart sank. Was it then not his Sally? Or worse still was it Sally and was she married? He could not contemplate the thought and rushed off to the rooms mentioned by the clerk.

She opened the door to her suite of rooms and Patterson found himself speechless with emotion.

"Robin—Robin Adair," she cried, using the old pet name.

"My Sally," was all Patterson could say, and the Sally was in his arms and she was trembling and Patterson could only hold her close.

"Then it was you—listening to my voice?" she asked presently. "It doesn't seem possible. The great hand of fate—isn't it, Robin?" Her voice was unsteady.

"I have listened to your voice ever since the first record came out, and in my soul—I have heard it—before that."

She was leading him into the spacious sitting room. "And now tell me everything. I am hungry to hear you talk. I sneaked into the country under an assumed name so that I might have a few months away from my public—they demand so much of me."

"You are not married?"

She looked wistfully at him. "I told you fifteen years ago I would always love you, Robin."

Suddenly Robin realized the terror of the situation. His letter of proposal to Dorothy was even then in her hands—no doubt she was writing him her answer and Patterson knew it would be "yes."

"Sally, my own," he said swiftly, "I have had no one in the depths of my heart sleeping or waking for fifteen years, and now, now when I had given up hope of your seeking me out, I have asked another girl to marry me. I have never wanted to seek you because I felt too unworthy and small. Now I know I have been a first-class idiot. I shall love you always."

Sally was struggling to keep from crying out, but in a moment she smiled.

"Robin, my dear. There is no power to keep true lovers apart in the spirit, and I feel certain that fate will in some way give us to each other."

"You were always faithful, Sally—I—" Robin dived into the depths of his pocket for the inevitable cigarette that he felt he must have under stress and suddenly his face went a dull crimson—a triumphant crimson, however. He drew forth an envelope, it was stamped and addressed. "Sally I didn't post it!"

LOWLY ONION IS GIVEN BIG HAND

Makes Its Presence Felt in Many Dishes.

By EDITH M. BARBER

I shall devote this column to a eulogy of the humble onion. How sorry I feel for people who do not like—or think they do not like—its pungent flavor! How much interest it adds to less flavorful foods! Some one accused me once of putting onion in every dish I made except ice cream.

That is a slight exaggeration but I must admit that a tiny dash of onion goes into many of the dishes I prepare for a main course, a hors d'oeuvre, a soup, or a salad. I must also confess that I do not always include this extra seasoning in these same recipes when I give them to you. I try to restrain myself from overproduction of this seasoning in print, but it is a different thing when I get into the kitchen. Of course the onion flavoring must be used with discretion.

A few drops of onion juice, which, by the way, is easily obtained by pressing the center of an onion with a spoon, will be an addition to any dish or sauce of delicate flavor. It will give it an illusive quality which you will not be able to define. An example of this use is with a Bernaise sauce, with creamed mushrooms, with the well-known "white sauce" or with a vegetable souffle.

I have found that people who are famous or "infamous" for their proclaimed dislike of the onion seasoning, will eat such dishes with outspoken relish. The undisguised onion, however, has innumerable uses both as seasoning for meats and stuffings and for its presence not as an accessory but as a headliner to a meal. Perhaps the most famous example of this is onion soup with cheese, which has made the fame of several French restaurants.

Then there are buttered baked onions which, when cooked in a covered casserole, develop a beautiful brown color and—figuratively speaking—flavor which is so delicious. The glazed onions, which combine the apparently antagonistic flavor of sugar with the tang of the onion, are particularly good with some meat dishes. Creamed and scalloped onions, which are standbys to almost every household, may be varied by the addition of a few boiled chestnuts. Do try these if it is a new idea to you. Then, like all other vegetables which are large enough to take a stuffing, onions filled with buttered bread crumbs by themselves or mixed with any minced meat give us another variation.

And what about fried onions which are so closely associated in our minds with broiled steak or fried liver? They have a bad reputation so far as digestibility is concerned, but if you want to get all the flavor, and take care of this point, after they are fried to a nice golden brown sprinkle them with flour, stir until this is well-blended with the butter, then add milk and stir until the sauce is smooth and thick, you will have all the flavor of the fried onion with none of the disadvantages. And I wonder if you have ever combined apples and onions for frying? You might also try shredded carrots and onions baked together.

French fried onions are not as well known as the common fried onion. For these you must select even-sized sweet onions and cut them into rings. There will be some waste from the center of the onion but you can easily use this for flavoring another dish.

Quick Onion Soup.

3 slices bread
0 medium-sized onions
3 tablespoons butter
1 quart soup stock or
5 bouillon cubes and
1 quart water
½ cup grated or strained cheese

Slice onions and brown in butter. Add soup stock and bring to a boil. Put in casserole. Slice bread ½ inch thick, cut in halves and toast lightly. Float on top of soup and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in hot oven, 500 degrees Fahrenheit, 10 minutes or until cheese melts.

Stuffed Onions.

1 quart medium onions
1 cup soft bread crumbs or bread crumbs and minced leftover meat
Salt
Pepper
Butter

Parboil onions and remove part of center, leaving the root end intact. Fill cavity with equal parts of onion, just removed, bread crumbs and bits of cooked meat, seasoned with salt and pepper and moistened with melted butter. Place the onions close together in a greased baking dish and pour one-fourth cup of water around them and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, until browned.

French Fried Onions.

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
2 tablespoons oil
1 egg white
10 or 12 large onions
Milk

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add water, beat until smooth; add oil. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Slice onions one-eighth inch thick. Separate into rings. Reserve small rings for other use. Soak in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in batter and fry in deep oil at 395 degrees Fahrenheit until light brown. Drain on soft paper.
